Catarrhal Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by Catarrh which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces. Send for circulars, free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

"Get Quick Officers."

A whole lot of the "get quick officers" of the American Expeditionary Force, are kicking like wild steers on General Pershing and demanding "investigation" of the General and his so-called "West Point Clique". The dazed fools. Jim crow lawyers and schoolteachers hurried to "officers training camps(?)" to get 2nd Lieut. commissions and then expected to boss the whole cheese. They expected to rank with the same men in 90 days as the regular army officers who had spent four years hard training at West Point and then years of service in the regular army. The scheme didn't work, and they are sore. The bottle babies. They are at best only amateurs and good for a cross fodder like the "drafted" days. The regular always did despise the rubes who imitated them, and always did.

Nearly a Hero.

"Hands up!"

The passengers on the Pullman car took in the situation at a glance and did exactly what the train robber told them to do.

At the points of his guns he relieved them of their valuables. But at the sight of one woman he paused with a start.

"Who are you, woman?" he demanded.

"My name is Mrs. Fay Bainter, the well known actress. Here are my jewels. Take them all."

The bandit held up his head proudly.

"No," he replied; "I may be a robber, but I am no press agent. Keep your wealth!" — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He Accepted the Apology.

A prominent New York lawyer is noted for his ready answers and skill in repartee. When a young practitioner he appeared before a pompous old judge, who took offense at a remark the lawyer made criticising his decision.

"If you do not instantly apologize for that remark, Mr. Blank," said the judge, "I shall commit you for contempt of court."

"Upon reflection, your honor," instantly replied Mr. Blank, "I find that your honor was right and I was wrong, as your honor always is."

The judge looked dubious, but finally said that he would accept the apology.

The Day and the Knight.

Lord Kelvin when a professor at Glasgow university was occasionally obscure and complex when the interest of a side issue led him off the beaten track. This was made the subject of an epigram which contrasted his methods with those of his assistant, Day, to his disadvantage. The occasion chosen was that of his return from having received his knighthood, and a student wrote upon the blackboard, "Work while it is yet Day, for the knight cometh when no man can work."

Root Crop Every Fourth Year.

Few persons realize that a large portion of Germany is but a sandy plain and her enormous crop yields due to the fact that for each three acres of cereals grown her farmers raise one acre of beet crops, thus producing a root crop on each field every fourth year. They grow sugar beets wherever possible and are the greatest producers of this vegetable in the world. In settings where there are no factories to which they can sell their sugar beets they grow beets or other root crops and feed them to stock.

How To Keep Well

"Keep the bowels open" is one rule of health recommended by all schools of medicine. Foley's Cathartic Tablets cleanse the bowels, sweeten the stomach and benefit the liver. For indigestion, biliousness, bad breath, bloating, gas or constipation, no remedy is more highly recommended. Fine for stout persons. Jos. A. Mehringer adv.

IS THIS TOWN A WAREHOUSE SUBURB OR NOT

By HONORE WILLSIE, Editor of the Delineator.

Two years ago the Delineator started an architectural series which we called The House That Grows. The plan was to present a house in three stages of growth, each stage being complete and habitable. One could live in the first stage until financially able to add the second, then the third. The idea was to satisfy the American desire for growth and improvement without sacrificing America's great need for permanent homes.

For the lack of homes is one of America's fundamental weaknesses. It goes hand in hand with our lack of family pride, and this breeds inevitably a lack of civic pride.

Community pride follows the love of home as surely as fine growth follows rich planting. And community pride dies where there is no community of interests.

The great complaint against the average suburban town is that it lacks interest in itself. You can't get the merchants and the townspeople to cooperate to any extent.

And the stores are poor and the suburban population is shifting and unreliable.

Doesn't this apply as well to the towns given over to mail order buying? Do you want your town, the town in which you have started your home, to thrive and improve? Well, it won't thrive and improve unless the tradespeople in your town are getting and giving a fair deal. Mail order buying turns your town into a suburb of a great city mail order house. It is taking out of your town the life blood, the circulation of which nourishes your home as well as those of your neighbors. It doesn't pay. That is why I'm glad The Delineator has excluded mail order announcements from the advertising columns. It has removed from our readers' homes a powerful temptation to buy away from home.

ROYAL RAIMENT FROM AMERICAN SPECIFICATIONS

Royal wardrobes from American dress patterns? Ridiculous!

Nevertheless it is a fact that for years the nobility of England, France, Germany and other European powers have been fashioning the garments of their women folks from identically the same tissue paper pattern that is on sale in practically every nook and corner of the United States.

The funny part of it is that, while the world recognizes that Paris originates style, few people realize that the distribution of style information and the adaptation of Paris creations to the world's millions of well-dressed women are entirely in the hands of Americans.

There is one sixteen story building in New York city entirely devoted to the business of making dress patterns and publishing magazines which go to the four corners of the earth regularly with style information gathered from the fashion centers of the world, particularly Paris. These magazines not only are read in the United States to the extent of 1,500,000 a month, but the counterpart of one of them goes regularly to England, France, Germany, Italy and the Spanish speaking countries in editions especially prepared in those languages.

Furthermore, the paper patterns, which reproduce the fashions illustrated and explained in this magazine, also go to all of these countries, where they outsell all similar magazines and patterns indigenous to those lands.

And the best part of it all is that the woman who lives in Paris, Tex., is enabled to buy the very latest pattern from the house of Butterick at the same time that the woman of Paris, France, is seeking the same pattern in the Avenue de l' Opera shop of the concern. An interesting exhibit at the New York plant is a collection of original letters from titled ladies of Europe ordering Butterick patterns or the foreign editions of The Delineator. There are so many of these letters from French, English, German, Austrian, Russian and Scandinavian noblewomen that the eleven vellum bound volumes in which they are kept are known as "Butterick's Peerage." One letter is from the British Royal household, adding that the present Prince of Wales as a child was dressed by Butterick patterns. This supremacy of a United States institution in fashion distribution is certainly gratifying to every red blooded American who believes in "America Over All."
