THE VALLEY FARMER.

Best Thing for Burns.

It may be put down as a settled fact that the very best application for all kinds of burns and scalds is an immediate application of dry wheat flour. It is, without controversy, better than any and all the "healing salves," turpentines, oils, "pain-killers," &c., that can be named. We speak positively on this point, because it is one decided by the best physicians, and we have had abundant practical proofs of its efficacy.

Heat disorganizes the flesh, deadens the cuticle or outer skin, and admits air which is irritating. A good coating of flour shuts out the air, soothes the irritation, and dries up the fluids thrown out. Do not imagine that "something healing" must be applied. Not all the salves in the world can mend broken flesh. You can stick together broken glass, or wood, with wax or glue. You can weld together severed iron, but no such treatment is applicable to flesh disorganized, cut, or burned away. Nature, so to speak, has a way of her own, and only one way to repair a breach in the flesh. The healing material comes from within. If the hand be cut, bring the severed parts together, hold them there steadily, cover up the part from the air and from external injury, and the healing will go on so long as there is no disturbance. If, from curiosity, or anxiety, or other cause you disturb the half-formed, new flesh, a sore will be the consequence.

We repeat, for all kinds of burns and scalds, however severe, put on only a thick coat of flour. If a hard, crusty mass be formed, so as to produce irritation, after a day or two wash off the surface carefully with blood-warm water, dry partially, and put on more flour; but never disturb the actual surface of the sore, until, when entirely healed, the scab falls off of its own accord. Our word for it, this treatment will best promote the cure of burns. But a short time since, a child upset a dish of boiling water into its bosom, producing a fearful scald upon the whole front of its body. The mother chanced to be a reader of the Agriculturist, and noted our remarks on this topic some two years ago. She immediately applied flour, and flour only, binding it on with a cloth loosely, so as not to produce irritation.—The child was soon soothed, and in a very few weeks was entirely healed, with scarcely a scar remaining. This is but one of many similar instances that have come to our knowledge from time to time.—[N. Y. Agriculturist.

Improving Old Orchards.

Desirable as pears, cherries and plums are, we can hardly count on very large and constant supplies of such fruit. Our climate, or soil, is so unfavorable to their growth, or they are infested with so many insects and diseases, and require so much care, that few farmers can devote sufficient attention to their culture. The apple must be our main dependence; and it is no mean dependence, either. Yet, strange to say, many orchards are treated with neglect. The trunks and limbs of trees are suffered to become mossy, the tops are allowed to grow up a dense mass of brush, and the fruit to remain of an inferior quality.

Now, there are few men who can really afford to keep such orchards. Why not break up the ground, and, if it is not thought best to let it lie fallow, then give it a coat of manure and raise some kind of hoed crop upon it. If possible, mulch the roots of each tree with old straw or chips. Once a year, at least, scrub the trunks with weak lye, or poash water, to remove the moss and rout the insects which harbor there. Then, as to pruning, there is enough to do, but it must be done in the right way. It will not answer to molest the trees with rough, nailed boots, and, ax in hand, hack away like a woodsman felling a forest. Tread on the limbs carefully, so as not to start the bark. Use a fine-toothed pruning saw; thin out the branches so as to leave an open, symmetrical head, and where large branches must be taken off, cover the wounds with grafting-wax, or a solution of gum-shellac. If the fruit is of inferior quality, graft in choicer sorts, beginning at the top, and grafting only one-third of the tree each year. It costs no more to raise good kinds of fruit than poor; the satisfaction and the income are ten-fold greater.

Fruit Trees From Cuttings.

We have often seen statements going the rounds of newspapers—sometimes introduced into a portion of the so-called agricultural press—that twigs cut from apple, pear and cherry trees, if seared with a hot iron, coated with wax, or if inserted in a potato and planted in the ground, would readily take root, and orchards of any variety of fruit might easily, cheaply, and speedily be raised. Our attention is called to this topic by several letters before us, asking if the statements are correct. We do not so much wonder that some people should give credence to this report, when it is well known that the quince, grape, willow, &c., strike quite freely from cuttings, and reasoning from analogy one might expect the same from the pear. Such, however, is not the case, for, with an occasional exception, only with a great deal of pains, under glass, can the cuttings of the above named fruit trees be made to grow; and even with this treatment, the proportion is so small, and the care and labor so great, that it is far more economical to produce fruit trees, with the exception of the quince, in the ordinary manner of grafting and budding seedlings, rather than attempt to grow them from cuttings, no matter what solution they are treated to, or what vegetable they are thrust into.

☞ "My tenants are a world of bother to me," said a testy landlady to her nephew.

"Quite likely; TEN AUNTS might be considered enough to bother any one," he replied.

☞ A drunken man recently tried to get a policeman to arrest his shadow. His complaint was, that an ill-looking scoundrel kept following him.

A MUFF—A thing that holds a young lady's hand without squeezing it. Pretty good definition, that.

☞ Down East, they put a fellow in jail for swindling. The scamp dried snow and sold it for salt.

Poison Antidotes.

Every one should be fully aware of the best remedies for some of the more common poisons, so as to be ready to act at once in any emergency. We will name some of these remedies—only one or two at a time, that each one may become fixed in the mind.—Read that thrilling sketch on page 203, and you will never forget that antidote to give for Corrosive Sublimate—rather, we think, you will never leave that "bug poison" where a child can possibly get to it. It is better to administer albumen (white of eggs) beat up with a little water, but no delay must be allowed. The only hope of counteracting this deadly poison lies in prompt action. If eggs are not on hand at once, give large and repeated doses of flour mixed with water, or better with sweet milk. Milk itself is a partial, if not complete antidote for corrosive sublimate.

ARSENIC.—The best antidote for this poison is a chemical substance called Hydrated Peroxide of Iron, freshly prepared, which can only be obtained of a druggist. But do not wait for this. While it is being sent for, and at the first moment after discovering that arsenic has been taken, pour down dose after dose of water slightly warmed, promoting vomiting by thrusting the finger or a feather into the throat. Keep up this until the stomach has been literally washed out, at least a dozen times. A friend of ours took a teaspoonful of arsenic through mistake, for cream of tartar, but discovering his error soon after, he ran to the stove and commenced drinking all he could pour down of lukewarm dish water, which happened to be there. As fast as this was thrown up he took another dose, and in this way actually swallowed and vomited half a pail full of water. He recovered without any other remedy. This treatment is good for most kinds of poison if adopted soon enough.—N. Y. Agriculturist.

☞ While the Queen of England was recently at Balmoral, and walking about her grounds, she accidentally met an old egg-woman on her way to the Castle, which she supplied with eggs. The Queen being in a humorous mood, determined to give the old woman, to whom she was so pleasant, a pleasant surprise. Accordingly, she asked her where she was taking so large a quantity of eggs to. The old woman bluntly replied:

"I am ganging to Balmoral, and these are for the Queen."

"I am very much in want of eggs," said Her Majesty, "and if you sell me these, I shall pay you double what the Queen gives!"

The old woman's eyes sparkled with joy as she declared that the lady could have them, and she would return and fetch another basket for the Queen.

Victoria drew a sovereign from her purse, and perfectly astonished the old woman by refusing to take any change. She asked where the eggs were to be taken, and the Queen replied:

"To Balmoral, to be left for me, the Queen."

The old egg-woman was bewildered. Raising both her hands in the air, and then clapping them together in astonishment and delight, she cried out:

"Gude Laird o' mercy! an' is it yer ain sel', Mrs. Albert?"

☞ She stood beside the altar when she was but sixteen. She was in love. Her destiny rested on a creature as delicate, and who had known as little of the world as herself. She looked lovely as she pronounced the vow.—Think of a vow from auburn hair, blue eyes, and pouting lips, only sixteen years old!

She stood beside the wash-tub when her twenty-fifth birthday arrived. The hair, the eyes, the lips were not calculated to excite the heart. Five cross young ones were about the house, crying—some breaking things, and one urging the necessity of an immediate supply of food. She stopped in despair, and tears trickled down her once plump and ruddy cheek. Alas! Nancy, early marriages are not the dodge. Better enjoy youth at home, and hold lovers at a proper distance until you have muscle, limb, and heart enough to face a frowning world and family. If a chap really cares for you, he can wait for two or three years, make presents, take you to concerts, and so on, till the time comes. Early marriages and early cabbages are tender productions.

A DEEP-EYED PHILOSOPHER.—A very sedate gentleman from the rural districts, yesterday, passing through one of our warehouses on Market-street, was arrested by a large number of "red-head copper dash" which obstructed his passage.

"How many barrels of whisky have you in store?" inquired our friend of an attache of the house, with an air of great interest.

"Three thousand," promptly replied the interrogated.

"Three thousand barrels," repeated the countryman, speaking very deliberately, "ten fights to the barrel is a low estimate, and how many fights is that?"

"Thirty thousand fights," promptly replied the mathematical clerk.

"Thirty thousand fights barreled up in one house! Heavens! what a war is in the prospective!" and he passed on in a very brown study.—[Nashville Banner.

☞ "I say, squire, what 'll you take fur that are dog of your'n?" said a Yankee peddler to an old Dutch farmer; "what 'll yeou take fur him? He aint a very good-lookin' dog, but what was yeou calk'latin' may be he mought fetch?"

"Ah!" said the Dutchman, "dat dog ish n't vort' not'ing most; he ish n't vort' you to buy 'um."

"Guess tew dollars would abeout get him; say, wouldn't it? I 'll give yeou that fur him."

"Yaash; he ish n't vort' dat."

"Well, I'll take him said the peddler."

"Shtop!" said the Dutchman;—"dere 's one t'ing about dat dog I gan 't sell."

"Oh! take off his collar; I don't want that," suggested the peddler.

"Take'n dat!" replied Mynheer; "he 's a poor dog, but I gan 't sell de wag of his tail ven I comes home."

DEFINITIONS FROM A POPULAR DICTIONARY.—Life—A time to make money. Money—The end of life. Man—A machine to make money. Woman—A machine to spend it. Children—Machines to spend it on. Economy—Buying things because they are cheap, whether you want them or not.

We have one of the largest and best stocks in the West. Our stock embraces the best works on THEOLOGY, MEDICINE, LAW, MECHANICS AGRICULTURE, HISTORY, TRAVELS, Tales, Memoirs, Philosophy, &c.

AND a complete assortment of all the most popular Miscellaneous books published. Our stock of SCHOOL BOOKS embraces all books of merit used in the West, from the spelling book to the lexicon. Our stock of stationery embraces every variety of Blank Books, from the single Memorandum Book to the large super-royal ledger, including every article used in the counting-room.

We have, for the country merchant, a full variety of Letter, Cap, and Note Papers, Envelopes, Wrapping Paper, Bonnet Boards, Ink, &c., &c.

Our own publications are too well known as works of the highest merit, to require more than an enumeration of the most prominent, which are:

Clarke's Commentaries, Dr. Dick's Complete works, Rollin's Ancient History, Plutarch's Lives, Spectator, Mosheim's Church History, Josephus, &c., &c.

We invite all who deal in or purchase books to give us a call, as we are confident we can offer them such inducements as shall be mutually beneficial. sept11-1y
