STOCKTON GETS THE PLACE.

Experience, Uncle Jess and Locohatchee Also Winners To-Day.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.]

MONMOUTH PARK RACE TRACK, July 26.—The Monmouth Park talent received a slap in the face in the first race to-day, from the effects of which they did not recover all day. It was nothing less than the crushing and overwhelming defeat of Russell.

On paper the race looked all over, but the shouting and the talent placed their money on the Morris colt with an air which plainly said to the bookies, "We feel sorry, gentlemen, to have to steal your money."

Russell was not in the first three. He finished fourth to Experience, who couldn't win purses at Brighton, Nomad, who had hard work to win at the same course, and Tenny, the poor, crippled sway-back, whom no one ever expected to see placed again.

Russell's defeat will go down as one of the unexplained mysteries of racing.

Experience, the winner, was a 12 to 1 chance, while Nomad, who was second, was at 8 to 1. Penn rode the winner. He is gaining quite a reputation as a rider of long shots.

Uncle Jess, second choice, at 7 to 1, won the second race handily from Jordan, who was a head before Trouble. Sir Richard, who was favorite, was not placed at the end.

There were only three starters in the Raritan Stakes. Notwithstanding Leonawell's good race a few days ago, public faith in his ability was wanted, and Locohatchee was made the choice. Dagonet was the outsider.

Leonawell set the pace into the stretch, where Locohatchee caught him. The race to the wire was a furious drive, but at the end Locohatchee was first by a length. Dagonet was a poor third.

The weather at the park to-day was cool and pleasant, a most refreshing breeze sweeping the grand-stand from end to end and cooling the heated visitors from the city.

About ten thousand people were present, and the sport was very good.

Reckless, Equity, Demuth and Stockton was the order until the head of the stretch was reached. Up to this time all had been worked hard. The pace increased then, and half way home Reckless, Equity and Stockton were in front, with Equity and Demuth close behind.

Stockton was the only horse that ran straight. Reckless and Stockton staggered across the track, but the former managed to hold a good race to a neck from Stockton, who had Demuth a length. Time—2:34½.

NO PLOT, SAYS MOST.

The Anarchist Leader Thinks Frick's Assailant Worked Alone.

Baker McHick, Who Sent Money to Berkman, Arrested.

Supt. of Police O'Mara Starts for Long Branch to See the Suspect.

Herr John Most, the leader of the New York Anarchists, views the shooting of H. C. Frick as a matter of little consequence.

"A mere scratch; nothing at all. What the devil is the use of making so much fuss about it?" was the way the chief of the unwashed answered a question with regard to Berkman's deed.

"I am getting out my paper and I haven't time to talk about it."

"What do you know about Berkman?"

"Berkman, Berkman! Why, Berkman is a — — — —. He is my enemy. He is no good. I hate him as much as I do Frick, and Frick is the czar of America," continued Herr Most, with a long drawn out hissing sound on the word czar.

"Berkman betrayed me. I took him in here and learned him to be a printer, and then when he got so's he could do some things he turned around and blackguarded me; yes, sir; he blackguarded me and he joined my enemies, the Autonomists, who hate me worse nor the police.

"I hain't got any use for Berkman. He has been a botch all his life and the botch attacks on Frick was just like him.

"Berkman came to me a year and a half ago and said he wanted to be with us, and that his views were like ours.

"He seemed like a smart fellow, and I gave him a chance. I afterwards found out he was too radical. He didn't use good sense, and was always talking when talk wasn't any use. After he was discharged he joined the Autonomists and became a contributor to their paper, the Revolte. The Revolte devotes nearly all its space to abusing me, so you see why I hate Berkman. Any talk about me being mixed up in this affair is rot."

"Do you think the cause of Anarchy was advanced by the shooting of Frick?"

"Not by the laughing job that was done. All true Anarchists hate Frick, but I won't say that he ought to have been killed."

"What did you say in your letter to Karl Knold, of Pittsburg, who was arrested because he had sheltered Berkman and is supposed to have been in the plot to kill Frick?"

"Knold wrote to me asking what kind of a fellow Berkman was. From the way his letter read I thought Berkman was trying to organize some societies there. I answered, telling Knold that Berkman was not responsible and was a dangerous man. I told Knold not to have anything to do with Berkman and I don't think he had.

"I don't believe either Knold or Eckert knew that Berkman was plotting to kill Frick. Knold and Eckert are good Anarchists and sensible fellows. They have been agents for me, and I know them both. The police are trying to show that because I corresponded with Knold, and Berkman boarded with Knold, that the three of us were in a plot to kill Frick.

"That is another evidence of what fools policemen are. I don't think there was any plot to kill Frick. I think Berkman tried to do it himself. He thought there would be lots of glory in it, and that's what he wanted. If there was any plot it was Autonomists, not my friends, who were in it."

"What do you know about Emma Goldman?"

"Oh, she is a harmless crank who couldn't do any harm if she tried. She was a friend of Berkman, but he was too sharp to trust her with any secrets. There is where the police are making another mistake. They think the German girl was a conspirator with Berkman.

"They think I am a conspirator. They think all of us are conspirators; but when the whole thing is boiled down it will be found that the police are working this thing for all it is worth to get glory for themselves."

"Do you know Hendricks, the Long Branch baker who is accused of sending Berkman money?"

"I do not know him personally. He is an Autonomist, and as such I'm likely he was a friend of Berkman."

THREE YEARS'ST POSITION.

Herr Most's paper, the Freiheit, will be issued to-morrow. He said he would treat the Frick shooting as a thing of little importance, because the man assaulted was not killed.

Following is an article that has appeared in the Freiheit with regard to the Homestead trouble:

"After the battle of Homestead three of our free-thinking workmen had to take a shot at the cattle as we took a fort in. We have no great love for the men and authorities then in Fort Jesus. They said: 'Where are those chaps who polished the Indians off, that's?' Our men said: 'Gone out, and the second time we have disappointed them and attacked.' 'You probably mean Indian Anarchists. We are law-abiding citizens and we want no Anarchists in our neighborhood here. We are at war against those Indians and Dakotans. We are good citizens of order. We don't do love as you did at Finderly Valley.'"

The article goes on to say that when the Anarchists replied to them the authorities became furious. "Shot them into the bush, they shouted. They attacked a dozen of people who are shooters in the woods alone. 'Lynch them, lynch them!' they cried. 'Throw them in the river.' The situation looked serious. The men were not to be cowed. Two men fell, wounded with lead, and intended to their school. 'Take them escorted to the nearest station,' continues the report, 'and tell them to show their faces there again. They will pay no other visit to Homestead but that which we when everything is lost and there is no more

HOTTEST YET!

To-Day's Heat Broke All Previous Records for July 26 in New York

At 2:30 This Afternoon the Mercury Stood at 96 1-2 Degrees.

A Delightfully Cool Breeze About 3 O'Clock Sent the Mercury Down to 82 1-2.

One Man, in Delirium, Jumps Five Stories to Death—Many Cases of Prostration.

About 3 o'clock sweltering New Yorkers were relieved by a stiff, cool breeze from the northwest, which sprang up as the companion of a sharp shower which passed over the upper part of the city and Long Island.

This welcome visitor sent the mercury tumbling down to a point where existence was no longer a burden.

The effect upon Observer Dunn's thermometer was remarkable. At 2.30 the mercury had climbed up to 96½ degrees, the highest point reached, and fifty minutes later it had dropped down to 82½.

At Hudnut's the highest notch reached was 98 at 10 minutes past 2. At 3 it had dropped to 97 and at 3.30 to 90 degrees.

Observer Dunn says that to-day was the hottest July 26 of which he has any record.

There was a slight rise in temperature after the breeze passed, and at 4.30 observer Dunn's thermometer registered 83¾; Hudnuts, 80; Perry's, 87.

Old Sol started in this morning to beat the record for the season in the caloric line, and at noon there was every prospect of his succeeding in the effort and coming within a few degrees of equaling the hottest day on record—Sept. 7, 1881—when Uncle Sam's thermometer on top of the Equitable Building scored the terrific mark of 100 degrees.

When the new day started in, at 1 o'clock this morning, Local Forecast Official Dunn's thermometer registered 77 degrees. At 2 o'clock, the temperature was the same, but at 3 it dropped to 75, and remained there until 7 o'clock, when it jumped up to 76.

At 8 o'clock it was at the 83 mark, five degrees warmer than at the same hour yesterday, and that increase was maintained on the average during the morning, the temperature reaching 93 degrees at 9 o'clock and 97 at 10, against 78 and 87 degrees for the same hours yesterday.

At 11 o'clock Farmer Dunn's thermometer registered 94 degrees; at 11.30, 95½; but at 11.35 it had dropped to 91.

At 12 o'clock Hudnut's thermometer also registered 91. Mr. Dunn said the sudden drop in temperature was due to a slight increase in the breeze, and he was still confident that a record of at least 100 degrees would be reached.

Observer Dunn himself summed up the situation as follows:

"We're in for a scorcher to-day. I'm going to enter my string for sweltering weights, and I guess they'll all enter at about ninety-four pounds."

Mr. Dunn also volunteered the information that New York was to-day about the hottest place in the United States, being excelled at noon only by Albany, Philadelphia and Washington, where the thermometers marked 94 degrees.

New Orleans, strange to say, was comparatively cool at 74 degrees, while the uncomfortably warm sensations in other cities ranged from 79 to 82.

The weather all over the country was generally fair, but the temperature higher in the central and middle Atlantic states, except in the lake regions, where there were occasional light showers.

Old Sol finally made a bluff this morning at giving New Yorkers a rest. He started in at sunrise with only 60 per cent. of moisture, against 70 at the same hour yesterday; but at 10 o'clock his advantage had increased to 24 and was still on the up-grade.

There was a decided breath of air blowing from the northwest at sunrise. At Perry's, for example, it was 6 miles an hour, increased to 8 miles an hour at 10 o'clock, while Perry's pulsed from 54 at 10 o'clock to 67½ at 10.30.

Farmer Dunn is inclined to question the accuracy of these figures, but the moisture is, but the sidewalk pedestrians poured in under Broadway metaphorically swallowed their announcements when they averred that it there was anything wrong with them, "the thing didn't measure all the heat there was about."

And it was hot, too. Commuters, office

MAD DOG LOOSE IN ORANGE.

Three Children Bitten Before It Was Clubbed to Death.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.]

ORANGE, N. J., July 26.—While a party of children were watching a bulldog in swimming at West Orange this morning the animal suddenly became mad and attacked several of the children.

James Muller, Frank Klein and George Bannister were badly bitten by the animal.

Klein's body was fearfully lacerated about the arms and legs as well as his face.

Some workmen who were near by chased the dog and killed it with clubs.

The injured children had their wounds cauterized at Geiger's drug store and were then sent to their homes.

They may be sent to Pasteur's Institute in New York for inoculation against hydrophobia.

POLICEMAN MURPHY DENIES IT.

He Says He Did Not Ill-Treat Michael Kennedy When Arresting Him.

Policeman Murphy, of the Old Slip station, indignantly denied to-day that he had maltreated in any way abused Michael Kennedy, who, he says, he found intoxicated in Battery Park last night.

Kennedy is a laborer and lives in Twenty-seventh street, South Brooklyn. Murphy says he was called to arrest Kennedy, but when he reached the spot where he was lying in Battery Park Policeman Smith, who said he would attend to the case.

Murphy went away, and later was again called upon to arrest the man. He arrested Kennedy and locked him up.

In the Tombs Police Court this morning Justice Hogan committed Kennedy for five days for drunkenness.
