SONS OF ERIN.

Their Brilliant Celebration of St. Patrick's Day.

Ireland's Colors Displayed in All Parts of the City.

Twelve Thousand Irishmen Parade in New York Streets.

United Irish Societies in Procession in Brooklyn.

Impressive Scene at the Feast of St. Patrick in the Cathedral.

The bright rising sun shone this morning on a thousand flags of brilliant green, floating from as many peaks in the city of New York. It was the dawn of St. Patrick's Day, and side by side with the Stars and Stripes floated the harp-emblazoned colors of Ireland.

JOHN B. HICKEY.

In accordance with a time-honored custom Keeper Martin Keese ran up the flag of Erin on the City Hall, with the municipal flag on either side and the starry banner surmounting all on the flagstaff over the dome.

The green flag was flung to the breeze from the Emigrant Savings Bank in Chambers street, and from many other buildings of a public or semi-public character, while the colors of Ireland were displayed on every street from many windows and in the hands of thousands of men, women and children. A bit of bright green ribbon, knotted modestly in the buttonhole, or a sprig of shamrock in the hat-band denoted the genesis of a host of the sons and daughters of New York as they went about their duties or pleasures of the day.

The love of old Ireland descends from those born on the "old dart" to the children and the grandchildren, who never saw the Green Isle, but who have learned from the cradle to reverence it.

Congressman Bourke Cockran once said in an after-dinner speech that there were more Irishmen in New York than in Dublin, and the observant wayfarer might easily believe it to-day, for on every hand were these wearers of the emblem of Ireland, moving eagerly to and fro in preparation for the biggest and most elaborate celebration of the anniversary of the translation of the patron saint of the Island.

The Oldest Inhabitant, who rubbed his hands and predicted that it would be a rainy day to-day, because "it always rains on St. Patrick's Day," must have been discomfited when he arose this morning, for never did brighter March sun beam from a purer azure sky, nor balmier zephyr fan the cheek on a day in March.

ONE GRAND PARADE TO-DAY.

For once there was to be but one Irish parade in the metropolis, and early in the day men in uniforms, gay or stately, were seen in the streets on their way to the headquarters of their several organizations, patriotic, historic, social or benevolent. There were Men of Tipperary, the County Fermanagh Men, the Galway Men, the Corkonians, the Kerry Men and those who hailed from County Cavan, all filled with sweetest memories of the dear little Isle over the sea, though every man of them would repel the idea that their reverence for the land of their birth affected their love and honor of the land of their adoption, unless to make it stronger in their appreciation of the liberty enjoyed in America and denied to those left behind in Ireland.

There was to be, besides the big parade in which 10,000 sons of Erin were to participate, a half dozen Winter picnics, a dozen memorial meetings, with addresses suited to the day; a score of balls and parties in which the daughters as well as the sons of Ireland were to be joyous participants.

It mattered not to them whether those Irish scholars were right who contend that St. Patrick, whose original name was Succath, was an Irishman, as was probably the case, or those who insist that he was a Scot or a Welshman or a Gaul. He died an Irishman to the heart, 1,400 years or so ago, and he did more than any other man to raise Ireland to her place as the world's seat of learning, and every Irishman is proud to do him reverence.

And so there were tiny green flags stuck in the headgear of street-car and truck horses by patriotic drivers, and pretty girls wore green bows at their white throats to contrast with their rosy cheeks and Irish blue eyes.

THE GALLANT SIXTY-NINTH.

The first organized movement in honor of St. Patrick's festal day was made by the Sixty-ninth Regiment. The members assembled at the Tompkins Market Armory at 9 o'clock this morning in full dress uniform. Under the command of Col. Cavanagh the gallant Sixty-ninth, that showed how thoroughly American it was as well as Irish in the troublous days of thirty years ago, when it was a fighting regiment in the famous Irish Brigade, marched to St. Patrick's Cathedral.

There the regiment occupied the seats of honor as the invited guests of Archbishop Corrigan, at the national feast, celebrated with a pontifical high mass.

Archbishop Corrigan officiated, with Father Lavelle, rector of the cathedral, as assistant priest; Fathers Daly and McMahon, aides-de-camp of honor; Father Connelly deacon, Father P. Daly, sub-deacon; Hobart-Hopkins McDonnell and Father Newey, masters of ceremonies.

Rev. Dr. Henry A. Brann, of St. Agnes' Church, was the panegyrist.

Company B, Capt. Pierce F. Leonard commanding, was drawn up in the nave of the cathedral and stood at parade rest during the celebration of the mass and until the consecration. They presented arms at the elevation of the Host. There was a roll of drums and a flare of bugles, and at a signal from Capt. Leonard the salute was given as the Host was elevated, the soldiers striking on one knee.

At the close of the services the congregation was dismissed and emerged from the Cathedral, while Dayne's Sixty-ninth Regiment Band played inspiriting Irish airs. The whole was very impressive.

THE BIG PARADE.

But the special interest of the day was centered in the parade of 12,000 Irishmen, under the auspices of the United Irish Societies, comprising the forty-nine divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Irish County Associations and other social and benevolent societies of the city, besides several organizations invited from other places to participate.

The headquarters and meeting-places of the several organizations are located in all parts of the city, and each was the center of activity in the early day, while the halls were surrounded by lads and lassies, friends of the members.

The parade was to be under the command of Grand Marshal John B. Hickey, with Michael Doran and Thomas Murphy as aides, and the starting point Washington Square.

Here was the centre towards which all thoroughfares seemed to run during the middle of the day, and the beautiful park where the grand Washington Arch is being erected was thronged with patriotic and merry-hearted gathered to do honor to the paraders and the day which the parade commemorates.

The route of the parade extended from Washington Square to Jones's Wood, at Sixty-ninth street and East River, and along the route the residences and business places were decked in gala attire for the occasion.

AT THE REVIEWING POINT.

The parade was to be reviewed at the cottage in the Union Square plaza, and here was another brilliant scene, the mothers, wives, sisters, sweethearts and daughters of the paraders having gathered about the cottage in thousands.

Mayor Grant reviewed the parade from the piazza of the cottage, surrounded by Commissioner Tom Brennan, Commissioner Thomas F. Gilroy, President Arnold, of the Board of Aldermen; most of the members of the Board of Aldermen and several State and municipal officials and eminent citizens.

The Queens County delegation had Michael Callaghan for its Grand Marshal, and presented a fine appearance.

MUSIC FILLED THE AIR.

The paraders marched to the music of no less than forty-six bands and fife and drum corps, and all along the route lay between walls of happy faces on either side of the way, while flags and handkerchiefs waved, and there was a constant kaleidoscope of horses and clapping hands.

The end of the parade at Jones's Wood was but the beginning of a tremendous demonstration, over which County Delegate Edward L. Carey had been selected to preside, and Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan, Congressmen Dunphy and Campbell, Police Justice Gedney, Judge Martine and others had been assigned to speak. The proceeds of this demonstration are to go to the fund for the projected Hibernian Hall, and there was dancing and singing, bagpipe playing and a general jollification for the good cause.

There is another demonstration at Sulzer's Harlem River Park, and the day is being celebrated in a festival, with Irish National games, a military drill, dancing and general merriment there.

Besides these events which begin during the day and will continue far into the night, there are many other delightful celebrations of the day.

The St. Joseph Literary Society, of Manhattan college, celebrating at Hammerstein's Harlem Opera-House this afternoon, and many other Irish societies are having home celebrations.

THE UNITED IRISH SOCIETIES.

To-day's parade is under the general auspices of the Convention of Irish Societies, comprising representatives from forty-nine divisions of the A. O. H. and other civic Irish Societies of the city and county of New York. These are the officers:

Lawrence T. Fanlon, President; Jeremiah Driscoll, First Vice-President; William Neilon, Second Vice-President; Bernard Ford, Recording Secretary; James S. Mullen, Financial Secretary; Michael Garvey, Treasurer, and James Flanagan, Sergeant-at-Arms.

The grand pageant is under the immediate supervision of Grand Marshal John J. Hickey, and his aides, Michael Doran and Charles Murphy, assisted by Special Aides John Dorian, Patrick Costello and Patrick F. White, and these aides from the different societies in line:

New York A. O. H.—Thomas Carey, Owen Reagan, John Mooretern, John Creeden, Michael Kelley, John Hughes, Thomas Farren, James J. Scanlan, Samuel Simms, Martin Sears, Anthony Flanagan, John Quinlan, Thomas Stapleton, Michael J. Barry, Patrick McKeown, Patrick Cole, John Gray, William Leary, Patrick Brown, John Darrah, Matthew F. Brady, Patrick Nevins, Nicholas McCabe, John O'Neilly, Martin Ryan, Patrick McGovern, Joseph Meins, John Lyons, Terrence Flannagan, Andrew Sheridan, Patrick Dowd, John Farrell, Thomas Connelly, John Mahon, Charles Breslin, Bernard McQuillan, Patrick McConnell, Charles McDermott, Michael Reilly, Cornelius Gallagher, Dennis Burns, Patrick McElligott, John W. Hughes, Patrick McGovern, Francis Delin, Hugh McCourt, William Kilduff, Michael Dunn, John Holland, John Curley, Richard Higgins, George Conley, John McGovern, Thomas Quinn, James McKenna. Queens County A. O. H.—Patrick J. Smith; St. Columba's R. C. T. A. B., William Tuohy; County Fermanagh R. C. T. A. B., James Cassidy; Tipperary Men's Association, David Flynn; Young Irishmen's B. Association, John Carney; Young Men's County Cavan B. Association, Patrick Clark.

Grand Marshal Michael Callaghan, of the Queens County A. O. H., which is given the position of honor, sent Hugh Gallagher and John McNally as special aides to Grand Marshal Hickey.

FORMATION OF THE PARADE.

The line of procession runs at Washington Square, right resting on Waverley place and Fifth avenue, in this order:

Platoon of Police.

Grand Marshal Hickey and Aides.

Officers of Convention of Irish Societies and Guests, in carriages.

Queens Co. A. O. H., Michael Callaghan, Grand Marshal. Bernard Freeman, First Aide, Peter Kelly, Second Aide.

Marshals, Philip Smith, C. D. Hugh Gallagher, R. S. Mullen, John White, F. J. Johnson.

Aides, James Gallagher, Thomas Sullivan, John Walsh, Luke J. Connolton, Martin Carroll, John Moore, Dennis Carroll, William Beecy, James Easton.

A. O. H., city and county of New York, forty-nine divisions.

Young Men's County Cavan Benevolent Association, John Maguire, Captain.

Hibernian Rifles, Company A, Band.

Hibernian Rifles of Queens County.

Alliance Guard, Thomas Kirwin, Captain.

When the procession moves be sure to make way for the military, under the command of Capt. Francis McCleary, will pass to the right of the civic societies to their head and take their place directly behind the Grand Marshal and aides, officers and guests, as escorts. Each society, in the order named, then falls into line.

The line of march is as follows:

Up Fifth avenue to Thirteenth street.

Thirteenth street to Broadway.

Broadway to Ninth street.

Around Washington Monument to Broadway.

Broadway to Twelfth street, passing reviewing stand.

Seventeenth street to Fourth avenue.

Fourth avenue to Eighteenth street.

Eighteenth street to Fifth avenue.

Fifth avenue to Fifty-seventh street.

Fifty-seventh street to Jones's Wood.

AT JONES'S WOOD.

After the parade there will be a celebration of the association of Irish societies at Jones's Wood Colosseum and Washington Park. Speaking, singing, dancing, games and other amusements will be the order of the afternoon and evening. The music is furnished by Prof. Morris and his prize-winners are devoted to the proposed new Hibernian Hall.

Meanwhile the A. O. H., of which John Coyle is County Delegate, will begin its annual Irish festival and games at Sulzer's Harlem River Park and Casino at Second avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, and the staged old Irish time-tried air to grow better yet towards morning.

Chairman Denis J. Hanlon had arranged an elab-rate programme of amusements for both afternoon and evening. It includes racing, shooting matches, tug-of-war games, hornpipe, reel, jig and other dancing with fiddlers and bagpipers galore for afternoon and dancing to the inspiring music of Bayne's Sixty-ninth Regiment Band and military drills in the evening.

Among the prominent invited guests are Maurice F. Wilmore, of Philadelphia, National Delegate; M. J. Slattery, of Albany, National Secretary; Edward Hoan, of Syracuse, State Delegate; F. H. Nolan, of Port Jervis, State Secretary; John Cohen, State Treasurer—all of the A. O. H.—and officers and members of the Sixty-ninth Regiment.

THE EVENING'S FESTIVITIES.

Other events this evening comprise many dinners, balls, dances, receptions and entertainments.

Prominent among these is the ninth annual dinner of the St. Patrick Club at the Hotel Brunswick. Justice James Fitzgerald will be the principal orator of the evening, and William Geoghegan, the club's Second Vice-President, will read an original poem written for the occasion. Many other orators, statesmen, business and professional men will be present, and a pot of genuine shamrock from the old country will be distributed among the guests.

The eighteenth annual reception of the Second Regiment Irish Volunteers will be held at Adelphi Hall, Broadway and Fifty-second street. Junior Advocate-elect Thomas H. Dermody, of the U. A. of A., will speak.

The Emerald Club will hold a ball at Irvin-hall's Hall, One Hundred and Seventieth street and Third avenue.

A St. Patrick's Day reception will be given at Nilsson Hall, Fifteenth street, near third avenue.

Judge Phelps, who lately lost his wife and mother, will receive a benefit at the Bleecker Building, 278 Bleecker street. There will be plenty of boxing. John Fagan will play the bagpipes and Tom Fitzsimmons will dance. A grand time will wind up the evening.

Rev. Dr. Daniel F. Hurley will lecture on "Ireland, Its Saint and Its People," at St. Rose's Church, in aid of the St. Vincent de Paul Conference Fund of the parish.

Rev. James A. Dougherty will lecture on the "Saints of Ireland" at the Church of the Nativity this evening.

"The Apostle of Ireland" will be the subject of a lecture by Rev. Daniel J. Sheehy at the Church of Our Lady of the Scapular.

Rev. D. Ray will lecture on "St. Patrick" at St. Anthony's Church, Sullivan street, this evening.

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick dine at Delmonico's; the Friends of Ireland at Rogers', and the Knights of St. Patrick at the Metropolitan Hotel, this evening. At the latter dinner Assistant District-Attorney Washburn Lynn will respond to the toast of "Ireland."

St. Anselm's Union will hold an entertainment and reception at Ehlinger's Casino, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street and Third avenue.

St. Patrick's Alliance of America will give an entertainment and reception at Clarendon Hall.

The Westmeath Men's Association will give a ball at the Lyceum Opera-House.

The Gaelic Society will have a celebration at its club-house, 17 West Twenty-eighth street.

SHAMROCKS FROM THE OLD SOD.

The Feast of St. Patrick was celebrated with peculiar zest to-day by Miss H. A. Devine, of 33 Amsterdam avenue, who received a tiny and beautiful shamrock as a St. Patrick's gift from her brother, D. C. Devine, a schoolmaster in Tubbercurry, Sligo, Ireland. It is a slip of shamrock, interwoven with Irish moss and forget-me-nots in bloom, neatly arranged in a circular frame. The envelope of the shamrock was these lines, composed by Mr. Devine:

Twas plucked where first you see the light,
Where oft you played in days of yore,
Where oft you chased in glad delight,
A shamrock on the Irish shore.

It comes the love from our Ireland,
Would fondest kisses as oft before,
You could this "Patrick's Day" hand
Full shamrock on our Irish shore.

But ah! Tis sad! How sad to feel
That far from it and behind it, no more
Roll on our native hills, where
And shall look upon our Irish shore.

Yet something whispers, friend, good cheer,
And hope now fills my bosom again,
Yes, said dear, the time draws near
When you'll call shamrock on our shore.

When you, as in the olden days,
Will join in "Moll Ba in Ballore,"
And gaily with your wonted ways
While calling shamrocks on our shore.

When you will feel the friendly grasp,
Hospitality's wealth of joy galore,
And kindling heart to heart clasp
Like shamrocks to the Irish shore.

A FAVORITE HOUSE TODAY.

Over at Guttenberg's race track probably the most interesting house among to-day's entries is St. Patrick, a clever colt coming from Patterson's Stables. St. Patrick is by St. Blaise out of Patchen, and was entered in the second race at 97 pounds, but drop for a purse of $400.

BROOKLYN'S PARADE.

All Factions United to Do Honor to Ireland's Patron Saint.

The burying of the hatchet between the two factions of the A. O. H. was expected to results in the most successful St. Patrick's Day parade ever seen in the city of Churches.

Some time ago the Canton street wing gave the Gold street wing of the organization to understand the impossibility of the efforts of the Federation of Irish County Societies, and county ties and associations proved stronger than petty local disagreements and all united under one banner to do honor to Ireland's patron saint.

Grand Marshal Lawrence F. Carroll and his aides, J. McKenna and P. Boyle, were appointed for the purpose of bringing the hostile factions of the A. O. H. together, its members did not participate in the parade to-day.

The occurrence occasioned no little comment and it was explained that the Federation did not march because it had been consulted in the matter of the line which its members believe they should have been accorded a more prominent position by the A. O. H. leaders.

The annual dinner of the St. Patrick society will be held in the Assembly Rooms of the Arlington Hotel. Congressman William McAdoo, Col. L. S. Catlin, Rev. Dr. J. M. Kiely, Judge Pratt, and others will speak.

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick will dine at Arion Hall and the Knights of St. Patrick will dine at the Carlton Hotel.

POINTERS ON THE RACES.

A Fine Holiday Programme for Guttenburg To-Day.

The Shamrock Stakes for Two-Year-Olds One of the Features.

The Shamrock Stakes for two-year-olds at half a mile, with $1,000 added, is the feature of the holiday card at Guttenburg to-day. In it are entered the best of the youngsters now in training, and five of the seven have scored brackets during their short career at the hilltop track.

The race, therefore, is bound to be a good one and especially interesting. The mile handicap also figures prominently on the programme. G. W. Cook, Hanscom, Miss Belle, Drizzle, Woodcutter and Mohican are named dogs. If this be fair the starter the race will be a hot one from flag fall to finish.

The track yesterday was in excellent condition, and it should be in first-class shape to-day.

The full list of entries and selections are as follows:

First Race—Purse $400; selling allowances; four and a half furlongs.

	125		115
Moselle	120	Maid of Altonwood	118
Equanity	120	Ottawa	116
Coldstream	120	Onward	107
Noonday	120	Arthur Davis	107
Sandes	120	Turk II	107
Lassoter	113	Vanculse	104
Short Farms	112	Naja II	120
Headlight	110

Arthur Davis and Vanculse seemed to be pitched in this event at the light weights they are to carry. The writer believes that Arthur Davis has the most speed, and will look for him to defeat Vanculse. Maid of Altonwood may be third.

Second Race—Purse $400; selling allowances; six furlongs.

Jay F. Dee	113	Marie Lovell	99
Brooklyn	108	St. Patrick	97
Brize	104	Never Mind	96
Bishop	98	Little Fred	96

This race ought to be won by Jay F. Dee. He was scratched a few days ago because of lameness, but he has had a fair chance to work out of it.

The runner up may be Marie Lovell, and Brooklyn ought to be close up in the money.

Third Race—Shamrock Stakes, for two-year-olds, half a mile.

Gold Leaf	110	Harlington	110
Dollond	110	Drizzle	107
Hey Dis Mar	110	Lizzetta	107
Elk Knight	110

The Shamrock Stakes may be won by Forty-one Washington's birthday he defeated a better field in very easy style. Elkton, a, which is good, finishing boy up, may be second, and Elk Knight is an outsider.

Fourth Race—Purse $300; handicap; one mile.

Mohican	115	Hanscom	107
Raleigh	112	Mohican	104
Miss Belle	111	Woodcutter	104

The handicap should be won by Drizzle. As the writer stated the other day, he outclasses all the others, and again he has the weight for the weight. Woodcutter should be second and Miss Belle third.

Fifth Race—Purse $400; selling allowances; seven and a half furlongs.

Khaftan		Joe Duke John	105
Ed Leigh Bridge	108	Satisfied	102
Lelah		Joe Dreyer	99
Miss Shelby colt	105	John Hickey	94

Khaftan ought to win this race without much difficulty from Lady Pulsifer. Who should beat Duke John for the place.

Sixth Race—Purse $400; 40 lb. above the scale; selling; one and a quarter miles; over hurdles.

Fallon	142	Mohican	123
Wheelman	140	Bonnie Lassie	127
Winslow	135	Gladiator	124
Gladiator	130	Pat Cook	124

The hurdle race may be won by Bonnie with Winslow second and Pat Cooley third.

Probable Winners at Gloucester.

Judging by the social conditions of weight, form and distance the races at Gloucester Monday may result as follows:

First Race—Flamingo, Nobe Duke, Passmore.
Second Race—Marie Louise, Dallas, Santa Rita.
Third Race—Ben Ali, Jay F. Dee, Lowell.
Fourth Race—Bob, a, Pagan Kelly, Bravo.
Fifth Race—Joe Cook, Defendant, Torchlight.
Sixth Race—Tough Girl, Dog Hoard, Village King.

Morning Papers' Selections.

First Race—Arthur Davis, Sunday.
Second Race—Dallas, St. Patrick.
Third Race—Frances, Forty.
Fourth Race—G. W. Cook, Miss Belle.
Fifth Race—Khaftan, Lady Pulsifer.
Sixth Race—Winslow, Gladiator.

First Race—Arthur Davis, Turk II.
Second Race—Jay F. Dee, Marie Lovell.
Third Race—Forty, Helen.
Fourth Race—Drizzle, Miss Belle.
Fifth Race—Khaftan, Lady Hickey.
Sixth Race—Fallon, Winslow.

First Race—Noonday, Coldstream.
Second Race—Bishop, Little Fred.
Third Race—Elkton, Harlington.
Fourth Race—Miss Belle, Woodcutter.
Fifth Race—Khaftan, Lady Pulsifer.
Sixth Race—Winslow, Fallon.

First Race—Turk II, Vanculse.
Second Race—Jay F. Dee, Bishop.
Third Race—Forty, Elk Knight.
Fourth Race—Drizzle, Woodcutter.
Fifth Race—Lady Pulsifer, Khaftan.
Sixth Race—Winslow, Fallon.

First Race—Arthur Davis, Maid of Altonwood.
Second Race—Jay F. Dee, Little Fred.
Third Race—Forty, Harlington.
Fourth Race—Drizzle, G. W. Cook.
Fifth Race—Khaftan, John Hickey.
Sixth Race—Fallon, Bonnie.

SEC. FOSTER AT HOME AGAIN.

Arrived, Safe and Well, on the Spree This Morning.

Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster arrived in New York this morning from England on the Spree, and received a rousing welcome from his friends.

The Spree was reported off Fire Island at 10.40 last night, and did not get up to quarantine until nearly four o'clock a. m. The revenue cutter Manhattan, which had been assigned to take the friends of the Secretary down the bay to meet him, left the Barge office shortly after midnight. Owing to the lateness of the hour only a few persons went down. They were R. J. Wynne, Secretary Foster's private secretary, Frank Spratt, the private secretary of the Collector, Chief Clerk Stocks, of the Treasury Department, and W. B. Howell.

SECRETARY FOSTER.

When they reached the Spree they found that the Secretary had gone to bed and was sound asleep, so they did not disturb him until daybreak, when he made his appearance.

He received his friends in the saloon and took an early breakfast together.

At 7 o'clock the steamer Laura M. Starin hove alongside the Spree, with Howard Carroll aboard, and the boat was placed at the disposal of the Secretary and his friends. He accepted the invitation of Mr. Carroll and at once went aboard the Starin and started for the city.

With the Secretary were Dr. John B. Hamilton, ex-Surgeon-General; L. B. Smith and W. E. McLanahan, Chief of the Warrant Department of the Treasury, who had accompanied him on his trip to Europe. He has been away just about a month.

The Secretary was looking strong and robust, and said he had gained wonderfully in health since he went away. His main object, he said, in going abroad was to get rest and a change.

Some one noticed a bruise over his left eye, which had rather a suspicious appearance, and inquired what had caused it. "It was a little accident I met with on the way over," replied the Secretary. "We had an exceedingly rough passage, and two days ago we encountered some terrible weather. The ship was on her beam ends some of the time, and we were shaken up in a lively fashion.

"Once we had a terrible fall and I was thrown from my feet. My head just grazed the side of the cabin and you see the result. It was not much of a bump and has given me no trouble.

"Several other passengers and some of the sailors were bruised by being thrown about, but no one was seriously injured. I was very glad when we finally got in last night."

The Starin landed the party at the foot of West Twenty-second street at 8.30, and carriages were in waiting to take the travelers to the Fifth Avenue Hotel. At that hour the Secretary was met by his wife and daughter who had driven down from the hotel with Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Oliver W. Spaulding, Commissioner of Pensions Tanner, Horace Phillips and several others, who accompanied the party to the hotel.

RECEPTION TO FORESTERS.

Company C, Fourteenth Regiment, to Entertain Sarsfield Court No. 7,571.

The members of Court Geo. P. Sarsfield No. 7,571, A. O. F. of A., are making active preparations for the concert and reception to be tendered them by Company C, Fourteenth Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., at the armory, North Portland avenue and Adelphia place, Brooklyn, on Monday night, April 18. The officers of the Supreme and Grand Courts have been invited, as have also many military officers.

The committee having the matter in charge is making every effort to make this concert and reception surpass anything of the kind ever held heretofore in Brooklyn.

Seventy-five New Doctors.

March 24 will be Commencement Day for Long Island Medical College graduates. The customary exercises will be held in the Academy of Music. The term closed last week and to-day the final examination will take place. There are about seventy-five who, after the exercises, will be entitled to affix to M.D. their names.

Its Third Annual Ball.

The Tuxedo Club Baseball and Social Club will give its third annual ball in honor of the occasion on the new Tuxedo Hall, Nineteenth street, near Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, Thursday, March 24. Music will furnish the dance music and a special 25-cent fare to Manhattan.

News Notes from Everywhere.

Mr. Bolles, United States Minister to Denmark, is expected to arrive in Washington next week.

Mr. Lyman Hodges, New York, who married Miss Phillips, of Albany, is lost, and his friends are anxious for his safety.

Mr. Hodges is a nephew of Mr. Hodges, of Brooklyn.

Mr. J. W. Attaway, of Mobile County, Ala., died from hydrophobia in Arkansas and Texas.

Prof. Henry, of Lexington, Ky., was killed in a horse race in Mexico.

The Great Northern Railroad System is now operating 6,000 miles of main line.

Lorenzo Doughty, United States Marshal, has resigned his office, and Deputy Marshal Hoxie, Hale, Lane, Lord and others are mentioned as likely to be chosen with a view to the approaching election in which Republican Marshal Hoxie will be a candidate.

Seven in four of snow has fallen at Guthrie, O.T., since yesterday morning. Indian is much suffering.

Lottery Manager Dominici, of Louisiana, says that the Supreme Court of the State, which has open bids, will remain until the Courts decide the question.

HANGED TO A STAKE.

Servant-Girl Murderer Schneider Executed at Vienna.

Lassoed by a Silken Cord—His Frightful Death Struggle.

Four Minutes to Strangle Him—An Executioner in Kid Gloves.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

VIENNA, March 17.—Taking the trial of the Schneiders, Franz and Rosalie, for the murder of servant girls attracted to the court room such crowds as have seldom been equalled in numbers at any trial ever held here, the execution of the man this morning caused but little but little interest.

At 6.30 o'clock a small crowd collected outside the gloomy law courts in Landesgerichtstrasse, attracted by mortal curiosity. They could see nothing of the execution. All the approaches to the building were strongly guarded, and the court yards were filled with military.

A small courtyard in the centre of the Law Courts had been selected as the place of execution. A broad white stake was firmly imbedded in an angle of the court and was surmounted by a large spike.

A detachment of military formed a cordon a short distance from the stake. Their duty was to keep back the eighty privileged spectators of the execution. These consisted of officials, barristers and reporters.

At 7 o'clock Seyfried, the executioner, with his assistants, entered the court-yard. He was followed by the Judges before whom Schneider and his wife had been tried and a number of the highest officials. Then came Schneider, his strong frame trembling and his face ghastly pale. He was attended by a priest, but his mind was dazed with fear and and it is doubtful if he understood what was being said.

When the condemned man had reached a point in front of the stake the executioner, who wore a high silk hat, fine clothing and kid gloves, stepped up to him and dexterously pinioned his hands. The executioner's assistants, who were two horse slaughterers, then seized Schneider and placed him directly in front of the stake.

The condemned man was lifted from the ground and a fearful scene followed.

Schneider kicked his legs in every direction and tried frantically to escape from the grasp of the brawny men who held him. But his efforts were fruitless, and then he shrieked: "Oh, no, in God's name! I'll say anything."

This seems did not last long, for Seyfried fitched up a set of steps that stood behind the stake and threw the first end of a silken loop which was attached to the stake around Schneider's throat, lassoing him as he was held aloft by the assistants.

No black cap was used, the executioner making his hands do duty in its stead. As the noose passed around Schneider's neck the two horse-slaughterers dropped himself pressed his left hand heavily over the jaw and mouth of the victim, while his right hand covered the forehead and eyes.

At the same time the assistants grasped the hanging man by his arms and legs and pulled downward with all their strength. Held in this position Schneider was unable to move and he was strangled to death. The doctors in attendance say that he was dead in four minutes.

The face of the dying man could be seen between the fingers of the executioner, and every change in the color of the flesh was discernible.

It was a horrible sight, and many of the spectators were compelled to turn away.

After Schneider had been suspended for five minutes Seyfried, who during the whole scene was perfectly cool, twice laid his ear against Schneider's face until he was convinced that the man was dead and the law satisfied. Then he relaxed his grasp of the head and descended the steps, joining his assistants, who in the mean time had let go of the legs and arms, and Schneider's body was left hanging from the stake.

A priest read the service for the dead, and upon its conclusion the soldiers forced the spectators out of the court-yard.

Rosalie Schneider, the wife and partner in the crimes for which her husband paid the penalty with his life, is serving a sentence of life imprisonment, one of the provisions of her sentence is that for one day in every week she shall be subjected to solitary confinement in a dark cell.

English Poachers Hanged for the Murder of Two Gamekeepers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, March 17.—The appeals made to the Home Secretary to grant a reprieve in the case of Charles Rayner and Frederick Egerton, the poachers who were condemned to death for the killing of Joseph Crawley and William Puddephatt, gamekeepers of an estate at Fistones, were of no avail, and the two men were hanged at Oxford at 8 o'clock this morning.

Both men were calm, and they repeated in fervent tones the responses to the service read by the chaplain of the jail. At the signal the drop fell and death was almost instantaneous.

LIVERPOOL'S MURDER MYSTERY.

Excitement Over the Case Shows No Signs of Abating.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LIVERPOOL, March 17.—The excitement caused by the discovery yesterday of the five bodies buried under the floor of the house at Bath Hill is the talk of the town of Liverpool, shows no signs of abatement whatever, and further developments in the case are eagerly awaited.

It was transpired that before coming to England Williams, the man whose arrest at Melbourne led to the unearthing of the bodies, was living in Sydney, N. S. W. Shortly after he left that city his wife and four children disappeared, and it was supposed that they had left with Williams for England.

Rumors of an intended marriage to a young girl named Mather had reached Sydney, and it was naturally supposed that Mrs. Williams and her children had left for Liverpool to prevent his consummation of this crime.

The police expect to prove that the bodies found yesterday are those of the wife and children, and that Williams killed them in order to carry out his intention to marry Miss Mather without molestation.

Williams did marry the girl in question a short time after he left Melbourne, where he visited in order to marry another girl. It was his arrest in this city which led to the discoveries here.

The theory that Williams might be the real "Jack the Ripper" put forward yesterday, has intensified the excitement over the case.
