SARAH CAN HAVE THE PLAY.

Barrymore's "Nadjesda" Translated into French for Her.

Margaret Mather's Dilemma Caused by Unmatched Slippers.

Fernand Strauss, the private secretary of Prof. Herrmann and a man of considerable culture, has translated into French Maurice Barrymore's play, "Nadjesda," which was once produced by Modjesska. He is going to offer it to Mme. Bernhardt, and it is asserted that he made the translation for her express benefit. Without wishing to mercilessly dash Mr. Strauss's hopes to a scientific ground, it may be as well to inform him—and he is here with informed—that Sarah has seen the play, and thereby hangs a tale and a connection. Barrymore some years ago, when he completed the play, offered it to the French tragedienne for perusal. He heard nothing of it for a long time. When Sardou brought out "La Tosca," Mr. Barrymore was immediately convinced that some of the situations of his play had been taken from it and woven into "La Tosca." Insinuating, of course, that Sarah had shown the manuscript intrusted to her to the famous French playwright. All this was told at the time exclusively in THE EVENING WORLD and caused much comment.

Anna Katharine Green's husband, Mr. Rolle, has been in the city, negotiating with Manager A. M. Palmer for the production of his dramatization of "The Leavenworth Case." This is the play which Joseph Haworth talked about so much, and which he presented at the beginning of his season. He has dropped it from his repertoire. He found, it is said, that the leading role was too arduous.

Miss Pauline Hall is busily preparing for a Summer season of opera, opening at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. She has a new comic opera, the music of which has been written by Edgar Kelly. She has secured the services of some very good people. Miss Hall is now a full-fledged star.

Miss Henrietta Crossman, who, after making a substantial success in "Gloriana," at Herrmann's Theatre, was obliged to quit from the cast, is going South for her health. Mrs. Boucicault, whose specialty is wardrobe, is now playing her part in her own peculiar and extraordinary way.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Bell, who left Rosina Vokes's company owing to a quarrel with the supposedly aggressive Lois Morris, have been engaged by Richard Mansfield and will go with that actor to San Francisco next month. Mansfield has never yet visited San Francisco as a star and is looking forward to the trip with much pleasure.

Rumor has it that Rich & Harris are going to lease the Grand Opera-House, Brooklyn, next season. Rumor will soon have it that Rich & Harris are going to lease the earth.

Charles Dickson, the star of the "Incog" Company, was unable to appear on several occasions last week, owing to a loss of voice. His part was played by George Gibson. Mr. Dickson says that people accuse him of having a swelled head, whereas, as a matter of fact, the swelling has gone to the throat.

Mrs. Kendal distinctly heard the groans of the unfortunate young man who, during the performance of "Katharine Kavanagh" at Palmer's Theatre Wednesday afternoon, fell in a fit and was carried away. She was very much shocked, and it is said that the fate of "Katharine Kavanagh" is sealed. It has met with success heretofore. The people at Palmer's are still wondering what caused the young man's collapse. Business Manager Busted, who is a poet, says that it was probably another case of the "Hamlet" episode, when

The play's the thing,
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of a king.

A new comedy of to-day, by Justin Huntly McCarthy, and an old comedy which has never been acted here, and has been condensed by Mr. Daly, will be played at the closing performances of the present season at Daly's Theatre. Ada Rehan, John Drew, James Lewis and Mrs. Gilbert will all appear.

Miss Margaret Mather and her company arrived in the city Sunday from Indianapolis. She plays this week at the Amphion in Williamsburg. At a recent performance of "The Egyptian," her new play, Miss Mather had a very uncomfortable experience as Esmeralda. She wears a hands-one green and gold costume, with shoes to match, and makes her first entrance dancing. On this occasion, before going on the stage, Miss Mather put on an old slipper to ease a suffering foot. When it was time for her to go on she forgot to change it, and was in the midst of the dance when she saw her plight. There was nothing to do but finish the scene. She said she felt that all eyes were on the old slipper, which was of the most unthetrical order. She tried to hide it, but her dress was short, and there she was shuffling through a complicated dance with one graceful and one ungraceful foot.

Harriers Practising for Their Championship Meeting.

Giants Stuck in the Mud at Richmond—Sporting Notes.

The hedge and ditch sprinters are working with a will these days. There are more men eager to have a try for the championship medal of the National Cross-Country Association than ever before. Each of the twoscore organizations that intend to send teams to the scratch at Manhattan Field on April 9, has its prominent harrier on whom the hopes of the club are centred. The junior and senior cross-country championships are contested for in teams, not individually. The clubs, however, who are sure that their leaders are all right, feel exceedingly confident.

The Prospect Harriers are the champions. They have captured the prize at each of the last three meetings. Their captain is old Jack Lloyd, who is working with unusual ardor to get his team into condition for the great day. Lloyd is a great runner himself, and talks very encouragingly of the men he has gathered around him.

The old Suburban Harriers have reorganized. They will figure prominently in the Spring meeting. E. C. Carter and Tommy Colbert, two veteran harriers, are hustling things for the Suburbans. They have gathered a pack of sprinters that will not be far behind the leaders at the finish.

William Day, the little Jersey lad who astonished older men by his endurance, has decided not to run with any of the big clubs this year. He has gathered a little band of Irsipiri, and expects to see them snow up in fine form.

The well-known Manhattan long-distance runner, A. B. George, will marshall the Cherry Diamond Paces. He is on deck, for in the work his legs are now doing, that the M. A. A. A. C. will finish last.

H. L. Billings and J. P. Lloyd, jr., are among those who will see that the New York Athletic Club's interests are not neglected.

G. C. Hollander, of the Pastime A. C., is doing great training work. He won the first prize in the recent open handicap run of the Prospect Harriers, covering the eight-mile course in 43m. 15s.

R. W. Halstead, of the Waynes, is doing good preliminary work and has hopes of success for his team.

Among the other prominent runners who will appear in the championships are Buchanan, Black and Wolfenhagen, of the Columbia A. C.; R. C. Thirlicomb and Mike Boyle, of the Long Jacks; J. Cunningham, S. Slather and Smithyin, of the Xaviers; E. Hjertberg, of the New Jersey A. C.; Chamberlain, of the Brooklyns, and Tattle, of the Acorns.

New York is short of professional ballplayers just now. The representatives of this district have all gone Southward to grow up with their respective clubs. They expected to get right to work this morning. They were anxious to get out and show the P. E. Vs with what despatch a New York baseball club can prepare for action. Reports from Virginia's capital state that mud is awfully deep in Richmond's streets and operations cannot be begun until to-morrow. Pat Powers has been exceedingly fortunate in getting his men together on time. Silver King and Reddy Mack are the only absent ones. They will join the team to-night or to-morrow.

The Brooklyn team is still in a disconsolate condition. The Bridegrooms will play in Jacksonville to-morrow. Ward is not at all satisfied with the boomers of Florida towns, who have failed to come to time in keeping agreements. Joyce is expected to report for duty on April 1.

The Greenwood Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, is arranging for a good boxing show to be given at Tivoli Hall, Brooklyn, on March 26. The event of the evening will be a special three-round bout between Sam Frazer, of the Greenwoods, and Joe Shortell, of the Williamsburgs. Both men are in active training. There will be several other bouts between well-known boxers. John Lopez, club manager, of the New York Athletics, will give an exhibition. A battle royal between four colored boxers will end the show.

* * *

On Wednesday morning the dispute between Sam Seo and Jack McNichol will come up for settlement in the court of Special Sessions. Seo acted as referee in a sparring exhibition at Tivoli Hall, Mason and Marcy ave., Sunday night. McNichol's brother was one of the contestants. The referee decided against him, and while his back was turned Jack McNichol landed a right-hand swing behind Seo's ear. Subsequently he was arrested and civil action against his assailant. He hopes to teach disagreeable pugs that it is not safe to monkey with the referee.

The Prospect Heights Gymnasium, on Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, will be a lively place to-night. A meeting of the Acorn Athletic Club has been called there to inspect the building and complete the final arrangements for purchasing the property. The Acorns are very much pleased with the idea of owning so prominent a club-house and athletic plant.

Harry Pinese, of the Pastime A. C., is the new Treasurer of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., having succeeded Father Bill Curtiss, who was elevated to the presidency. Pinese will be in a position to gauge the loyalty of the clubs composing the Association by the despatch with which they forward the $15 tax imposed to cancel the indebtedness contracted at the recent indoor championships.

A DWARF IN A PIE.

Clever Little Jeffrey of Ancient History Fame.

A banquet of state had been prepared at Burleigh in honor of the king and Queen, and it was arranged that the little dwarf, Jeffrey, should step from a huge venison pasty into Her Majesty's service, says St. James. This mode of appearance was not new even then. A pie with a dwarf inside was thought a "dainty dish to set before a king," an idea of this kind was once a road to the sovereign's favor.

On the day of the dinner Jeffrey found himself imprisoned in a large dish, surrounded by a high wall of standing crust. Of course a way had been found to give him air, but he afterwards said he felt lively enough. Queen Elizabeth ordered the pie to be warmed, saying, "It were better eaten warm than cold."

Young Jeffrey remained quiet and said never a word as the dish was carried to the kitchen, but he was far from happy and thought of Nebuchadnezzar and the fiery furnace quite "warm with quite intense." The cook, however, undertook the joke and the dwarf pie was placed in state on the royal table. At last came the fateful time—the crowning moment of Jeffrey's life.

The pie was opened, the trumpet sounded and forth sprang the dwarf. He was clad in a full suit of armor and skipped about the table shaking his little sword in some of the goodies and, remembering the sweetness the Duke had thrown him for him, gave a vicious little whack at his grace's bald nose.

Buckingham drew back in time to save his handsome face and threatened to cudgel the young knave with a chicken bone; but the King laughed and said Buckingham was served quite right.

By this time Jeffrey was nearly deafened with applause and half drowned in the perfumes the ladies sprinkled upon him, so he hastened to end the scene by prostrating himself before the Queen's plate and entreating to be taken into her service.

WHAT MR. McCARTHY SAID OF DOCTORS McCOY AND WILDMAN.

He Says He Suffered from Childhood With Catarrh, and Patent Medicines Made Him Worse. He Has No Trouble Now.

Denis L. McCarthy is an iron moulder in the employ of Mr. Wm. Collins, of 446 and 448 West 26th st., where a reporter called on him the other evening. Mr. McCarthy, in his own words, said: "For years I was troubled with catarrh. My head would fill up so that I could not breathe through my nostrils. I tried lots of patent medicines, but they only made me worse. I had a hard cough, and I coughed so much that I used to spit blood. I was so weak that I could not do my work. I had a pain in my side, and I used to cough so much that I used to sweat all over. I was hoarse, and my throat was all raw. I was so weak that I had to give up my work. I was in bad shape. I was so weak that I could not do my work. I was in bad shape. I was so weak that I could not do my work. I was in bad shape. I was so weak that I could not do
