SEC. FOSTER AT HOME AGAIN.

Arrived, Safe and Well, on the Spree This Morning.

O'Donovan Rossa Waited in Vain for a Talk About "Flannel Mouths."

Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster arrived in New York this morning from England on the Spree, and received a rousing welcome from his friends.

The Spree was reported off Fire Island at 10.40 last night, and did not get up to Quarantine until nearly 1 o'clock a. m. The revenue cutter Manhattan, which had been assigned to take the friends of the Secretary down the bay to meet him, left the Barge Office shortly after midnight. Owing to the lateness of the hour only a few persons went down. They were R. J. Wynne, Secretary Foster's private secretary; Frank Sperry, the private secretary of the collector; Chief Clerk Stocks, of the Treasury Department, and W. B. Howell.

When they reached the Spree they found that the Secretary had gone to bed and was sound asleep, so they did not disturb him until daybreak, when he made his appearance.

He received his friends in the saloon and took an early breakfast together.

At 7 o'clock the steamer Laura M. Starin hove alongside the Spree, with Howard Carroll aboard, and the boat was placed at the disposal of the Secretary and his friends. He accepted the invitation of Mr. Carroll and at once went aboard the Starin and started for the city.

With the Secretary were Dr. John B. Hamilton, ex-Surgeon-General; L. B. Smith and W. F. McLanahan, Chief of the Warrant Department of the Treasury, who had accompanied him on his trip to Europe. He has been away just about a month.

The Secretary was looking stocky and robust, and said he had gained wonderfully in health since he went away. His main object, he said, in going abroad was to get rest and change.

Some one noticed a bruise over his left eye, which had rather a suspicious appearance, and inquired what had caused it. "It was a little accident I met with on the way over," replied the Secretary. "We had an exceedingly rough passage, and for days and days encountered some terrible weather. The ship was on her beam ends some of the time, and we were shaken up in a lively fashion.

"One wave had a terrific force, and I was thrown from my berth. My head just grazed the side of the cabin and you see the result. It was not much of a hurt, and has given me no trouble.

"Several other passengers and some of the sailors were bruised by being thrown about, but no one was seriously injured. I was very glad when we finally had in the Edgar."

The Starin took all the parts of the feast of West Twenty-second street, State and carriages were in waiting to take the travelers to the Fifth Avenue Hotel. At the door the Secretary was met by his wife and daughter who had driven down from the hotel, with Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Oliver W. Stoughton, Collector Hendricks, George O. Travis, Bolivar Biglin and several others, who accompanied the party to the hotel.

The Secretary said he was tired out and retired immediately to his room, where he remained during the morning, positively refusing to see any reporter or even his friends. Mrs. Foster said he was quite well.

Among those who called were Thomas C. Platt and several local politicians.

One of the most persistent inquiries for the Secretary's arrival was O'Donovan Rossa, who had secured a pass from the police to go down and meet the Spree. He was found standing disconsolate on the end of the pier at the Barge Office, with a dozen friends waiting for the revenue cutter to come in.

When he heard that the Secretary had been taken off to the Starin and was on his way to town he pocketed his Fifth Avenue Hotel, and hung around the Barge Office all the day long to get a chance at the Secretary, buttonholding every member of the party who came in sight.

"I have been tempted," he said, "to write a few lines to Secretary Foster regarding his conduct in not accepting the invitation of the Clan-na-Gael to be the guest of the Irish people of this city. I have been offered free lodging, free drinks and free cigars, and I thought I would like to see the Secretary of the Treasury who would be so foolish as to refuse such a generous offer from the Irish people.

"I must see the Secretary and tell him my opinion of his action, and I shall do so at the first opportunity I get. I shall tell him that the Irish people in this city are not to be trifled with, and that he will find it to his advantage to be on good terms with them."

Rossa was informed that the Secretary was quite well, but was not in a fit condition to be interviewed. He said he would call at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and try to see the Secretary.

BASED ON PORTER'S CENSUS.

Yet the Republicans Object to the Proposed Congress Districts.

Exciting Contest Expected in the Manhattan Club Election.

Now that the details of Gov. Flower's Congress districts have been made public, Republican partisans propose to be as willing to accept redistricting as they were when it was shown and proved that it would gerrymander Democrats in inevitably, unless Republican and fair redistricting followed.

They say that the most of the congressional representatives in Greater New York and that the bill which was introduced in the Legislature yesterday does not take into account the population in several Republican congressional districts in the city, but is so drawn that the fifteen city districts will be Democratic, while the Republicans will be entitled to only a possible five from the city.

Some of the Republicans claim that the bill was drawn in a hurry, and that it will be corrected before it is reported from the committee this morning. Other Republicans say that the bill is drawn in the interest of Democratic congressmen, and that Senator Hill and Secretary of State Rice, with Gov. Flower, drew the bill with the express purpose of having it passed in the form in which it was introduced.

DR. COX ACCUSED OF NEGLECT.

Eye-Witnesses Say He Was Brutal with Old Mrs. Mackin.

Capt. Cross Claims It Isn't the Ambulance Surgeon's First Offense.

Mrs. Bridget Mackin, sixty-nine years old, of Second West Forty-third street, is in bed in the Hospital suffering from a fractured rib. She was knocked down and run over by a Madison avenue horse and ambulance last night at Fifth avenue and Forty-ninth street, and her injuries were increased by the ill-bred impertinence of an Ambulance surgeon, who, instead of kneeling at Hospital, which accused of having refused to treat her.

Mr. Douglas Sellers, of 411 West Forty-eighth street, an ex-Deputy Coroner, being in the vicinity, ran to her with assistance. He was switched off the sidewalk by the horse and ambulance and from the West Forty-eighth street police station.

Mr. Sellers, the witness, delivered a vigorous protest against the treatment of the woman, and was paying, suffering from the rough usage she received before handled the agent, when a crowd of people had collected. Dr. Cox, as well as our best, of 350 West Forty-second street, whose attention had meanwhile attracted to the case by the crowd.

He strongly advised the Ambulance Surgeon to take Mrs. Mackin, who was only half conscious, to the nearest hospital, but the Ambulance surgeon, who had left his post, was actually so incapable of doing anything of the kind, and he declared that she was all right and able to go home.

Dr. Sellers and Dr. Cox remained with Mrs. Mackin, and inquired if she was not going to take the woman to a hospital. It is alleged that the surgeon replied: "Want me to make up my mind." The Dr. Sellers refused to take Mrs. Mackin to Roosevelt Hospital, it is alleged, and drove away.

The officer was then ordered to the West Thirty-seventh street station in Dr. Schoer's buggy. Police Capt. Cross summoned an ambulance from Bellevue Hospital. Dr. F. G. Weyman allowed the call and in his examination found that one of the ribs on the side was broken in addition to her injuries to her head and other injuries. It is not surprising that Mrs. Mackin should have been left in such a condition by the Cox, the driver's capacity to believe.

Capt. Cross is outspoken in his denunciation of the cox and characterized his conduct as the most outrageous that had ever come to his notice.

"It is the most offensive case, I think," said Capt. Cross. "Coroner Fitzpatrick, of 500 West Twenty-fourth street, who had cut his throat, was at first refused assistance by the cox, who took him to the hospital only after I had threatened to report him. Mrs. Cox, 5 Pitcher Notion, sixteen years old, of 150 West Twenty-seventh street, was brought to this station with both hart, cox refused to attend the Jed, who had to be taken in one.

"The cox said that he was afraid of his treatment or that he refused to shoot the wounds. She was able to walk, he claims, and declined to be taken to the Hospital.

Speaking of such accidents, Coroner Levy, at the request of Jacob Harper, of 22 West Ninety-third street, whose death is said to have been hastened by Ambulance Surgeon Swan and Surgeon Gill.

"These ambulance cases are becoming altogether too frequent, and it is time the city authorities took some in the matter. I intend to consult the Ex-Aldermen and see if these young ambulance cubs cannot be brought to a realizing sense of their duties."

Richmond Terminal Committee's Plan of Reorganization.

The plan of reorganization of the Richmond Terminal Railway System, which is to include both to be called the Southern Railway Company, was received with satisfaction in Wall Street today.

The committee's plan provides for the issue of $100,000,000 of preferred stock and $70,000,000 of common stock. This, with the $100,000,000 common capital stock, makes a total capitalization of $270,000,000, covering the securities of the Terminal, Richmond and Danville and Georgia Pacific roads. It is thought that there will be little trouble with these roads, which are in better earnings and stand in the best condition.

MRS. RAMSEY UNDER FIRE.

Cross-Examined in the Trial of Her Husband for Assault.

The trial of David Ramsey, of Ramsey, N. J., who, through jealousy, shot his wife in the back at 121 West Forty-fifth street May 22, was resumed in Part II. of General Sessions today.

Mrs. Ramsey was cross-examined. She said she was married since last December, and had been divorced from one Perselle two years before she married Ramsey.

Alexander Peck had taken board with them in Madison avenue, and went with them to 400 East Ninth street, Brooklyn. Questioned as to whether she and Peck had not taken all the furniture out of this house to Kosciusko street, she said:

"No, sir! When we moved we took Mr. Ramsey with us."

She remembered George I. Ryerson vaguely, when Ramsey sued for alienating her affections. She admitted improper conduct with him at the Sherman House, Hotel Aiken and Hotel Ludlow, where she had been arrested with him.

WALL STREET, Thursday, March 17.—Stocks were strong this morning. A drop in Richmond Terminal shares at the opening had little or no effect on the general list, which soon started upward.

SECOND THIEF BEST OWNER.

A Stolen Snuff-Box Recovered by Peculiar Means.

During a visit to the South of Italy a young Englishman was introduced to a fashionable gathering by a Neapolitan cavalier, says a German exchange.

While there he had his gold snuff-box taken from him. Next day he was a another evening party, when to his surprise he saw a gentleman present take out his stolen snuff-box and help himself to a pinch. He quickly strode up to his friend, and said.

"The gentleman over yonder is taking snuff out of the very box that was stolen from me yesterday; do you happen to know him?"

"Hush!" answered the cavalier in a tone of warning: "he is a person of high rank."

"What do I care?" exclaimed the Englishman. "I want my snuff-box back and mean to call him to account!"

"Come, don't let us have a row," gently entreated his friend, "leave the matter to me. I will get the snuff-box for you."

At these words the Englishman "simmered down" and went home. On the following day, sure enough, his friend brought him the stolen article.

"How did you recover it?" inquired the Englishman.

"Well," said his friend with a laugh, "I wished to avoid a disturbance and, therefore, I simply stole it back again from him."

A DIAGNOSIS: or, LOOKING FOR A BACILLUS.

HEARD ONLY IN KENTUCKY.

In a conversation with a gentleman from the mountains of Eastern Kentucky the Bourbon News caught on to a new word, one not in Webster's latest edition

When a man speaks of his wife to a third person he calls her "um." Or when a wife speaks of her husband she calls him "um."

For instance, "um" is going to Salyersville to-morrow," or "um shot a bear yesterday."

The word is said to have originated with young married folks who were too diffident to use the phrase "my wife" or "my husband."

While at the table, before strangers, the husband, who desired his wife to pass the bread or sorghum, would attract the attention of his wife by clearing his throat, "ahem," "oohum," and finally degenerating the phrase to "um," which was the final understanding when each was addressed.
