WOMAN'S WILL.

Where is the man who has the power and skill
To stem the torrent of a woman's will?
For if she will, she will, you may depend on't—
And if she won't, she won't, so there's an end on't.

EVERY.

If it were not lawful,
The lawyers would not use it;
And if 'twere not prose,
The clergy would not choose it;
And if 'twere not a lovely thing,
The ladies would not wave it,
And if 'twere not plentiful,
The poor girls would not have it.

A VOICE FROM N. CAROLINA.

Extract from the Speech of Mr. Mangum, United States Senator, from N. Carolina:

"Sir, I know we are beaten for the present.—The official corps and its adherents have a tower of strength in the President and his veto. They keep the money for a while. The President's influence may secure and sustain the yet a little longer. Beware of the hour when that protection shall be withdrawn. Beware of the vengeance of an abused people. You may bind puppies, mingled with the laurel of New Orleans, yet a little round the brows of the people. But beware; the day of retributation will surely come. Many of us may, and most probably will, sink under the hoof of power. "The blood of the martyr is the seed of the church." There will be those to follow who will drive the spoiler from his prey.

I have said the States and the People are on one side. Is it not so? Have not the most decisive expressions of popular opinion been heard, in the old States, in favor of the land bill? Have no legislatures that were free from party control expressed their approbation strongly? Do they not know that the public debt is paid? Do they not know that the money here is not needed, and cannot be properly used? Do they not know that this superintendence destroys responsibility, begets extravagence and must end in prodigacy and corruption? Do they not know that it is in this form only that they can hope to be sharers in this rich and princely domain? Do they not know that an equal distribution would awaken enterprise, stimulate industry, and enrich and enoble the states? And is it wonderful that the public every where desire the measure? But not so the politicians.—To them it is wormwood and gall. To the great "spoils party" it brings terror and alarm. To all others it brings healing on its wings, unless perchance, to a very few whose pride of opinion may be startled, or to some from the new state, who may hope by other modes to derive yet greater benefits from the public lands than this measure promises. If the measure shall pass, I know it will be vetoed. That is a great evil, and yet I would not abrogate modify, or touch the veto power. I regard the veto as one of the contrivances in our system to break the shock of consolidated power; a wise contrivance to break excesses in legislative action. In the long run, it must yield to the settled dispassionate judgment of the country. In this case, I venture to predict that result.

DANGERS TO WHICH YOUNG MEN FROM THE COUNTRY ARE EXPOSED.—There are some excellent remarks in the New York Star on this subject, suited to this meridian. Among the practices disapproved of, is that of advertising for clerks from the country, under the apprehension that, having been brought up far away from the allurements, the blandishments, the seductions of a city life, and free alike from its dissipations and its temptations, they will make at once more honest, more faithful more industrious, and of course, more capable assistants in business. We do not believe this is always the case; or even so in a majority of instances. Take a young man from the country—away from the watchful care of his parents—surrounded with novelties, the seductions, and all the enswaring paraphernalia of a city life, and unless his philosophy and self-control be of the most practical and unbending nature, how long will it take to upset all the good and virtuous principles he has imbibed under the parental roof, where there were no inducements to vice? He will be bewildered by all he sees—he will require all that he has ever heard of. Places notorious in history and interdicted by a sense of morality, must be seen if only for once, for the gratification of mere curiosity, and when seen once, will be seen once to often. This is not always the case with the young men of the city, accustomed from infancy to see every thing proper to be seen, and to have the vigilance of parents in checking an improper curiosity; where they repose under the roof of their parents, seen daily and admonished daily by them. The very first step towards vice can be checked, but who is to guard the erring steps of an innocent youth from the country? he may plunge deep in vice, and no eye sees it, no voice checks it; he is surrounded on all sides by temptation, and there is no friendly hand stretched forth to save him.

Miss Smith the young Irish lady, who a few months ago was married to the eldest son of the King of Naples, and accordingly the next heir to the crown, is the daughter of a poor farmer who made a little money, and in her younger days had charge of a dairy and was a great hand at milking cows.

What can be the reason? Every thing is dear—lands, houses, clothes, provisions,—in short, every thing. It was never so before to our knowledge. We have always thought it a matter settled that when money is scarce every thing else is cheap and vice versa. Now, every thing is scarce and dear, except foreign paupers, who are taking the bread from our children's mouths, and from our laborers that by which they live.—Boston Standard.

At Southampton Furnace, in Franklin, Pa. on the 3d inst. a young man by the name of Alexander Robinson, came to his death in a singular manner: In attempting to jump over a companion, by placing his hands upon his shoulders, he fell on his head and "broke his neck!"

Dr Lieber says "women are born to be married." Query—how is it with those who Miss it?—N. H. State.

"No man who loves his family fails to take a newspaper." We add, no man who loves a good name fails to pay the printer.—N. Watchman.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale the Farm on which he now lives and formerly the residence of the late Col. John Chipman, together with the stock of Cattle, Sheep and Horses.—and all the farming utensils. The Farm is situated about four miles south of the village of Middlebury, and contains about FIVE HUNDRED ACRES of the choicest INTERVAL and UPLAND. On the premises are a large and convenient new two story DWELLING HOUSE, built and finished in the best manner, with Wood House, Carriage House, &c. Also, THREE comfortable and convenient DWELLING HOUSES—THIRTEEN BARNS and SHEDS—CORN BARN, and all other necessary out buildings.—The Farm is well watered by the Middlebury River, which divides it nearly in the centre, and by springs. There is on the farm an abundance of excellent fruit, with plenty of wood for the use of the farm, and about 30 acres heavily timbered with Pine and Cedar, and a ledge of excellent building and lime-stone. Said Farm is well fenced, in a high state of cultivation, and from the fertility of the soil, the convenience of its arrangement, and the beauty of the location, is perhaps one of the most desirable situations in the State.

ALSO: A Lot half a mile south of the above containing thirty one and a half acres, about 25 acres of which is in pasturing, and the balance covered with Beach and Maple timber.

ALSO: A Farm, in the east part of Middlebury, containing 177 acres of the best of grazing land, with a log House and Barn, about 75 acres cleared, fenced and well watered.

Terms of payment will be made accommodating and immediate possession given.

LADIES COMPANION

COMMENCES WITH THE MAY NUMBER.

PUBLISHED POSITIVELY ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH.

PUBLISHED BY WILLIAM W. SNOWDEN.

THE Ladies Companion contains ORIGINAL and selected Tales, Sketches, Essays, Poetry, Biography, &c. &c.—together with a choice collection of Music, and is embellished with splendid Engravings, Drawings, Embroidery, &c., with an accurate description of each plate. In addition to which, the April and October numbers are accompanied with handsome engraved title-pages, and a general index, for each volume, alphabetically arranged, which is intended to perfect two volumes a year of nearly SIX HUNDRED PAGES.

The Steel engravings which have appeared in the LADIES COMPANION, during the last year, are beyond comparison with those of any similar publication in America, and the price of the whole is only three dollars per annum. The following are the engravings, and those of the succeeding year, will be equal if not superior, to any that have as yet embellished the work.

The Last Supper, Mount Joliet; Rock Fort; Weehawk; and view of New York; Catskill Mountains; Fort Putnam; Sparkill Falls; View on the Delaware; Mountain House, Catskill; Interior of the late New York Exchange; Blackwell's Island and Penitentiary.—Steel Engravings.

THE MUSICAL DEPARTMENT

Will continue under the superintendance of a PROFESSIONAL GENTLEMAN, who will exercise that care and attention in the selections, which this favorite branch of refinement so much requires.

The original articles and translations, published in the Ladies Companion, are furnished by writers of established merit, including many Ladies, who have steadily favored the work with contributions since its commencement.

☞ It is with heartfelt gratitude for the unprecedented support already extended to the Ladies Companion, the publisher states, that arrangements are in progress for securing the aid of some of the first writers in AMERICA and EUROPE in behalf of this Literary enterprise. At this early period, it would be perhaps incurring their displeasure, and the just censure of the public, in case of a failure, to exhibit their names to the world. Before the arrangements are with certainty completed,—suffice it to say, that there are those among them, whose writings have shed lustre upon American literature.

The publisher in conclusion, appeals with confidence to the pages of the Ladies Companion, for the last two years, as an earnest of his ceaseless efforts to maintain the enviable and lofty standing the work at present occupies in the community.

The selections are made from the following European Periodicals:—

Blackwood's, Metropolitan, Frazer's Magazine, New Monthly Magazine, Monthly Magazine, United Service Journal, London Satirist, Court Magazine, Oriental Review, London Mirror, Ladies Pocket Magazine, Ladies Museum, World of Fashion, Translations from La Revue Francaise, &c. &c., La Belle Assemblee, Ladies London Cabinet, Gentleman's Magazine, Magazine of the Beau Monde, Liverpool Albion, Bell's Weekly Messenger.

In addition to the above named works, the publisher has access to an immense variety of other periodicals, received by individuals, for their private libraries.

☞ Each number of the Ladies Companion contains forty eight large octavo pages (double columns) printed on fine paper, stitched in a cover,—published on the 1st of every month, and is forwarded to subscribers by the earliest mails, enveloped in strong double covers. Postmasters remitting $5 will be entitled to two copies of the work—and those remitting $15 will be entitled to six copies and a seventh gratis.

All Letters on business must be post paid.
