Almost like to chide, invective
Gives the dear patriotic breath,
Rise with memories of the war-time
Yield of society as yours;
Yet I vow the theft old plaudits
Note of fife and beat of drum,
O'er my senior and more glorious
Than these minute-men I come.

Why publish? Why bemoan the glorious?
Ah, I see the boys march forth
Flushed with patriotic fervor,
Mustering to defend the Truth.
And I think how, year years later,
Some by silent death in the end,
And the rest, a ragged frontier,
Worn and weary, hastened home.

And so all the fifths and mays
Notes of fife and beats of drum
Cast a blight upon my senses,
Memory of their martyrdom.
Did you see and see yet, mindful
How the "boys" went forth to war?
How behind that barbarous parade
They marched off—each overshoes.

Dame Nature was in the suits this morning and a genial May sun was elevated by her frown for several hours, making it seem almost improbable that the Memorial Day parade and observances would be favored by good weather.

But when the Old Guard, in its full panoply of war, its gallant youths of the militia and the scarred, crippled, grizzled old veterans of the Union Army began to turn out and march in squads and battalions to martial music, the sulky Dame showed signs of pleasure, and the prudent people of the great city of New York began to turn out in great numbers to witness the grand military display.

Inspector Steele with 800 patrolmen, supplemented by Reilly, Allaire, Stevenson, Copeland and Smith, was on hand early preparing the way from Twenty-eighth street down to Fourteenth street for the parade himself personally superintending the arrangements at Madison square, where a reviewing stand had been erected on the west and a grand stand on the east side of Fifth avenue.

SUNNY JIM'S GRAVE IN GREENWOOD.

Inspector Williams and Captain Chidsey and the elder McCullagh were at the Union Square Plaza with 300 policemen, and Inspector Conlin with Capts. Gunner, Ware, Cross and McAvoy and 200 other men kept order at Fifty-ninth street, where the parade formed.

As the clouds cleared away the people began to congregate, and by 9 o'clock Madison square began to assume its wonted parade-day aspect.

The grand stand filled up rapidly with the wives and daughters of New York veterans and quite a goodly number of beautiful women, pretty children and distinguished men occupied the reviewing stand.

Gen. Ransom Clark had his daughter and daughter-in-law and a front seat, and among others there were Mrs. Thomas J. Dell, Department of the G. A. R. Women's Auxiliary of Auburn, N. Y.; Miss McLean, daughter of the national commander of the Old Guard; Colonel Levy, Lawyer Abraham H. Pulitzer, Major Haveley, who for the first time in his life was a spectator rather than a participant in the Memorial parade; Dr. Hagle, of the Health Department, who generally has had a K vist, others and took a blue ribbon pretty experienced Old Guard.

Gen. Dan Butterfield, Gen. Frank Black, Comptroller Myers, Gen. Roberts Bogart, President Arnold, of the Board of Aldermen, and Postmaster Van Cott were also there.

Commander R. J. Arkenburg, Secretary for many years of the Memorial Committee, and Comrade James Owens were in charge of the reviewing stand.

The Welsh Regiment, to the rear of the reviewing stand, was decked out for the occasion by Worth Post, G. A. R. It was crowned with wreaths. About the item pillars was twined the laurel, and shields were hung on the faces of the shaft which reminded one of Vera Cruz, Monterey, City of Mexico and other battles fought by Gen. Worth.

Across the avenue the marine statue of Farragut was beautiful with flowers, and a floral plate at the "old salt's" feet bore the words: "Torpedoes ahead, sir!" and the famous reply of the sturdy Admiral:

PASSING IN REVIEW AT THE WORTH MONUMENT.

"Damn the torpedoes, go ahead."

ALL IN THE SCHEDULE.

At 10 the schedule began by rolling in chariots "Made they office!" And looking up the magnificent avenue the eye could descry the famous Old Guard just rising the brow of the hill at Twenty-seventh street.

On their came, this guard of honor and escort to the reviewing party of distinguished men, to the inspiring strains of a massive brass band.

MEN WITH MOURNING CRAPES.

The moving column was yet two blocks away when the grand stands set up a tremendous cheering and clapping of hands.

In the lore front was Sergeant Robb of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, in command of a squad of twenty policemen in company front.

Then came the Old Guard, in full dress uniform up to the bearskin shakos, with the doughty Major George McLean in the saddle.

The Old Guard and a party of Grand Army officers were the Guard of Honor to the reviewing party, who rode in carriages.

Following is a list of commander of the G. A. R. in the

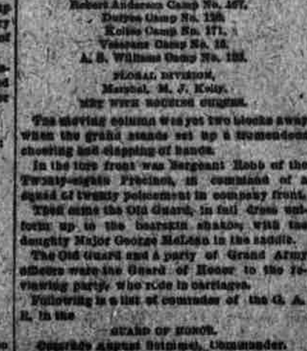
The Guard of Honor counternarched at Twenty-third street and drew up on the east side of the avenue facing the reviewing stand.

From the first carriage alighted Lieut.-Gov. James and Judge Van Hoesen.

The next carriage brought Mayor Grant and Comrade David S. Brown, and following in carriages were Gen. Barnum, J. C. Redmond and department officers of the Grand Army of the Republic, State of New York.



AT GEN. GRANT'S TOMB.

They were cheered to the echo as they took their place in the review box prepared for the purpose, and here, with uncovered heads, Gov. James and Mayor Grant reviewed the great parade.

REGULARS MARCH FIRST.

Boroughman Brent and six mounted policemen came first, followed by ten companies of soldiers of the Regular Army under command of Col. Loomis L. Langdon of the First Artillery.

The morning of the regulars was precision itself, and their uniforms and bearing were so soldierlike that they drew forth the heartiest applause.

Companies of marines from the Potomac, Philadelphia, Enterprise, Lancaster and other naval ships were a feature in the ranks of the "regulars."

The organ's carried shrapnel, pickaxes, axes and other symbols of their calling, and the novel marching in was interrupted in naval third and fifth blue uniforms and leather leggings.

Sea dreadnaughts pumped from the lines of war lightness and Philadelphia, called next, dragging their destructive pieces over the pavements and crossing the others side of enchantment among the spectators.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

The National Guard Reserve, Col. Louis Fitzgerald and his staff, in regulation trappings and mounted on spirited chargers, led the First Brigade, the gallant sixty-ninth Regiment having the post of honor.

Col. Corcoran's boys were service coats of blue, white duck trousers and white helmets, surmounted with the famous green cockade.

They stepped with excellent precision to the music of a "sheepskin band."

The fife and drum corps did nobly for the militiamen, and their martial strains seemed highly appropriate to the occasion.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S STATUE.
THE MEMORIAL COMMITTEE.

The Officers' Memorial Committee for the G. A. R. of the city and county of New York was composed as follows:

Chairman, Comrade George M. Van Hoesen, Post 140; First Vice-Chairman, Philip G. Bigelow, Post 34; Second Vice-Chairman, Herman W. Thum, Post 284; Treasurer, E. W. Day, Post 185; Recording Secretary, E. J. Atkinson, Post 578; Corresponding Secretary, John McHugh, Post 77; Grand Marshal, George Chappell, Post 139.

SCENES ON FIFTH AVENUE.

Long before 9 o'clock, the hour named for the moving of the parade, Grand Marshal George Chappell and his staff were at the Windsor Hotel, attending to the details of the formation of the procession.

All along Fifth avenue flags were displayed at half-mast from public and private buildings, while thousands of spectators crowded the fashionable thoroughfare, and even encroached upon the stoops of private residences in their efforts to view the parade.

Inspector Conlin, assisted by the captains of the various precincts through which the procession passed, had charge of the police arrangements.

The procession moves promptly at 9.30 o'clock, the United States regular troops leading, followed by the First Brigade of the National Guard under Brig.-Gen. Fitzgerald acting as escort to the Grand Army Posts.

Contrary to custom, the National Guard regiments marched to field music only, the Musical Union having demanded $2 each for the players for the day instead of $5, as advance which the officers of the different regiments refused to pay.

Most of the regimental bands in the city, however, participated in the parade, leading the different Grand Army Posts, by which they were hired at the full union wages.

A feature of the parade was the presence of the veteran Gen. Abraham Daily, who rode in an open carriage in company with his grandson, George Washington Daily, and the little daughter of Capt. Norman, of the Veteran Zouaves Association.

The Old Guard, Maj. George W. McLean, commanding, attracted general and flattering attention, although not really participating in the parade.

At 9 o'clock it escorted Lieut.-Gov. Edward F. Jones from the Windsor Hotel to the reviewing stand at the Worth Monument, in Madison square, where he joined Mayor Grant and the other reviewing dignitaries.

The Old Guard then formed in line before the stand, remaining there while the procession passed.

GRANT SALUTED BY THE REPUBLIC.

The U. S. corvette Enterprise steamed up the North River early in the day and anchored at a point opposite the tomb of Gen. Grant in Riverside Park.

From the battery of the ship minute guns are ordered to be fired during the ceremonies of decorating the last resting place of the great General, and meanwhile the yards will be manned and every symbol of naval honors will be paid to the memory of the Commander of the Union armies.

The Enterprise will return to the Navy-Yard after the ceremonies are ended. Simultaneous with her salute a President's salute will be fired from the battery on the Cob Dock at the Navy-Yard.

OTHER OBSERVANCES.

BROOKLYN'S OBSERVANCES.

A Magnificent Parade, Followed by G. A. R. Rituals at the Cemeteries.

Members of the National Guard, War Veterans and their sons, volunteer and regular firemen and letter carriers of Brooklyn, constituted early their final preparations for their great Memorial Day parade.

When an EVENING WORLD reporter asked Grand Marshal George W. Brown whether the parade would be postponed if the weather was stormy he replied:

"No, sir, it will not, even if it should rain bullets and blow great guns."

As time passed, however, the skies grew brighter, and at 9 o'clock the parade was an assured success.

The organizations taking part in the parade formed in line near their various headquarters and marched to the fountain on Bedford avenue, from whence the line was to march.

The hour for the start was set at 10 o'clock, and shortly afterwards all the men were in motion.

The line was headed by a platoon of police, followed by Grand Marshal George W. Brown and his staff and the entire Second Brigade, N. G. S. N. Y., consisting of five regiments and the Third Battery.

All the Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic followed, that veterans of the Brooklyn regiments who participated in the war, the Sons of Veterans, a corps of letter-carriers from the Eastern District, and other organizations.

Wagons laden with flowers followed in the rear.

The parade passed through Bedford, Lafayette, Clermont and Willoughby avenues to the reviewing stand in Washington Park, opposite Fort Greene, where it was reviewed by Mayor Chapin and other city officials.

The line then continued through Cumberland street to Lafayette avenue, to South Elliott place, thence place to Flatbush avenue, where ranks were broken.

Some of the G. A. R. posts went to Greenwood Cemetery, where they were addressed by Col. Mark D. Wilber; others went to Cypress Hills, where Senator McCarren spoke to them; others to Evergreens and Lutheran Cemeteries.

MACDONALD REPORTED DEAD.

But the Report Is Not Yet Officially Confirmed.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

MONTREAL, May 30.—A report that Sir John Macdonald had died at 10 o'clock this morning proved to be premature, but his physicians held there was no hope.

A bulletin at 5 o'clock this morning stated that the Premier had passed the night quietly. He did not suffer pain, and was perfectly conscious so far as making known his wants.

At 9 A. M. it was stated that the patient had taken a turn for the worse, and this probably gave rise to the later rumor that he was dead.

At 10.30 a report of his death was again given out, but it is not yet confirmed.

Grooms as Home to Pittsburg.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

BROOKLYN PARK, BROOKLYN, May 30.—The sun tried to break through the clouds at Brooklyn Park this morning to welcome the visiting Bridegrooms in the first of two holiday games. But it didn't really succeed.

The Pittsburgs were thrown out, however, and it was the first appearance this season of Western nine in Brooklyn.

The game was begun at 10.30 before an attendance of 3,000.

The grounds were in excellent condition, despite the rain.

The batting order:

BROOKLYN.	Pittsburg.
Collins, 2b.	Miller, c. f.
Ward, s. s.	Smith, 2b.
Griffin, c. f.	Beckley, 1b.
Foutz, 1b.	Carroll, r. f.
Burns, r. f.	Bergen, 3b.
O'Brien, l. f.	Stenzel, s. s.
Pinkney, 3b.	Mack, c.
Tom Daly, c.	Healy, 2b.
Lovett, p.	Galvin, p.

Umpire—Mr. Lynch.

First Inning.—The game opened with a blank for Brooklyn, only Ward getting to bat and that on calls.

The Pittsburgs fared no better. Bergen was the man who got his base on balls for that side.

SECOND INNING.—Three Brooklynites went out. One got a present of a base. No runs.

Pittsburg got one on an error of Ward, a steal and Beckley's hit.

THIRD INNING.—The Brooklyn team went in, two, three.

The Pittsburgs almost matched the Brooklyns in their half.

Beckley, Brownlee, Bergen, Stenzel, Mack and Galvin hit safely, Carroll got his base on balls and five runs came in.

FOURTH INNING.—Foutz, Burns, Brown and Collins hit safely, Carroll got his base on balls and the runs came in.

Bergen, Stenzel, Brown and Healy hit safely, Mack made the other in a series of hits.

FIFTH INNING.—Daly got his base on an error by Healy. Collins then successfully sacrificed. Ward made a safe hit and Daly got to third, where he scored on a throw to home. One run.

In the last half of the inning Miller hit safely and scored on a single by Smith and another by Miller. One run.

SIXTH INNING.—No runs for Pittsburg, and the game was lost and won.

POINTERS ON THE RACES.

Tipsters' Opinions on the Various Winners To-Day.

This is the last day at Gravesend and no one will be sorry, for the racing has been for the most part uninteresting and poor. The programme to-day includes seven races, and among them are two fixed events, the Tremont Stakes for two-year-olds and the Brooklyn Cup for three-year-olds and upward. The first stake will bring together Canvas, Cozzwain, Odio, the Lady Longfellow colt, Airwaft, Charado, King Mac, Spinning and others and it should be a good race.

The Brooklyn Cup race looks uninteresting and padded. In the heavy going it is not probable that Kingston will go, and there is a chance that several others will be scratched.

The first race is at five furlongs. Correction ought to win handily, for she has proved speed and a liking for heavy going. Civil Service may be second and Hypatia may beat the others. Longstreet may start, but his form is not sprinting.

The second race is at a mile and a furlong. In the heavy going Zoe should win handily. Rosiere may be second and Ranger may be third.

The third race is the Tremont Stakes at six furlongs. The Lady Longfellow colt may win. Orlie should be second and Cassyon may be third.

The fourth race is the Brooklyn Cup, and Kingston will win if he starts. Riley may be second and Sanchez may be third.

The fifth race is for two-year-olds at five furlongs. Mount Vernon may win, with the Billet Doux colt second. Guilty may beat the others.

The sixth race is at a mile and a sixteenth. Virgie should win, with Montague as the runner up. Vivid may be third.

The seventh race is at six furlongs. Sauterer may win. Delphine ought to be in second position, and Lyceum may be third.

Referee, in the Morning World, makes these selections:

First Race—Longstreet, Correction.
Second Race—Zoe, Rosiere.
Tremont Stakes—Orlie, Lady Longfellow colt, Spinning.
Brooklyn Cup—Riley, Prince Royal.
Fifth Race—Mount Vernon, Rocco.
Sixth Race—Montague, Virgie.
Seventh Race—Diablo, Sauterer.

From Other Morning Papers:

First Race—Correction, Civil Service.
Second Race—Zoe, Rosiere.
Third Race—Cozzwain, Cassyon.
Fourth Race—Kingston, Prince Royal.
Fifth Race—Natalie R., Mount Vernon.
Sixth Race—Virgie, Montague.
Seventh Race—Kittie Van, Sauterer.

First Race—Correction, Civil Service.
Second Race—Zoe, Rosiere.
Third Race—Orlie, Lady Longfellow colt.
Fourth Race—Kingston, Riley.
Fifth Race—Mount Vernon, Rocco.
Sixth Race—Montague, Virgie.
Seventh Race—Nellie Rio, Sauterer.
