POETRY.

SONG OF THE DRAGOON.

BY LT. GEORGE W. PATTEN, U. S. ARMY.

Our march is like the thunderpeals—
We pentrate where we pass;
And beat lor is the trail we leave
Along the prairie grass;
From north to south we range the wood,
We skim the plain so fair,
We thread the brake, we breast the flood—
Onward—hurra! hurra!

Our halt is where the prairie wolf
Barks at the grizzly bear;
And every couch we lie upon
The Buffalo must spare.
Break out, my boys, the squadron's line;
Down with the forest spar;
Cut with your swords the tangled vine!
Onward—hurra! hurra!

Our steeds are, like ourselves, my boys,
Born for a martial train
Fearless and strong they tramp along,
And yet they heed the rein;
Then let the merry bugle sound;
We follow freedom's star;
For battle or for hunting ground,
Onward—hurra! hurra!

THE DRUNKARD AND HIS BOTTLE.

Sober.

Touch thee! No. Viper of vengeance!
I'll break thy head against the wall,
Did you not promise—say—
To make me strong as Sampson—
And rich—rich as Croesus—
(I'll wring thy villainous neck!)
And wise—wise as Solomon,
And happier than the happiest!

But instead of this—villain!
You've stripped me of my locks—
Left my pocket as empty as a cuckoo's nest
In March—filled me out of all my senses,
Made me ragged—made me wretched,
And then laid me in a ditch!

Touch thee! sure as there's vengeance
In this fist, I'll star the moon
With thy broken skull!

Miscellany.

THE RESCUE.

It was one of the brightest mornings in June, when myself and a company of fellow travellers were seated upon the small deck of one of the boats which are continually plying back and forth upon the Erie Canal. The air was soft and fragrant the forests vocal with the song of early birds and the earth was arrayed in a vesture of such cheerfulness and beauty, that but for the dark and saddened visages of some around us, we might have deemed she had never fallen from her primeval innocence, but was in every respect good, as when she came from the hands of her Creator.

My eye rested upon one of the group around, with more than ordinary interest. It was a fair haired blue-eyed female, apparently about twenty years of age. There was an expression of anxiety, and I fancied, almost of impatience in her looks as she turned them from time to time, towards the slow and monotonous course of the boat, and the listless indifference of the whistling urchin who was guiding the foremost horse. Upon her lap sat an infant, whose sportive and happy aspect, was in singular contrast to her own:—the one full of innocence, security and ease—unconscious of the mortal scene upon which she had so lately entered; the other showing that she had come to contact with the earth, and it had left its blighting influence upon early years. A tear might now and then be detected mingling with her caresses of the lovely child. Perhaps it was an orphan, but the lady wore not the weeds of widowhood. Perhaps it was the child of crime; I shrunk from such a conclusion, for, though pale and dispirited, the dark lines of sin were not traced upon her young and interesting features.

I drew near and sought to attract her attention by noticing her infant.

There is nothing on earth so susceptible as a mothers heart. If you win your way to it, let your theme be the helpless little being who looks to her for protection and support.

The right chord was touched and it responded to my efforts. I spoke of the wise arrangement of Providence for the disposition and the care of children; that in no way can their preservation from a thousand accidents be accounted for, but by the supposition that they are under the guardianship of angels, and were we gifted with greater powers of vision, we should be enabled, doubtless, to distinguish myriads of ministering spirits, hovering around these little beings, to protect them in their harmlessness and innocency. The emphatic love which Jesus manifested for them, while on earth, was adverted to, and I saw that her face brightened, and her eye beamed with confidence and love as she repeated "of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

I gathered from her conversation that her husband had gone in pursuit of a home, holding out fairer encouragement, to a young and professional man' than that presented in the crowded cities and villages on the Atlantic border, that while prosecuting his enquiries, he was taken suddenly and desperately ill. Her heart could not endure the suspense and anxiety, and she had braved the loneliness and danger of the journey, burthened with a helpless infant, that she might know the worst, and be in season to receive the dying blessing of the husband of her youth; or, haply administer to his wants amid the trembling pers of ceaseless care.—But, although sad, she was not in despair; although solitary, she was not forsaken. Her confidence was in the protection of him who careth for the stranger; she felt that He watched over her though invisible.

A man of venerable aspect approached as she talked; and having lured her little one from her embrace was now amusing him by walking back and forth upon the upper deck, and endeavoring to direct his attention to the falling water, as it went pouring through a lock, striving to attain its proper level. The boat gradually sank, and the high stone walls of the lock rose darkly above us. At this moment, in descending the stairs from the upper deck, the fastening which secured them gave way, and the old man and child were precipitated into the water. Every one sprung to their feet with a feeling of dismay and horror, for each felt that certain and almost instant death must be the consequence, and busy imagination pictured the mangled remains of the aged veteran and cherished little one, and the unutterable desolation of the bereaved and heart stricken mother. I flew to the side of the boat, and could scarcely credit the spectacle which my eyes presented; the noble old man stood erect in the water, holding at arm's length the animated form of the infant, who full of sportive smiles, unsuspicious of its danger, and reckless of the consternation which was filling every heart around, looking like a cherub about to take flight to its bright and native heaven; he stood in a narrow passage between life and death, momently expecting that the next dash of the ponderous framework of the boat against the frowning wall of the lock, would crush him in the contact. But he quailed not as the thought passed over him. Woe to the young child, should a single muscle relax, or a single nerve tremble. But the muscle did not relax, the nerve did not falter. He stood in his majesty, as if firm in the confidence of God, so long as he upheld this beautiful emblem of innocence and purity. The mother gazed in agony, until pulsation stagnated, and the eyeballs refused their office.

When she awoke to consciousness, her darling boy was clinging around her neck, now for the first time alarmed, because he met no fond caress, and no maternal pressure. The angels who watch over infancy had been vigilantly watching it. The boat which was wont to restless, had been held motionless, by invisible might; and the child poised in the air, and apparently dependant upon the strength of a mortal arm, was only one upon their wings until human agency could perfect the rescue.

THE MILLENNIUM.

We perceive the following in the Albion of Saturday.

The Rev. John Wesley preached, on the 5th of May, 1788, in the parish church of Bradford, on which occasion he stated his conviction that the millennium reign of our Savior would be in the year 1836."

We have reason to believe that this zealous Christian minister who perhaps labored more extensively and usefully than any man since St Paul the Apostle, imbibed this opinion from Sir George Stonehouse, the learned and pious author of the treatises on "Universal Restitution" with whom he was on terms of of sincere friendship and intimacy, although he never adopted his learned friend's opinion of the eventual termination of future punishment. Sir George Stonehouse predicted, from a very elaborate exposition of scripture prophecies that the millenium would commence on the 9th of June, at 6 o'clock in the morning; and that it would commence in the U. S. of America which at the time he wrote, had just achieved their independence and present form of government. So fully was he convinced of this fact, that he sold very extensive estates in England to invest his property in this country, whither he was about to come, when he was taken ill and died at Bristol, the seaport from whence he intended to embark.—The most sure way, however, for a man to witness the millenium, is to make one in his own bosom.—N. Y. Sun.

THE HUMAN FRAME.

It is made for health and happiness, and when we look upon a countenance blooming with beauty, and observe its expression of quiet enjoyment, we feel that the being who formed it is a God of love. But we must not forget, that within that very blooming cheek, there is contrived an apparatus capable of producing something very different from enjoyment. A fibrous net work spreads over it coming out of the trunk from the brain, extending every where its slender ratifications, and sending a little thread to every point upon the surface. What is this mechanism for? Its uses are many; but among its other properties there is in it a slumbering power, which may indeed never be called into action, but which always exists, and is always ready, whenever God shall call it forth to be the instrument of irremediable and unutterable suffering. We admit that in almost every case it remains harmless and inoperative; still it is there, always there, and always ready; and it is called into action whenever God thinks best. And it is not merely in the cheek, but throughout every part of the frame that the apparatus of suffering lies concealed; and it is an apparatus which is seldom out of order. Sickness deranges and weakens the other powers, but it seldom interferes with that; it remains always at its post, in the eye the ear, the brain, the heart—in every organ and every limb, and always ready to do God's bidding. N. Y. Mirror.

IDEA OF THE DIVINITY.

Banish all material ideas of a Deity, and do not let your imagination struggle to find its way upward to some material heaven, with indefinite and idle conceptions of a monarch seated on a throne. The striking and beautiful metaphors of the Bible never were intended to give us this idea. God is a Spirit, it says in its most emphatick tone.—Where he acts, there only can we see him. He is the wide-extended omnipresent power, which lies every where employed—and which we can never see, and never know, except so far as he shall manifest himself by his change. Ib.

Important!

TO PERSONS SUFFERING FROM RHEUMATIC COMPLAINTS

To the Editor of the Inquirer:

SIR—On the principle mentioned by the great and good Dr. Franklin, to do good as widely as possible every mean in our power to mitigate or soften the afflictions of suffering humanity, I feel it incumbent upon me to make known through the medium of your useful paper, that on reading therein an advertisement of Dr. Jebb's Liniment, for the cure of RHEUMATISM, I was forcibly impressed with a belief that it was calculated to remove the severe Rheumatic affection to which I had been for seven or eight years subjected, sometimes almost depriving me of the use of my limbs. Accordingly procured a bottle, and before I had used the whole of it, found very sensible relief. This increased my confidence in it, and led me to obtain another bottle, the use of which has completely removed the swellings on point of my limbs, together with the cramp, and restored them to their wonted vigor.

I am respectfully yours,

GEORGE TAYLOR, Jr.

Hempstead, L. I. March 24th.

Persons suffering from the above complaints, and in despair of a cure from the failure of the various remedies they have used, are invited to make trial of this long and celebrated medicine, which has in years past cured and relieved, as it is also now doing, thousands who had despaired of relief. Nothing but a fair trial can give an adequate idea of its unrivalled excellence. It is also one of the best applications known for stiffness of the joints, numbness, sprains and chilblains. CONSUMPTION!

DR. RELFE'S ASTHMATIC PILLS,

HAVE, from their extraordinary success in giving instant relief, and in curing Colds, Coughs, Asthma and Difficulty of Breathing, Wheezing, Tightness of the Chest, Pain in the Side, Spitting of Blood, Chilliness and Shiverings that precede Fevers and Lung Complaints generally! become one of the most popular medicines known, and are sought after from every part of the country, on account of the astonishing success which has attended their administration in the above complaints, frequently curing the most obstinate cases, and giving the most unexpected relief, after every other remedy had failed, and persons had given themselves up in despair of a cure.

They have been known to cure persons supposed to be far gone in consumption, and exhibiting all the appearances of approaching dissolution.

And such have been the salutary effects of these Pills even in hopeless cases, as so far to mitigate the sufferings of the patient, as evidently to prolong life for days and weeks, and give to it a positive comfort they never expected to enjoy.

The operation of the pills is wonderful in easing respiration, quieting the cough, and procuring comfortable rest.

Common colds are frequently removed in a few hours.

☞ Although, (says a person speaking of these Pills,) my wife has tried various medicines of the first celebrity, for an asthmatic difficulty, (or affection of the lungs,) which at times was exceedingly distressing, confining her to her house for days and weeks together, she finds nothing gives her the relief which Relfe's Asthmatic Pills do!—among her resources on quieting her cough, and giving her comfortable rest." And this is the testimony of hundreds of thousands. The relief which aged people, as well as others, experience from the use of these pills, is truly astonishing, and renders them invaluable to many, and are in fact to some, an essential auxiliary to their comfort, and almost to their existence!

A Physician informs the proprietor, that a gentleman in the country observed to him, he had reason to believe the use of these pills had been the means of saving his life.

Price, whole boxes, 30 pills, $1; half do. 12, pills 50 cts.
