NASHVILLE, TENN., Sept. 25, 1864.

Proclamation by Jeff Davis.

The War to Continue.

The Newbern correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette furnishes that paper with the following:

NEWBERN, N. C., April 11.—I clip from the Daily Confederate, of the 7th, published at Raleigh, N. C., the following synopsis of the latest edict of poor King Jeff, the fugitive. The message is dated at Danville:

"The General-in-chief found it necessary to make such movements of his troops as to uncover the Capital. It would be unwise to conceal the moral and material injury to our cause resulting from the occupation of our capital by the enemy. It is equally unwise and unworthy of us to allow our own energies to falter and our efforts to become relaxed under reverses, however calamitous they may be.

For many months the largest and finest army of the Confederates, under the command of leaders whose presence inspires equal confidence in the troops and the people, has been greatly trammelled by the necessity of keeping a constant watch over the approach of the Capitol, and has been forced to forego more than one opportunity for promising enterprise. It is for us, my countrymen, to show by our bearing under reverses how wretched has been the self-deception of those who have believed us less able to undergo misfortune with fortitude than to encounter danger with courage. We have now entered upon a new phase of the struggle. Believed from the necessity of guarding particular points, our army will be free to move from point to point and to strike the enemy in detail far from his base. Let us but will it, and we are free.

Animated by that confidence in spirit and fortitude which never yet failed me, I announce to you, fellow-countrymen, that it is my purpose to maintain your cause with my whole heart and soul; that I will never consent to abandon to the enemy one foot of the soil of any one of the States of the Confederacy; that Virginia, the noble State whose ancient renown has been eclipsed by her still more glorious recent history; whose bosom has been dared to receive the main shock of this war; whose sons and daughters have exhibited a heroism so sublime as to render her illustrious in all time to come; that Virginia with the help of the people, and by the blessings of Providence, shall be held and defended, and no peace ever be made with the infamous invaders of her homes by the sacrifice of any of her rights of territory.

If by the stress of numbers we should ever be compelled to a temporary withdrawal from her limits, or those of any other border State, again and again will we return, until the baffled and exhausted enemy shall abandon in despair his endless and impossible task of making slaves of a people resolved to be free.

Let us then not despair, my countrymen, but relying on God, let us meet the foe with fresh defiance, and with unsurpassed and unconquerable hearts.

Speech of Vice Admiral Farragut.

[Correspondence of the Evening Post.]

NORFOLK, Va., April 8, 1865.

The news of the fall of Richmond awakened here as lively an excitement as in any of the more northern cities. Among the federal soldiers stationed here the intelligence was received with special favor and cheers; bonfires and congratulations were the order of the day and night.

Four years ago Admiral Farragut was compelled by the rebels to leave Norfolk, but last week he returned, and when his presence became known the citizens gave him an enthusiastic public reception at Glenn's Theatre. W. T. Harrison presided, and General Gordon and his staff were present. An address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Charles H. Porter, of the Union League Committee, and the Admiral responded as follows:

SPEECH OF ADMIRAL FARRAGUT.

"Mr. Chairman, gentlemen of the Union League, fellow citizens, and my brother officers of the army and navy—I thank you for the kind remarks which you have been pleased to make, and I wish that I had the language to express myself as I have heard others very near me four years ago, in this place, when we had our best speakers standing forth for the Union and striving with all their rhetoric to persuade the people to desist from their unholy resolution, and cast their votes for the Union.

"This meeting recalls to me the most momentous events of my life, when I listened in this place till the small hours of the morning, and returned home, with the feeling that Virginia was safe and firm in her place in the Union. Our Union members to the Convention were elected by an overwhelming majority, and sent to Richmond, and we believed that everything was right. Judge then, my friends, of our astonishment in finding a few days later, that the state had been voted out by a miserable minority for the want of firmness and resolution on those whom we trusted to represent us there, and that Virginia had been dragooned out of the Union. What was the reason of this act? The President's proclamation for seventy-five thousand men! Why, all the arsenals, navy yards, all forts except Pickens and Sumter, mint at New Orleans, money in the treasury, and Sumter besieged, was had been seized by the Union, unmanned. Was it then to be expected that the government of the United States would call for troops to sustain itself? Would Jackson have submitted to this? No; for I recollect that I myself had the honor to be sent to South Carolina to support his mandate that the Union must and should be preserved. (Great cheers.)

"I was told by a brother officer that the State had seceded, and that I must either resign and turn traitor to the government which had supported me from childhood, or I must leave this place—thank God I was not long in making my decision. (Loud cheers.) I have spent half of my life in revolutionary countries, and I know the horrors of civil war, and I told the people what I had seen, and what they would experience. They laughed at me, and called me 'granny,' and 'croaker.' (laughter.) and I said I cannot live here, and will seek some other place where I can live, and in two hours' notice, and as I suppose the conspirators said, I left for my country's good, and thank God I did." (Immense cheering.)

"I went from here with the few valuables I could hastily collect. I was unwilling to believe that this difficulty would not have been settled, but it was all in vain, and as every man must do in a revolution, as he puts his foot down, so it marks his life; so it has pleased God to protect me thus far and make me somewhat instrumental in dealing heavy blows at the rebellion. (Cheers.) I have been nothing more than an instrument in the hands of God, well supported by my officers and men, who have done their duty faithfully. I hope, my friends, that this day, with its events, may prove the culminating point of our revolution, and I hope that before long all will be restored to that peace and reunion which has been sought by the government and desired by everybody, and then you gentlemen who have deserved so well of your country by your steady adherence to its government, will receive the reward which fidelity and honesty and moral courage always deserve." (Loud and long continued applause.)

Auction Sale
Of Building Lots in the City of Johnsonville.
On THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY, May 11th, 12th and 13th, we will offer for sale up the river, a large number of Building Lots in the thriving and promising
Town of Johnsonville,
a published plan of which can be seen at our office, and at the principal Hotels, and other public places, in this city. Being eligibly located, on the East Bank of the Tennessee river, 120 miles from its mouth, and at the terminus of the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad, a distance of 32 miles from that City; surrounded, as it is, by a rich and productive country, and being in almost constant river communication with many of the most important commercial cities of the North and Southwest, and, at no distant day, become a city of vast business importance. Such an opportunity for a safe and profitable investment, is but seldom offered. We are the sole agents for the sale of lots, and are fully authorized and empowered to grant titles to purchasers.
The Nashville and North-Western Railroad will be thoroughly repaired in the course of a few days, when regular trips will be made between this city and Johnsonville. A liberal trade permit has been granted.
We will also offer at the same time about 900 acres of rich and heavily timbered land, lying in the immediate vicinity of the town.

IODINE
As a remedial agent has long been in use, and its virtues are familiar to all.
PARKER'S
IODINISED OIL, OR IODINE LINIMENT,
is so prepared, that while all the benefits to be derived from the use of Iodine are not only preserved but greatly enhanced, by the addition of other excellent ingredients, the unpleasant discoloration of the skin consequent upon the use of Iodine, either in the form of a tincture or an ointment, is entirely avoided.
As Proprietors of this article we feel warranted in saying, that as a ready remedy for all the ailments wherein a good Liniment is required, this preparation cannot be surpassed.
For Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Ring Worm, or any Eruption of the skin, it is a Specific Remedy.
It cures Sprains or Bruises;
It cures Sore Throat;
It cures Headache or Toothache;
It cures Neuralgia;
It cures Chapped Hands;
Or Rough Skin;
It cures Corns
Or Bunions;
It cure Sore
Nipples or Caked
Breast.
Each day the testimony of those who are using it bears evidence to its efficacy. As an application for Horses nothing can be better. It is now being used in almost all the Livery Stables in St. Louis, and in a majority of them has superseded the use of any other Liniment. Prepared only by WM. B.
