Garden Plan Saves Labor.

A little time spent in planning a garden will save a great deal of subsequent labor. C. G. Carpenter of the Missouri College of Agriculture suggests that the rows of vegetables run north and south so that one side will receive sunlight in the morning and the other in the afternoon. This is the best arrangement wherever it is possible. The slope of the garden, if it is on a hillside, may prevent running the rows north and south. It is also advisable to space the rows so that horse-drawn implements can be used. Sometimes it pays to arrange even such small plants as lettuce and radishes so that they may be cultivated with labor saving implements.

In general, planting should be begun on one side of the garden and continued to the other. This will enable the gardener to keep the weeds down on the unplanted area with minimum labor.

Vegetables planted at the same time and requiring similar cultivation should be grouped in adjacent rows. However, the time of planting is more important than the kind of cultivation required.

Rhubarb, horse radish, asparagus, winter onions, and other plants which occupy the ground longer than a year should be set apart. Parsnips, salsify, and similar crops should be placed near the perennials. Vegetables which require only a short growing season such as onions, cabbage, lettuce, radishes, peas, and beets, and second plantings of these crops may follow in order as planting proceeds across the garden.

Electricity—Everybody's Servant.

There was a time when light in a house was supplied by a flaring torch supported by a bracket on the wall; when each man carried his own street light with him; when messages were carried by men on horse or afoot; when the quickest and most luxurious form of travel was the stage-coach, and when nearly all work was done by hand.

Within the last few years a new servant has appeared to do all this work and much more not mentioned above. The name of this new servant is "electricity." It lights our houses with a bright, clean and safe light; our streets are lined with lamp posts which make them as safe at night as in the day time. If we want to talk to someone a hundred miles away we use the telephone or the telegraph. Street cars, interurbans, even railroad trains, pulled by electricity, carry us further in an hour than the stage could have done in a day. And work,—there is scarcely a task which cannot be done by electricity, not only in the business and manufacturing world, but in the city and country home as well.

A few years ago electricity was the servant of the few who lived in cities. This was because electric generating machinery was not in its present improved state, and because it was, and still is for that matter, very expensive to transmit electric current over long distances. In other words people who live close together in the comparatively small area of the city can all be supplied with current from one central station at a reasonable cost, whereas it is enormously expensive to extend transmission lines five or ten miles into the country in order to serve perhaps fifteen or twenty customers in an area as large as that covered by the city. And yet the services of electricity are needed as much, if not more, on the farm, in the country home, church, schoolhouse and store, as in the city.

It is this need, and the practical difficulties in the way of supplying it, which turned man's inventive genius toward a solution of the problem. And the solution, as in the case of most great problems, was in itself rather simple,—not the building of new and complicated machinery to drive current further at a lower cost, but the application of the known principles of generating and handling electric current to the development of small generating plants of a size suitable for supplying electricity on the farm and in the church or store, and at a cost easily within the reach of every progressive farmer. Years of experimental work by some of our best engineers have produced plants of this type which are thoroughly dependable.

Now the result of this is that electricity is at last the really universal servant. In the country home, church, community house, store, club or camp, as well as in the city, electric lights pour out their flood of pure light from handsome modern fixtures. The day of the coal oil lamp is over. Not only the farm house itself but every part of all the other buildings on the place is lighted safely and conveniently.

And light is only part of the service that electricity is ready to render. In the home the vacuum sweeper, the electric iron, toaster, coffee percolator, fan and washing machine are at the service of the housewife. An automatic electric pump furnishes hot and cold running water to all parts of the house at all times. In the dairy the milking machine, the cream separator and the churn are electrically driven. The fanning mill, the corn grinder, the grindstone and many other pieces of light farm machinery are turned by small motors.

The comfort, the convenience of electric service will have the same effect in the country home as they have had in the city. This service will give people more leisure, more opportunity to read, to keep in touch with all that is going in the world about them. It will make their living easier and better. And if it can do these things for all of us, it will indeed have proved itself the best of servants.—Advertisement.

A Safe Test.

For those who are in need of a remedy for kidney troubles and backache, it is a good plan to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They are strongly recommended by Ironton people.

R. Hotson, Russell St., Ironton, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble in bad form four years ago. When the kidney secretions were passing, they pained terribly and I had aches through my kidneys. Finally I used Doan's Pills and they relieved the aches and pains in good shape."

Mr. Hotson gave the above statement in October 1911 and on July 15, 1916 he added: "Doan's Kidney Pills always help me when my kidneys get out of order and they are the best kidney medicine I have ever taken. I am always glad to recommend them."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hotson has twice publicly recommended. Foster Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Resolutions of Respect.

In memory of Brother August Ricke who died March 2, 1917.

Once again death hath summoned a Brother Odd Fellow, and the golden gateway to the Eternal City has opened to welcome him to his home. He has completed his work in the ministering to the wants of the afflicted, in shedding light upon darkened souls and in bringing joy into the places of misery, and as his reward has received the plaudit, "well done" from the Supreme Master.

And Whereas, the all-wise and merciful Master of the Universe has called our beloved and respected Brother home, and he having been a true and faithful member of our beloved Order, therefore be it

Resolved, That Iron Lodge, No. 107, I. O. O. F. of Ironton, Missouri, in testimony of its loss, be draped in mourning for thirty days, and that we tender to the family of our deceased brother our sincere condolence in their deep affliction and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family.

DELCO-LIGHT
ELECTRICITY FOR EVERY FARM

DELCO-LIGHT MAKES ELECTRICITY UNIVERSAL

For the first time electric light and power are available to anyone—anywhere.
Heretofore, the benefits of electricity have been confined to those who live in the larger towns and cities.
Now Delco-Light makes electric current universally available.

Delco-Light is today furnishing thousands of farm-houses with brilliant, convenient, safe and economical light.
It is furnishing power to operate pumps, washing machines, churns, cream separators, milking machines, vacuum cleaners, etc.
It is lighting country churches, stores and public halls.
It is furnishing light and power to summer homes and camps, to houseboats and yachts, etc.
It is lighting rural railway stations, and construction camps.
It is lighting the camps of United States troops on the Mexican border and it is disclosing heretofore undreamed-of beauties in the depths of Mammoth Cave, Kentucky.
Altogether, over 15,000 Delco-Light plants are in operation, and Delco-Light offices are to be found in almost every part of the world.

Delco-Light is a complete electric plant—the engine and dynamo in one compact unit combined with a set of specially built and wonderfully efficient batteries for the storage of current. The plant is so simple a child can care for it, and so economical that it actually pays for itself in time and labor saved. It operates on either kerosene, gasoline or natural gas.
