The New York Commercial Advertiser says:

The gold market exhibits a drooping tendency, and opinion is very much divided as to the future course of the premium. The late Government sales have undoubtedly produced a temporary over-supply, which partially depresses the premium; at the same time, the credit of the Government is steadily improving, at home and abroad, which has a tendency above all other considerations, to keep down the price of gold. On the other hand, we must have a large demand for gold for our customs, not only during the present spring, but most probably for many months to come. It would appear inevitable that our importations must be large for the Fall business, from the fact that domestic producers are not able to compete with foreign. Prices of commodities, at New York, now rule about 25 per cent higher in gold value, than in 1860, and they have a strong support in the fact that the wages, estimated in gold, average about 30 per cent. over those paid in that year.

Under such a condition of affairs, foreign manufacturers will be able to sell their products here at a profit, while our own makers lose upon their operations. Of course, there must be an ultimate equalization, but that result will be delayed partially by the comparative scarcity of labor resulting from the war, and partially by the disturbing agitation among the working classes for a limitation of labor to eight hours per day—a demand which has been conceded to, in some cases, and to which employers appear likely to be compelled, in 1866 more cases, to submit.

This condition of affairs is not only sure to be attended with a large demand for gold for customs, but may also be accompanied with a demand for export, both of which causes will counteract the downward tendency in the premium arising for an improvement of the public credit.

Nor is it to be overlooked that the high price of commodities will tend to limit our exportation of produce, in payment for our large imports.

A Bloody Duel.

A correspondent at Columbia, Arkansas, sends us an account of a tragic affair which occurred near that place on the 28th of February. We are not sufficiently acquainted with the circumstances which led to the barbarous combat to state them with accuracy, but it seems that one Major Ned Burns, formerly a member of the rebel General John Morgan's command, and a Colonel Twyman, also an officer in the Confederate army, had some personal difficulty which ended in a challenge to settle the matter according to the rules established in the "code of honor," so called. The place selected for the settlement of the dispute was Point Chicot, a secluded spot upon the Mississippi river. The weapons used were bowie knives, and the duel was nothing more nor less than a savage butchery. Major Burns was wounded in the arm, and Colonel Twyman received three wounds in the body, which are thought to be mortal. The latter was also severely injured in the face, his nose being completely severed, and one of his eyes so injured as greatly to impair, if not entirely destroy his sight. The Colonel's second was slightly wounded by a thrust from Major B. We understand that all the parties to this outrageous and disgraceful proceeding reside in Mississippi.—Memphis Post.

A White Woman Brutally Assaulted by Negroes.

Between nine and ten o'clock yesterday morning a most fiendish and horrible outrage was perpetrated on the family of Mr. Paine, who resides about two and one half miles out on the new Raleigh road. It appears that Mr. Paine left his home early in the morning to endeavor to procure some laborers to work on his place, and left his wife and two small children, one four months and the other between two and three years of age, alone in the house, with the exception of the negro girl, who was sick. Shortly after his departure two negro ruffians entered the house and demanded of Mrs. Paine her money and valuables. Being frightened by the peremptory manner in which the demand was made, she attempted to rush from the room when they closed the door to prevent her escape. One of the brutes then knocked the infant from her arms and struck her to the floor, jumping upon her and left her bleeding and senseless. In the meantime the other ruffian was engaged in ransacking the premises for what valuables he could find; the older child was also brutally kicked and knocked down. The negro girl hearing the disturbance rushed in and seeing her mistress lying apparently dead upon the floor in a gore of blood, went screaming from the house, whereupon the ruffians fled. Dr. Jones was called in and found the lady very severely injured, her face completely mangled by the heels of the miscreants, and her body fearfully bruised. Although her condition is critical and exceedingly dangerous, it is hoped that she will recover. The infant is also badly injured. Up to the present there has been no trace discovered that would lead to the detection of the murderous wretches, notwithstanding every effort has been made to discover the course they have taken.—Memphis Bulletin of March 9th.

Chancery Land Sale.

BY virtue of a decree of the Chancery Court at Carthage, Tennessee, in the cause of Van H. Allen vs. James S. Bradley, et als; Wm. Chambers vs. James S. Bradley, et als; Henry Stanford vs. Jas. S. Bradley, et als; John McGuire, et als, vs. James S. Bradley et als, Logan McCarver vs. James S. Bradley, et als; and A. Moore, for use of J. Higbee's heirs, vs. McClarty, et als, I will sell to the highest bidder, on a credit of one and two years—except two hundred dollars to be paid in cash—at the Court house door, in Carthage, on the 10th day of February, 1866, a certain Tract of Land, on which said defendant, Bradley, now resides, in Smith county, (1st) District No. 4, containing about (800) five hundred acres. Said land lies on the turnpike road leading from Carthage to Dixon's Springs, about one mile from the latter place. It is a splendid farm, almost entirely enclosed, well stone fencing, well watered and timbered, and is a most desirable locality of this th county. Said land may be divided and sold in two or more tracts, if deemed advisable on the day of sale. Sold land will be sold without the right of redemption. Bonds with approved security required, and a lien retained for the purchase money.
