THE CALEDONIAN.

Laws of the United States

Passed at the First Session of the Fortieth Congress.

CHAP. 7.—An act to provide for a District and a Circuit court of the United States for the District of Nebraska, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

That the state of Nebraska shall hereafter constitute one judicial district, and be called the district of Nebraska: and for said district a district judge, a marshal, and a district attorney of the United States, shall be appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said district of Nebraska shall be attached to and constitute a part of the eighth judicial circuit: and a term of the circuit court and district court of the United States for said district shall be held in the city of Omaha, in the state of Nebraska, on the first Monday of May, and on the first Monday of November, in each year.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Nebraska, and the judges thereof respectively, shall possess the same powers and jurisdiction and perform the same duties possessed and performed by the other circuit and district courts and judges of the United States, and shall be governed by the same laws and regulations.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the district judge appointed for the district of Nebraska shall receive as his compensation the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars a year, payable in four equal instalments, on the first days of January, April, July, and October of each year.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the marshal and district attorney of the United States, and clerk of the circuit and district courts, for the said district of Nebraska, shall severally possess the powers and perform the duties lawfully possessed and performed by similar officers in other districts of the United States, and shall for the services they may perform receive the fees and compensation allowed by the act entitled "An act to regulate the fees and costs to be allowed clerks, marshals, and attorneys of the circuit and district courts of the United States, and for other purposes," approved February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and fifty-three.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That all cases of appeal or writ of error, heretofore prosecuted, and now pending in the supreme court of the United States, upon any record from the supreme court of the territory of Nebraska, or which may hereafter be prosecuted from said court as herein allowed, may be heard and determined by the supreme court of the United States, and the mandate of execution or of further proceedings shall be directed by the supreme court of the United States to the circuit or district court of the United States for the district of Nebraska, or to the supreme court of the state of Nebraska, as the nature of said appeal or writ of error may require, and each of these courts shall be the successor of the supreme court of Nebraska territory as to all such cases, with full power to hear and determine the same, and to award mesne or final process thereon. And from all judgments and decrees of the supreme court of the territory of Nebraska, prior to its admission as a state, the parties to said judgments and decrees shall have the same right to prosecute appeals and writs of error to the federal courts as they had under the laws of the United States prior to the admission of said state of Nebraska into the Union.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That until a judge for said district of Nebraska shall be duly appointed, the district judge of the United States for the district of Iowa shall act as the district judge of Nebraska, and shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction and power in the district hereby created as he has in the district of Iowa.

Approved, March 25, 1867.

CHAP. 8—An act to exempt wrapping-paper, made from wood or cornstalks, from internal tax, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

That from and after the passage of this act, wrapping-paper made of wood or cornstalks, shall be exempt from internal tax.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That every national banking association, state bank, or banker, or association, shall pay a tax of ten per centum on the amount of notes of any town, city, or municipal corporation paid out by them after the first day of May, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, to be collected in the mode and manner in which the tax on the notes of state banks is collected.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That wrapping-paper made from any other material than that cited in the first section shall be also exempt from internal tax.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act, ladders made wholly of wood shall be exempt from internal tax.

Approved, March 26, 1867.

CHAP. 9.—An act in relation to the acknowledgment of Deeds in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

That hereafter acknowledgments of deeds for the conveyance of real estate in the District of Columbia may be taken by the recorder of deeds for said District, or by a single justice of the peace: and any such acknowledgment heretofore taken by a single justice of the peace is hereby made and declared to be a valid acknowledgment: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be held to impair the title of bona fide purchasers who, by conveyances and formal acknowledgments, have, prior to the passage of this act, acquired paramount titles under existing laws.

Approved, March 26, 1867.

At a trial in a divorce case, a witness, recently, in England, made the following reply: Mr. Sergeant Tindal—"He treated her very kindly, did he not?" Atkinson—"Oh, yes, very; he kissed her several times." Mr. Sergeant Tindal—"And how did she treat him?" Atkinson—"Well, she retaliated."

Farm, Garden and Kitchen.

The Famous Orange County Dairies.

A writer in the New York Independent writes as follows of the milk and dairy business in Orange county. The manner of making butter, does not, we apprehend, correspond altogether with the mode in vogue with some of our Vermont dairymen. He says:

"No county in this state has a higher reputation for its butter, or other products of the dairy, or commands higher prices, than that of Orange. Its milk trade is of increasing importance, and has been reduced to a perfect system. The dairymen milk their cows morning and evening, and let the milk stand until it is cool before sending it to the depot. Some use cool cellars, others use cool springs of water, in which the cans are put. The milk is sold to contractors, and delivered at the various depots daily. It is generally paid for by the contractors monthly.

The aggregate amount sold from that county yearly is over twenty-five millions of quarts.

Since the opening of the New York & Erie railroad through the county the business has been divided into milk and butter dairies. The milk sold in New York from here is deemed the richest and best.

These milk dairies are very profitable, yielding from $45 per cow per annum upward.

An enthusiastic writer, speaking of the excellence of the mode of management there says: 'There are many essential things connected with the dairies of Orange county. Farms naturally inclined to grass, an abundance of pure cold water, industry, perseverance, a close application to the business, and experienced dairy-maids. These are not found, generally, out of the county, and accounts for the inferiority of the product elsewhere.

Among the Orange county dairies all are found to assist—the men, the women, the boys, and the girls. They all join in milking and carrying the milk into the cellars: there the girls strain the milk, skim the cream, churn and work the butter, and pack it into tubs and firkins. The churning is generally performed by dog or horse-power.

The churns are large, generally barrel or two-barrel churns, worked with a dasher: none of your new-fangled things, of small capacities and smaller value, worked sitting down. A churning produces a large pile of butter, and the packages are readily filled. We have known dairies of from 40 to 125 cows, and their products ranged from 80 to 250 firkins per annum. These dairies, when marketed, yield to their proprietors enough money to purchase a farm; and no class of her citizens are more thriving and independent than the dairymen of Orange. They are generally beforehand, and have money to loan or to invest in real estate.

There is a method observed in the manufacture of Orange county butter. The cellar where the milk is kept is cool, well ventilated, clean. The milk is strained into pans containing from ten to twelve quarts each. When the weather is warm the pans are set on the cellar bottom: otherwise, on shelves. The milk is left until it becomes 'loppered,' then the milk and cream are churned together. Some dairywomen skim off the cream and part of the milk, and churn that: but the best butter is churned from milk and cream. The churn is filled half or two-thirds full with milk, and a pail of cold water added before starting to churn.

In cold weather warm water is put in. The churning is performed with a slow, regular motion, and proceeds for an hour to an hour and a half: when the butter comes, and another pail of water is added.

The butter is then taken out and washed through water in a large tray, and is then salted with about one ounce of pure Liverpool (Ashton) salt to each pound of butter. The salt is worked through the butter. It is then put in a cool place, and left to stand an hour. It is then carefully worked over, and set aside for five or six hours. It is worked again, and set in a cool place until the next morning, when it is packed. In working the butter, care is taken to work out all the milk, but not to work it too much, so as to break the grain and make it salvey. If the milk is left in, the butter will become rancid. If the grain is broken in working, it will be greasy or salvey. Butter worked just enough will be solid, sweet, yellow, and the drop of brine on it will be as clear as crystal. The butter is packed in white-oak firkins, the staves of which are selected, so as not to leak the brine. The firkins will weigh about eighteen to twenty pounds empty. They are soaked in cold water a few days before used by being filled with water. They hold from eighty to one hundred pounds of butter. When the firkin is filled, a linen cloth is placed over the butter, and on this a layer of salt an inch in depth is laid, made a little damp with cold water. The butter is then put away in a cool cellar, none of your up stairs butteries: but in a cool cellar, where it stands until marketed. Then the salt and cloth are taken off, a fresh cloth wet with brine is put on, and the firkins headed up. Great care is taken to keep the firkins perfectly clean, their outside as bright as when turned out by the cooper. No leaky firkins, or any that will filter the least particle of brine, are used; and consequently the butter goes to market in bright clean packages, and commands the highest price.'"

It is hereby enacted, &c.
Sec. 1. After the expiration of the charter of any bank chartered by this state, or after the termination of the existence of any such bank, agreeably to the laws of this state, such bank may cause notice to be published in all the weekly newspapers of the county where such bank is located, for one full year, setting forth that said bank will redeem its outstanding bills the day of the expiration of its charter or the date of the termination of its existence, and a copy of this act. And upon due publication of such notice, neither such bank nor its officers shall be liable to any action for the non-redemption of any of its outstanding bills, unless the same shall have been duly presented and payment thereof demanded within the year aforesaid, at the banking house of said bank.
Sec. 2. After the expiration of the charter, or after the termination of the existence of any such bank aforesaid, such bank shall cease to be subject to the operation, or liable to the provisions of the sixty-third section of chapter eighty-nine of the General Statutes.
Sec. 3. This act shall take effect from its passage.
Approved Nov. 19, 1866.
The notice is given in compliance with said act.
Dated at Lyndon this 6th day of December 1866.
