FROM A LIVING DEATH

It was a pleasure indeed to be at home again after three years exploring the Arctic snows, and the fact that I was about to meet my old love, Emily Croyden, again made me doubly eager to get back. I felt a sudden chill run over me when I came to her house. Her stepfather, Joshua Penthroop, a man I had never liked, was standing in the doorway.

"Where is Emily?" I asked, eagerly.

"Miss Croyden has been dead over a year," he replied in cold, measured tones.

That was all he said. I cannot remember how I found strength enough to totter away on hearing this dreadful piece of news, but when I had recovered somewhat I found myself in the house of an old friend.

From him I learned that Emily Croyden had gone a year and a half ago on a journey with Mr. Penthroop in search of health, and that she had died during the tour.

This calamity had proved too much for the poor mother to bear, and Mr. Penthroop returned home to find her dead, leaving him sole possessor of the home and fortune to which he had succeeded on Emily's death.

After that I could not endure to live at home, but wandered away from one place to another trying to find some occupation that would divert my mind from the past. At last I took a position as assistant in Dr. Durity's private insane asylum.

It was not by any means a sinecure. Indeed, after the first few days I had the care of the whole establishment except the part assigned to "special cases," to whom none had access except the Doctor himself, and an old female servant as ugly as Hecate and as silent as the grave. This portion of the building had no connection with the rest, and the grounds adjacent to it were inclosed by a separate wall through which entrance was by a gate which was always kept securely fastened.

Dr. Durity had never invited me to visit this part of the establishment—had never spoken of it, indeed—and I was too much occupied with my own duties to indulge in curiosity.

One day, however, during my hour of outdoor exercise, in passing the gate already mentioned I noticed that the key was in the lock, a thing that I had never observed before. I had never been forbidden to enter this part of the grounds, and saw no harm in stepping inside and taking a look around. The gate was unlocked and, pushing it open, I passed in.

Before me was a wing of the main building, whose walls were pierced with tiers of barred windows from which the view was quite intercepted by the high surrounding wall. A gravel walk ran round the wing, and along it I was sauntering slowly, when I heard something drop at my feet. Looking down I saw a small gold ring which I hastened to pick up.

Judge of my surprise at recognizing the token of our engagement which I had given Emily the day that I bade her good by. Whence now this souvenir of the dead past?

Repressing an outcry to which I had almost given vent in the violence of my excitement, I looked up quickly and glanced rapidly along the rows of narrow windows, behind the bars of the topmost tier I saw a pale, worn face, at the sight of which I started as though it had been a apparition. The face was that of Emily Croyden!

I would have called out, but she placed her fingers on her lips and pointed towards the partly open gate with a gesture which I could not fail to understand. It meant that I should depart, keeping my own counsel till I had secured the means of her release. Making a sign to show my comprehension, I obeyed, softly closing the gate after me. Emily's safety, perhaps her life, depended upon the present concealment of my discovery.

The one glance of her face dispelled any doubt as to her sanity. Her wicked stepfather, it was evident, had coined the story of her death for his own selfish ends, and was carrying out the fraud through the aid of an unscrupulous accomplice, who would stick at nothing to avoid exposure.

I had gone but a little way when I heard the gate open and saw the serving woman coming out. She seemed frightened on discovering the key, which she quickly pocketed after locking the gate, meanwhile eying me suspiciously. I pretended not to heed, and she passed on.

It was nearly dark when I returned to the asylum. I had been absent several hours, in fact, and when I went to the doctor's room, ostensibly to make out my evening report, he was beginning a reprimand, when I cut him short.

"I have made a discovery to-day, doctor," I said.

"Ah, indeed?" he replied, a little nervously, I thought.

"There is a young lady imprisoned here," I continued, "a Miss Crovden, whom her stepfather finds it convenient to conceal, while pretending she is dead."

The Doctor's face turned livid.

"You speak insolently," he replied, with an effort at bravado. "I have no patients here save by lawful right."

"But the lady I speak of is not insane."

"The lady you speak of probably thinks the same; most crazy people do."

"Will you release her voluntarily and at once?" I demanded.

His answer was a sneering smile.

My verdy was a signal, which was quickly followed by a sheriff's officer and assistants armed with the proper writ.

"Will you conduct these gentlemen to Miss Croyden's apartments," I asked, "or must they force their way?"

The villain quailed in the presence of the law, and before many minutes I held Emily safe in my arms.

Joshua Penthroop did not wait his sentence, but vacated at once the home to which he had no valid right, and in which we have dwelt ever since our marriage. Dr. Durity, too, decamped, to avoid false imprisonment, leaving an agent to dispose of his establishment.—Yonkers Statesman.

FROM THE WORLD OF LABOR.

One of the best workers of the Watchmakers' Union is John Campbell.

The Tenth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor will be held at Detroit on Dec. 8.

Painters' Union No. 2 will have its annual ball at Unio Academy, Brooklyn, on Tuesday, Nov. 25.

Bakers' Union No. 2 has secured Georg Beego President, in place of John Hoaz who resigned.

A Brothers' Union has been organized last week, by a number of Hebrew workmen in this city.

The Amalgamated Housesmiths' Union will hold its annual Ball on Thanksgiving Day at the Bohemian Turn Hall.

M. Rubkowitz, general organizer of the Hebrew Labor Federation, has resigned, and A. Zametskin has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

The bakers' unions of Italy emulated at the congress recently held in Milan. Their agitation on the question of night work has now become universal in all the large cities of the kingdom.

Miss Brooks has found ten girls at the Connecticut Cigar Factory, Tenth street and Avenue A, who could not read nor write. The firm will be prosecuted against under the Factory law.

A number of members of the Clothing Cleaners' Union have formed an association to open up the Fall sale. The United Hebrew Trades gave them $25 yesterday.

The Central Labor Union, of Newark, has postponed its proposed boycott of 100,000 boycott circulars against the Prudential Insurance Company, because the Labor Union says that a settlement satisfactory to it has been made.

The average wages taken in Germany, according to the statistics authorized by August Bebel, the Socialist leader, are $2.40 per week, while the hours of labor are from eighteen to twelve per day.

Everard Hakkin, ex-President of Typographical Union No. 6, is lying at St. Luke's Hospital. An operation had to be performed which left him very weak, and it is doubtful if he will be able to be out before he will be around again.

The handworkers at Ottenberg Brothers' cigar factory, Twenty-second street and First avenue, are on strike for an increase of $2 per week. The firm asked time to consider the matter, but the men demanded an immediate answer and the leaders of the strike have promised a reply today.

Factory Inspector L. T. Fell, of New Jersey, appeared before the Orange Common Council recently in the interest of a franchise to the Nonpareil Company to extend its lines from the East Orange to the West Orange one, as, owing to the rapidly increasing population of laboring people in that vicinity, need of it is asserted.

The Legislative Committee of the Soc ialist Labor Party received yesterday for its agitation fund, $1.47 in stamps from the Kitchen Workers' Union, and $1.15 from Furniture Workers' Union No. 7. A fundraising entertainment was called for Oct. 25, at Turn Sobaer, the distinguished gymnastic organizations to march in their respective uniforms in the square.

Cigarmakers' Union No. 90 enrolled twenty-seven new members at its last regular meeting. The Bohemian Union of Cigarmakers, which was founded a month or so ago, and which was asked to support the candidates of the Socialists, the following officers were elected: A. Jonas, President; R. R. Kobler, Treasurer; G. Messner, Trustee; W. Scandlo, Auditor.

The cigarette-makers of E. D. Rose & Co. have given in their bills, and they will strike to get them fixed at the firm's terms. Foreman Cohn said yesterday that he received threatening letters, and he was frightened to such an extent that he went to the Tenth Ward Station and got a pistol for protection. Max Cohn and Jacob Baum will, having written the letters, Judge Duffy promised to investigate.

The German Painters' Union has adopted a memorial to which the reasons why it refuses to join the Trades Council, recently given by Frederick Ehrenfeld, President of the Painters' Union, are set forth. The memorial says that the Painters' Union 534 German members, and $40.84 expended.

A mass-meeting of mulders was held yesterday evening at 401 East Twenty-third street to organize the Molders' Union. Some 8 or 10 were present. Mr. Rosenberg, Frank Kopsahn, George Hook and others. A board of officers was then elected but it was resolved not to publish their names. Molders will go to work will be requested to pay dues at 50 cents per week, up to Jan. 1, 1891, with the initiation fee of $1.

The Executive Board of the Journeymen Bakers' Union has resolved not to send any delegate to the coming convention of the American Federation of Labor, the reason being a desire to save the expense. But General Secretary Deibler says that a delegate should be sent, as the interests of the Union require it, and he is of the opinion that it is to be submitted to a general vote of the members.

The official inter-statistics of Italy show that in 1889 cemeteries, 1,200,000 people died in cemeteries, and there dead bodies are kept in vaults under the church. 200,000 people in cemeteries, there are 110 villages without a physician, and no drug stores reside; in 4,890 villages there are no houses having any water-closets, all offal and refuse being thrown into the streets. Six million people are constantly affected with malaria, and out of 100 recruits privately educated 40 can read and write, over 180,000 are out of employment, in many cities the average wages are 25 cents per day.

The Labor League of Philadelphia is agitating against the nomination of Representative Fow, of the Seventeenth Pennsylvania District, for his great sin in opposing to the factory inspection law in the Legislature of that State. The League also recommends to all members of labor organizations not to attend on any member of the Legislature who, pledging himself to support Bill or Resolution.

The Brooklyn Newsboys' Protective and Benevolent Association, P. J. McGrath, President, is arranging a benefit for the purpose of raising an annual income of not less than $[illegible] required by anyone selling newspapers, magazines, books or periodicals on the streets. A committee has been appointed to present the resolutions to the Brooklyn Trades Council. The Association consists of about [illegible] members, and is the only one of its kind in Brooklyn, or in the country, so far as is known.

Secretary C. S. Bauer, of the International Labor Congress Association, [illegible] to the Trades Council of Brooklyn, that the Congress will be organized this year, and that the Congress will be adjourned to the year [illegible] in order to allow the delegates to attend the next Congress of the Workers' Union will be held at Paris, London, Chicago, Kansas City, Detroit, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Toledo and Rochester.

John Most says that he will leave the United States for ever for England. He can't will continue to be published here, but he says he will continue to go back to London, for the purpose of being engaged into Germany. Most will depart about the end of December. He can get out of the country whenever he pleases, since Bismarck's law has been repealed, and he has not been molested since the last anarchistic speech. Tosses, Henry & Hammond, Most's law firm, have been requested to move that that be declared [illegible] on the call.

Legal Defense.

(From Judge.)

Counsel—And all you can do is to confess that you are guilty?

Prisoner (sadly)—Yes, sir.

Counsel—Well, Gen. I'm afraid the only defense we can offer is insanity.

Prisoner (cheerfully—Really, Boss! Then yer can prove dat dis confession of mine here is a what-yer-call-em? Hallucination? An' I'm innocent! Dat's it!

The Same Rule Ought to Apply.

(From Judge.)

Young Mother—What ought the baby's food to be, Dr. Chargem?

Doctor—Nothing but the milk from one cow.

Young Mother—And I believe you said the mother ought to take four or five fresh eggs every day?

Doctor—Yes.

Young Mother—Well, doctor, should they be eggs from one hen?

Careless.

(From the American Grocer.)

Hulkins—Stop! Hold on! There, Hannah, you've done it! Such a careless girl I never see.

Hannah (leaving the piano)—Done what, pray?

Hulkins—You've done gone locked the pianny and all the keys inside her!

Corrected.

(From Judge.)

Young Widow—Yes, John was a good man. Sympathetic Friend—You must cheer up, Emily. There are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught.

Young Widow—I know it; but (burst of tears) John wasn't a fish.

The Best Man in the World.

Well, if not positively the best, one of the worst is he who checks disease at the start in his own system. In preserving or restoring the heaven-granted gift of health, he deserves prompt consideration. His example is worthy to be imitated. The complaint which afflicts us are largely attributable to a want of tone in the stomach, either inherent or inflicted by ourselves upon that most abused repository of the food that should nourish us. What is its requirement in adversity? A wholesome tonic. None so good, if we rely upon experience and testimony, as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Unmedicated stimulants won't do. Regulation, as well as invigoration of the digestive viscera, is not to be effected by them. Through the agency of the stomachic named, strength of the entire system is replenished—lassitude and weakness, dyspepsia and biliousness, dyspepsia and biliousness, overcome. Malarial, kidney, bladder and rheumatic complaints are eradicated by this salutary reformer of ill health.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

SHEER MISERY WAS HIS LOT.

MR. STRUSZ SUFFERED TWENTY YEARS WITH CATARRH.

He Became Totally Deaf in One Ear and His Head Ached as if It Would Burst—He was Always Hawking and Spitting and His Health was Wretched, but It Has Been Restored by Drs. Blair & Copeland He Says.

The writer found Mr. John Strusz at his home, 75 South Third st., Brooklyn. In reply to a question as to the cause of his trouble, Mr. Strusz said: "I was in my younger days a business man in the jewelry trade, New York. I was fairly successful, but I contracted a cold in the head which settled on my lungs, and I took a great many remedies for it and underwent treatment for catarrh, which only aggravated the disease, but I couldn't stop on account of business. I was obliged to go on, and I grew worse and worse. I became totally deaf in one ear, and my head used to ache so that it would almost burst. My throat was always full of phlegm, which I was constantly hawking and spitting up. My nose was always stopped up, so that I could not breathe through it, and I had to breathe through my mouth. My sense of taste had left me. My memory was very poor. I was ashamed to meet people in the streets. They were so sure that I heard I would fail to recognize them, which improved my very much. I would get up in the morning as tired as when I went to bed. My appetite was very poor. I had a constant feeling of oppression on my chest. Sharp, but transitory pains would dart through my side and extend through to my shoulder blades. At times I would frequently have night sweats.

"How did I get over all this? Well, I consulted Drs. Blair & Copeland, and they cured me. Why, I feel as well now as I ever did in my life.

"Dr. Blair & Co. extend charge nothing for medicines, and their price for treatment is very low.

MR. JOHN STRUSZ,
75 South 3d st., Brooklyn.

"There were ringing noises in my ears. After a time I began to have trouble with my hearing, and at last I became totally deaf in one ear. My throat was sore from the constant dropping of phlegm or mucus into it from my head. I was always hawking and spitting to clear my throat. In the morning I felt tired and unrefreshed from my night's sleep. My mouth was coated with a sticky slime. I had no appetite, and what I had did not taste good. My breath smelled bad. My sense of taste had left me. My memory was very poor. I was afraid of meeting people in the streets. They were so sure that I heard I would fail to recognize them, which improved me very much. I would get up in the morning as tired as when I went to bed. There was a constant oppression on my chest.
