The Japanese at Home.

U. S. STEAM FRIGATE NIAGARA, Yeddo Harbor, Japan, Nov. 13, 1860.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

I have only time to address you a few lines, stating that we have arrived safely and landed the Embassy without one mishap. Under the brightest of skies, early on the morning of the 10th, the Japanese Government sent a fleet of small boats to land them—Uncle Sam's having been declined. All hands were busy getting up the baggage and whipping it over the sides into the boats; one half was only taken on this day, which seemed to be enough for forty Embassies.

At about 11 o'clock, everything being safely over, and the fifty-six attendants going click, click, up and down the port gangway into the boats provided for them, they shoved off. The ship was now quiet, and looked quite deserted on deck, but below a quantity of saki and dried fish was being consumed by the officers, waited upon by the Japanese Ambassadors. At length the time arrived for them to say good-bye, which was an affecting scene with some of them.

The officers were all assembled on the quarter-deck, in undress uniform, with side arms—the marines drawn up, and the yards were manned. Simme-Buzen-No-Kami, first Prince, led the party, shaking hands with each officer as he passed, and most of them were shaken very hard. Among the Japanese officers I saw tears trickle down their faces; the artist was most affected. The most profound silence prevailed during their departure, until the salute was fired, and the band struck up "Home, Sweet Home;" after which the port rigging was manned and three heavy cheers were given; to this the Ambassadors waived their fans and stood erect in their boats. They were received on shore without ceremony, and proceeded quietly to their homes.

The President's letter has been delivered to the Tycoon, and he is delighted with it. An invitation has been extended to him, through Mr. Harris, to visit the ship; if he comes, it will be a thing unheard of before. Many of the high officers of the Goverdment, however, are coming in a few days. A reception of the Niagara's officers by the Prime Minister, I understand is now progressing, and will come off in a day or two. In the meantime, horses, sedan chairs, officers, attendants, and so on, are at our disposal, free of expense.

We are quartered in a magnificent temple, and have every thing we could wish for to make us comfortable, with the exception of knives and forks—chop-sticks being used instead. The Embassy have been received by their Government in the most enthusiastic manner, and I have been informed by our Minister that they are now ready to send Embassies in the order that they have made the treaties with other countries.

A place is now being prepared for the reception of the presents sent out by our Government, but they are so slow to move, and so much ceremony must be gone through with, that I should not be surprised if we were detained here a month. When this Embassy embarked in the Powhattan, their friends had bidden them good-bye for ever, believing that they never would survive the heat of crossing the equator.

It is quite cold here, the thermometer at 35 deg. above.

The Prussian Minister is here, living on shore, but, as yet, has not succeeded in making a treaty.

I am sorry to say that there was a mysterious disappearance of spoons, forks, blankets, &c., belonging to Uncle Sam, which was used by the Embassy. Everything that was not screwed fast seems to have been taken. Let it go. After spending nearly a million of dollars on them, I suppose they think it no harm to take everything that is left. It is rumored that a number of presents are being prepared for some of our officers; but I imagine from what has already come off in the eating line, they will not amount to much.

A walk or a ride on horseback through the streets of Yeddo is amusing. We are great curiosities, and at the end of every square an immense crowd is shut off by the gates across the street, when another one commences, and by the time we reach the next corner, it is swelled to an enormous size. Policemen, who go before us to clear the way, are relieved every two squares. The streets are, as a general thing, clean, but the houses are poor wooden shanties, with tubs of water upon every other one in case of fire. The new palace of the Tycoon is progressing finely, and will be a handsome building when completed. We have not seen a single man of the Embassy, up to this time, since they landed; everything is done through an entirely different set of officers. They said they intended to come off and bid us good bye, but I doubt it very much.

This letter goes by clipper ship to Hong Kong direct, and I have scrawled it down in a very few moments, only saying enough to give you an idea how things are going.

"SIONARA."

THE NEW FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.—The following is a synopsis of the new Fugitive Slave Law submitted in the Senate, on Monday, by Mr. Douglas.

Section one provides that the demand by a Governor of the State or Territory for the surrender of a fugitive from justice shall be made upon a Judge of any Federal Court in the State or Territory where the fugitive has taken refuge, instead of being made on the Governor, as by the Act of 1793, which was rendered mandatory by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Prigg vs. Pennsylvania. It is also provided that the words "treason, felony and other crimes" shall be construed to include all offences committed within and against the State or Territory making the demand, whether the acts charged were criminal or not in the State where the fugitive was found.

Section two provides for giving the fugitive slave a jury trial in the State or Territory from which he fled.

Section three provides that when, through violence or intimidation, a fugitive shall not be recovered, the owner may bring suit for and recover the value in the Court of claims, the amount to be paid from the United States Treasury, the Solicitor thereof to bring suit, in the name of the United States, against the County, city or municipality, where the recovery was prevented, for the amount paid for such fugitive.

Section four repeals all offensive parts of the Act of 1850, in respect to harboring and protecting fugitives, and to the fees paid in case of rendition and other obnoxious features.

Section five repeals all laws inconsistent with this enactment.

A NEAT APOLOGY.—A letter appears in the Alabama prints, written by Hon. WM. J. ANDREWS, of Columbia Tenn., to Mr YANCEY. In it the writer makes the following handsome apology. It does him credit:

It has been my intention for some time past to address you a few lines in the way of an apology. In the recent momentous Presidential contest, I had the honor of acting as the elector for the sixth Congressional District, on the Douglas and Johnson ticket. I, on several occasions in my speeches made you the subject of abusesince which time, I am frank to confess that I deeply regret pursuing such a policy. I will also add further, that I know of no theory or idea which you have ever advocated but what I now most cordially approve of. You were more farseeing han myself. Looking now, calmly and dispassionately at your past record—as a southern man, I must heartily endorse and approve it. I am henceforth and forever a Yancey man, whose patriotism I now regard as pure as the "diamonds of the desert." Will you accept this as an opology, and consider it at your disposal.

Of the Chinese Emperor, every one, even those of his own chamber, stand in the greatest imaginable awe, and on no pretext does any one ever address him save with the use of all his grand and glorious titles. It is the etiquette in the Chinese Court for the Emperor's physician to apply the same titles to his diseases as to himself, and accordingly they talk of "His High and Mighty Stomach ache," "His Imperial and Godlike Dyspepsia," and "His Eternal and Never ending Diphtheria."

SAFE TRAVELING.—For nearly eight years past not a single passenger on the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road has been killed, although the great number of 4,573,919 persons have been carried over that route.

Pecuniary Results.

Every great measure has its profit and loss account—its advantages as well as its disadvantages. The American colonies, in throwing off the yoke, lost many brave men, many hard-earned dollars, much valuable property and eight long years of what might have proved most prosperous times; but they gained the priceless jewel of liberty—they planted themselves on the staunch platform of independence, whereon has been erected our splendid fabric of greatness and power.

If the Union must be dissolved—if this glorious fabric must be levelled to the dust, contrary to the wishes of the South, and spite of her last twenty years' effort to save it, then it becomes her sons to banish as far as possible all useless regrets, and to turn their eyes away from the gloomy aspects of the subjects to the contemplation of the bright features which even this picture presents.

Magnificent as was this glittering structure of Union, its cost to the South was on a scale commensurate with its splendor. We shall not stop at this time to prove that its cost to the South through the Tariff, during the last ten years, has been equivalent to two thirds of all the revenues collected, amounting to an average of nearly sixty millions per annum; for the tariff is levied exclusively upon the foreign commerce of the country, and the South furnishes two-thirds of the exports which support this foreign commerce. Although numbering but one-third of the population of the Union, she pays two-thirds of the federal revenue, or thirty-eight to forty millions of dollars, whereas she is justly chargeable with only twenty millions.

Now, the difference between twenty and thirty eight to forty millions of dollars a year is a very large sum, and, when counted for periods of ten years or more, amounts to an enormous capital for the "poor" South to lose and the "rich" North to gain by the Union. To make the matter worse, not even one-third of the public revenue is expended within her limits; but the great bulk of it, though contributed by herself, is disbursed at the North. Behold in this single fact, which has been in operation on a gradually increasing scale for three-quarters of a century, the real secret of the great preponderance of the North in manufactures, shipping and commercial power. Some of the ingenious taxation which will be entailed upon the State by dissolution, in war debts and extraordinary war expenditures; but no figures which they can possibly marshal on this account can approximate the enormous drain of Southern capital and wealth which must continue to go on under the Union and its tariff.

The South exported last year $250,000,000 of products to foreign countries, and is supposed to have sent at least $100,000,000 more to the North. These exports, or else her returns of $350,000,000 of imports taken in exchange for them, present a basis of revenue well calculated to dispel any fears of public bankruptcy which even the most despondent citizens might entertain. A duty as low as 10 per cent. upon this trade would give a revenue of $35,000,000 for the support of her political system under a Southern Confederacy.

Now, the Southern people have felt too bitterly the burden of a "splendid government," under the union to be willing to repeat the expensive folly in a Confederacy of their own. They would crave the semblance of a complete Federal Government, surrounded with all the costly trappings of the imperial power, and content themselves with mere Federal Agency, such as Patrick Henry and George Mason esteemed sufficient to answer all Federal purposes, and such as the Government at Washington was originally designed to be. Such an agency would be as cheap in its administration as simple in its structure; scarcely costing on a peace footing more than five millions a year, and not exceeding more than an average of fifteen millions per annum in long periods embracing all the contingencies of peace and war; but even the latter expenditures would leave $20,000,000 to spare from the thirty five millions which a ten per cent. tariff would produce on the trade of the South—a sum which would more than defray all the expenses of her State government, the grand total of which for 1858 was less than $10,000,000. Thus secession or war from being a ruinous loss to the South would prove splendid speculation, by stopping the exhausting drain of the present continental tariff, and relieving the wealth Southern people of the burden of direct taxation for State expenditures. The fifteen millions of gross outlay would furnish means for the support of a cordon of custom offices along the border of the North, which would serve the double purpose of collecting the tariff due on Northern fabrics, and of apprehending fugitive negroes in their passage along the underground railroad.—Richmond Dispatch.

ANOTHER MONSTER GUN CAST.—Another monster gun was cast at the Fort Pitt works on Wednesday. The "Floyd," the heaviest piece of ordnance, we believe, that the world has ever seen, was fifteen inches bore, and forty nine inches in diameter at the breech. Its weight in the rough was seventy eight thousand pounds, and when finished, about forty nine thousand. The gun cast on Wednesday has a twelve inch bore, and the same exterior diameter as the "Floyd," while it is six inches longer, and will weigh, when finished, twenty-five tons. The total amount of metal used in the "run" was seventy-eight thousand one hundred pounds. The new gun will be named "Union," and will, it is believed, throw a ball over six miles.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

REINFORCING FORT SUMTER.—The following extract from the letter of a Southerner in New York is worthy of attention:

"I hope your earstgaard will keep a bright lookout. General Scott would delight in reinforcing Fort Sumter by stratagem. It might be done by intercepting at sea a merchant vessel or steamer that had been regularly cleared for Charleston. They could then throw the cargo overboard, put the troops aboard, hoist the Palmetto flag off the bar, sail in and stop at Fort Sumter with men, stores and ammunition."

GENERAL JOSEPH LANE.—We are kindly permitted to make the following extract from a private letter written by that gallant soldier, noble patriot and true man, Gen. Joseph Lane, to a friend in this city. Surely none but a just cause could have the approval of such a man. His letter is dated Washington City, January 6. He says:

"I am glad to find that you fully understand the principles and purposes of the Republican party, and that you have, as have also a majority of the people of Georgia, determined to leave a Union that refuses you equality and protection. You are right; and I am sure you will take no step backwards.

"In conclusion, let me say that I am, and shall continue to be in favor of the rights and equality of all the States as guaranteed by the Constitution. I would to God they could be had in the Union; but when it is manifest that it cannot be so, the duty is plain."

JEFF DAVIS AT CHARLESTON.—The presence of Jeff Davis at Charleston is viewed in different lights here. The quid nunes are decidedly of opinion that he is looking after the military movements, and conferring with the South Carolina authorities about the attack of Fort Sumter.

This is hardly probable, as the position he is aiming at, in the event of a failure to secure the Presidency of the Southern Confederacy, is Generalissimo of the Southern Army.—N. Y. World.

Williamsburg, we are informed, has contributed no less than two hundred and twenty-three plantation hands to labor at the works on Sullivan's Island.

PROSPECTUS OF THE "RUTHERFORD PRESS,"

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER TO BE PUBLISHED AT

Rutherford Court House, N. C.

THE "RUTHERFORD PRESS" will be published on a sheet of medium size, with good materials, and will be a herald of news—such as will be best calculated to interest the public mind. The Press will not be an organ at for the promotion of any party, as distinguished by the names of Whig and Democrat, but will be an organ of Southern Rights. The Editor presumes not to dictate to the people the course that they in these eventful times should pursue; he is willing for the people to exercise their own opinions, while he claims for himself the same privilege. The columns of the paper will be open to genteel discussion on matters of general interest. For the success of our enterprise, we look to the intelligence, patriotism and liberality of the citizens of Rutherford and adjoining Counties.

TERMS.—The Rutherford Press will be issued every week at $1.50 per annum, invariably in advance.

At Spartanburg Court House, sale days in March, April, and May; Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday of Court Week, and on Thursday, the 14th March, Thursday, the 25th of March, Tuesday, 16th of April, and on Saleday in May; at which time the Tax Books will be expected to be closed, and all who fail to make their returns by or on that day, will subject themselves to be double taxed; and all those who may have made their returns and fail to pay their Taxes on or before that day, will be liable as well as those who have not made their returns, to have executions issued against them, as I shall be compelled to have the money or the Sheriff's receipts, for Single as well as Double Tax executions, as the Sheriff's receipt for Single Tax executions is equal to the money at the Treasurer's Office. But I do hope that all will return and pay their Taxes, and save me the painful necessity of issuing executions, and save themselves the costs that would accrue on the issuing of those executions and the collection of the same. But when I say I am compelled to do my duty, I mean what I say. All Taxpayers will be expected to be prompt in making their returns. Every return must be made on oath, and each Taxpayer to subscribe his name to the correctness of his return; and if any by possibility cannot attend the taxpaying from sickness or otherwise, they will send up their returns in writing, with authority to assign their name to said return. All transfers of Real Estate must be made known at the time of making returns. The Taxpayers would confer a favor on the Collector as well as themselves, if they would attend the taxpayings in their immediate neighborhoods, as there is generally a great throng at the Court House on public days. Villagers can have a chance to make their returns on any of the Thursdays above named. R. C. POOLE, T. C.

Jan. 12, 1861.

N. B. I will take it as a special favor if the Magistrates throughout the District will give me all the information they can as to the Free Negroes who are liable to be taxed in their different precincts. All over 15 and under 50 years old are liable to pay tax, except those who may be proved to be unable to pay, from maim or otherwise. R. C. P.
