The Country Club.

The Country club Wednesday afternoon and evening attracted hundreds of members and their guests, who enjoyed the prettiest out-door affair of the season.

The arrangement of the grounds and the natural beauty of the place make it an ideal spot for such affairs, and the scene was most brilliant.

Mrs. Clement gave a dinner on the lawn, preceding the Sturgis dance, to about fifty friends. The affair, like all that Mrs. Clement gives, was distinctly original, and the perfect evening made the function a complete success. The tables were placed on the lawn back of the clubhouse, where the delightful dinner was served. The tables were decorated with pink sweet peas and carnations, and the trees surrounding were hung with Chinese lanterns.

After the dinner the guests enjoyed the dancing. Mrs. S. D. Sturgis was the hostess, and her idea of making it visitors' night made it the most popular affair ever given at the club. A large number danced until after midnight, to the delightful music of the Twelfth Infantry band.

Coffee and ices were served during the evening.

The Ballad of the Rail.

The efforts of the railroads to forbid kissing at the depots have been unsuccessful.—Railroad Report.

Now by the lips of those ye love, fair gentlemen,
be brave,

And damned be he eternally, the piteous railroad knave!

Go, leave the Summer widower his single tie to life—

And ere he watch the engine start, 'tis his to kiss his wife.

And if the damsel or the frau be not his own,
indeed,

'Tis not for heartless railroad men to ask for marriage screed.

So shout ye for your privilege, the ripe red lips of her

Who of created womanhood you happen to prefer!
'Tis not for corporations to dally with your loves,

And schedule time and coupon clips go ill with darts and doves.

So glory to the gallant men who flung the fiat down.

Kiss! Kiss! and straightway kiss again, and spurn the railroad frown.

advice has nobody to blame for his trouble but
