Trustee Sales.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.

By virtue of a Deed of Trust made by Major Leo. Robert Johnson and G. T. Prosser, trustees of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of Wheeling, W. Va., to the undersigned trustee, dated the 1st day of November, 1879, and recorded in the Clerk's office of the County Court of Ohio county, West Virginia, in Deed of Trust Book No 15, page 373, I will sell at public auction, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Wheeling, on beginning at 10 o'clock A. M., the following described real estate, that is to say: Part of lot numbered ninety-three (93), situated on the east side of Market street, in the second ward of the said city of Wheeling, being the southwest corner of said lot fronting thirty-three feet on Market street and running back of even width with said front seventy feet, together with all the buildings thereon and the appurtenances belonging thereto. Upon said portion of said lot is erected the African Methodist Episcopal Church of Wheeling, W. Va., and said deed of trust was given to secure the payment of the seven promissory notes named therein, payable to the order of George Crumbacker; the last three of which are over due and unpaid, principal and interest.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1886,

Selling as trustee I will convey such title as is vested in me by said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third, or as much more of the purchase money as the purchaser may elect to pay in cash on the day of sale, and the residue in two equal installments at nine and twelve months from the day of sale, with interest from said day, the purchaser to give his notes for the deferred payments and interest with security, to be approved by the trustee hereinafter named, and the title to said property to be retained until the purchase money is paid in full.

Epithelioma!

OR SKIN CANCER.

For seven years I suffered with a cancer on my face. All the simple remedies were applied to alleviate the pain, but the place continued to grow, finally extending into my nose, from which came a yellowish discharge very offensive in character. It was also inflamed, and annoyed me a great deal. About eight months ago I was in Atlanta, at the house of a friend, who so strongly recommended the use of Swift's Specific that I determined to make an effort to procure it. In this I was successful, and began its use. The influence of this medicine at first was to somewhat aggravate the sore; but soon the inflammation was allayed, and I began to improve after the first few bottles. My general health has greatly improved. I am stronger, and able to do any kind of work. The cancer on my face began to decrease and the ulcer to heal, until there is not a vestige of it left—only a little scar marks the place where it had been. I am ready to answer all questions relative to this cure. MRS. JOICIE A. MCDONALD.

Atlanta, Ga., August 11, 1885.

I have had a cancer on my face for some years, extending from one cheek bone across the nose to the other. It has given me a great deal of pain, at times burning and itching to such an extent that it was almost unbearable. I commenced using Swift's Specific in May, 1885, and have used eight bottles. It has given the greatest relief by removing the inflammation and restoring my general health. W. BARNES,

Knoxville, Iowa, Sept. 8, 1885.

For many years I was a sufferer with cancer of the nose, and having been cured by the use of S. S. S., I feel constrained by a sense of duty to suffering humanity to make this statement of my case. With the first bottle the cancer began to heal rapidly and soon disappeared, and for several months there has been no appearance of a sore of any kind on my nose or face, neither is my nose at all tender to the touch. I have taken about two dozen bottles S. S. S., and am soundly cured, and I know that S. S. S. effected the cure after every known remedy was tried and had failed. ROBERT SMEDLEY.

Fort Gaines, Ga., May 1, 1885.

I had heard of the wonderful cures of Swift's Specific, and resolved to try it. I commenced taking it in April, 1884. My general health was much improved, yet the cancer which was in my breast continued to grow slowly but surely. The bunch grew and became quite heavy. I felt that I must either have it cut or die. But it commenced discharging quantities of almost black, thick blood. It continued healing around the edges until February, when it was entirely healed up and well. BETSY WOOD.

Cochesett, Plymouth Co., Mass., July 18, 1885.

Swift's Specific is entirely vegetable, and seems to cure cancers by forcing out the impurities from the blood.

AYER'S Hair Vigor cures baldness. AYER'S Hair Vigor restores youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It attains these results by the stimulation of the hair roots and color glands. It rejuvenates the HAIR and cleanses it. It restores to the HAIR that, either by reason of age or disease of the scalp, has become dry, harsh and brittle, a pliancy and glossy silken softness of extreme beauty. There is no dye in Ayer's Hair VIGOR and the good it does is by the VIGOR it imparts to the follicles, and the cleanliness and healthfulness of the condition in which it maintains the scalp. AYER'S Hair Vigor renews the hair. AYER'S Hair Vigor is the best cure known for Baldness, Scaly Hair, Scald Head, Dandruff, Itching Humors, Fever Sores, Torpid Follicles, and all other diseases of the scalp that cause the falling of the HAIR and its fading. Nothing cleanses HAIR of the nuisance of dandruff so perfectly, and so effectually prevents its return, as AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. In addition to the curative and restorative virtues peculiar to Ayer's Hair VIGOR it has a toilet luxury. The Hair VIGOR is by far the cleanliest hair-dressing made. It causes the hair to grow thick and long, and keeps it always soft and glossy.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Contains no deleterious ingredients. Its use prevents all scalp disease, secures against the hair growing thin or gray, and surely cures all baldness that is not organic.

SOMETIME.

What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.—Christ.

Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forever more have set,
The things which our weak judgment here have spurned,
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,
Will flash before us, out of life's dark night,
As stars shine more in deeper tints of blue,
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called, He heeded not our cry,
Because His wisdom to the end could see
And even as prudent parents dealt our
Too much of sweet to craving baby hood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things, because it seemeth good.

And if, sometimes, commingled with life's wine,
We find the wormwood, and rebel and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Puts out this potion for our lips to drink.
And if some friend we love is lying low,
Where human skill cannot reach his face,
Oh, do not blame the loving Father so,
But wear your sorrow with obedient grace.

And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friend,
And that sometimes the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon His love can send.
If we could push ajar the gates of life
And stand within and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery would find a key.

But not to day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white unfold,
We must not tear the close shut leaves apart;
Time will reveal the hidden cups of gold.
And if through patient toil we reach the land
Where weary feet, with sandals loose, may rest,
Then shall we know and clearly understand—
I think that we shall say, "God knew the best!"

BISHOP HUNTINGTON.

THE SURGEON'S LOVE.

I opened the window of my office, and looked out upon the distant lightning, at its awful, red rehearsal in the inky west. Neither rumbling thunder nor furious dash of wind, nor volleys of hail, proclaimed the advance of the marvelous midsummer tempest. It came on silently and the lightning blades were doing their deadly work with the flash and silence of steel.

The area of the storm covered less than a mile, and the altitude of the cloud could not have been more than half of that distance. Once overhead the mighty cloud came to an ominous pause before pouring forth its varied forms of vengeance. Then the bolts began to rush through the air with the sibilant noise of sky-rockets, and the attendant peals seemed to paralyze the very pulses and forever silence the heart of the listener. One bolt descended close by, plowing in its vivid progress oblong gulfs in an apple orchard, as it digging graves for its prospective victims; and during all of this glare and din my night bell rang furiously,

"What!" thought I. "A summons on such a night as this! Surely it must be an urgent case that could not wait until this most phenomenal of thunder tempests had passed over."

As I left the rear office, I could but observe the play of the blue lightnings under the thresholds of the doors, like a viper writhing in flames of blue vitrol.

So deafening were the wild demonstrations of nature that the messenger could hardly make himself understood; but I learned at length that the house of Judge Hungerford had been struck, and that Miss Blanche Hungerford had been dangerously prostrated by the shock.

I remembered Miss Blanche Hungerford, whom I had met at several social gatherings, as being very beautiful and amiable, and a beaming star in society.

I found her unconscious, with the family grouped about her in tears. My first thought was disfigurement. But she seemed too superlatively lovely for the blasting touch of lightning; but she was safe from this dread physical evil. The blinding flash and terrific thunder-peal had overpowered her to unconsciousness.

In his excitement the messenger had made an erroneous statement—not the house, but a stately elm had been struck and clove in twain by the calamitous fluid. Miss Blanche had just opened the door to observe the direful aspect of the hour, which the bolt descended, and she fell senseless in the hallway.

The scene at the bedside was a strange and sadly impressive one. At its foot sat the venerable Judge Hungerford. Extreme age had impaired his once brilliant faculties, and he was now nearly an imbecile. At his side stood Mrs. Hungerford—a tall, severe faced woman, wearing somber green goggles, while from her neck hung an ostentatious medal, indicating her membership of some reform association.

The impression this remarkable woman made upon me is life long and unfading. The combination of artificial green eyes, a perfectly erect and inflexible attitude, a narrow head, with aquiline nose, and a certain indescribable air of eager watchfulness, called to my mind a hen eagle, erect upon a crag, and I could compare her to nothing else.

I was astonished to see in the mother of beautiful Blanche such an austere and unattractive person; but my astonishment subsided when I learned that she was my fair patient's step-mother, the Judge's second wife.

After performing other offices of my profession, I proceeded to the use of restoratives. I poured from my spirit flask a spoonful of brandy, raised her head gently from the pillow, when the step-mother swooped down upon me and seized my uprafised arm, as with the clutch of a talon.

"Pardon me, physician," she said, in a voice impressive and metallic, "but I am conscience and oath-bound against its use!"

And she pointed grimly to her medal of membership.

I removed her hand respectfully, and administered the stimulant.

The beautiful patient opened her eyes wonderingly, murmured "Thank you!" and then I suffered her noble head to return to the pillow.

"Do you feel pain anywhere?" was whispered.

She turned her eyes in the direction of her left shoulder.

I raised the lace border of her night robe, and lo! there on that alabaster arm, near the shoulder, was the perfect imprint of a tree.

The lightning flash had photographed upon her fair skin the stricken elm in miniature!

Chagrined at the objections made to my professional methods by the second Mrs. Hungerford, I left further instructions as to the care of the charming young patient, and then, in the face of the feeble remonstrance of Judge Hungerford, I took my departure.

II.

In due time I heard of Blanche Hungerford's complete convalescence, and I must confess the agreeable tidings gave me pleasure that was not altogether a professional character. She was such a sweet patient, and I had never forgotten the look of gratitude she gave me when she whispered "Thank you!" And what is more delighting to a man's heart than a grateful expression from a beautiful woman?

An increase of reputation opened up a way for me to what I had so long and ardently desired—a city practice.

I became associated with the distinguished and beloved Dr. Bartholomew, and upon his decease I succeeded to his large and lucrative medical clientage.

Upon several occasions I had conferred with my esteemed professional brethren upon the subject of lightning photography; and mentioning no names, out of delicate motives, I cited the case of a handsome young woman who was prostrated by the electric fluid.

The bolt blasted a contiguous elm-tree, and the tree was perfectly and artistically photographed upon her arm.

I found that cases were not unfrequent where inanimate objects had been photographed by lightning upon animate ones.

One surgeon vouched for a case where a black-oak, thunder-riven, was photographed upon the flank of a white horse.

Musing upon this subject one cold winter evening, I was summoned to the door by the captain of the police precinct.

His business was thrilling and altogether too sorrowful.

The fast express, behind time and running a mile a minute, had been derailed by a displaced switch on the outskirts of the city.

The destruction and mutilation had been frightful. The St Mary's Hospital was filled with the wounded, and the officers of the police were expeditiously summoning a corps of city surgeons.

The scene at the hospital was indescribable—and indeed, if describable, there would be but little profit in the portrayal of such misery.

An eager crowd, many of whom had friends on the ill-fated train, had assembled.

Prudence compelled the closing of the doors against them, but their anxious, tragic faces were visible at the windows, looking as if the catastrophe had imparted a common expression to them all.

Nurses and stewards were hurrying here and there with subdued foot-falls. Now, there is no preference among surgeons at such a time. Going to work at once and rendering assistance to the nearest case at hand is the rule.

I heard a low moan at my left. It came from the lips of a woman. I looked upon the cot. Such a lovely, but pain-vexed, countenance! It was a case of fractured arm—a compound fracture—and the attendant fever had already set in. The wounded member of that graceful body must be set at once.

I examined the broken arm. Stars of fate! Near the shoulder was a miniature tree. My beautiful patient was again Blanche Hungerford.

I need not tell you with what consummate tenderness I handled that shapely arm; but I could not avert the delirium that followed the fever. Sad as I was to see her delirious, I could not suppress a thrill of joy when she more than once pronounced my name.

In ten days the fever tide slowly turned and death had spared the beautiful from the worms of the dust.

Her first whispered words, as of old, were "Thank you!" I have before asked this question:

"What is more delightful to a man's heart than a grateful expression from a beautiful woman?"

I now answer it. A grateful expression from a beautiful woman mingled with a look of love. And I read—

"Love in her luminous eye!"

When Blanche was nearly recovered I said to her:

"My darling, lightning and calamity brought us together. Let love and sunshine prevent our parting!"

And she only murmured, in the dear, old way, "Thank you!" and then I felt her fair, white arms twining about my neck.

You Have a Perfect Right,

when you demand a Benson's Capcine Plaster of a druggist, to expect to receive one. Yet there are, we regret to say, a few druggists of the Cheap John variety who will try to persuade you to accept some worthless substitute with a similar sounding name, such as "Capsicin," "Capsicum," "Capsicin," "Capsicine," etc., prefixed sometimes with the name "Burton" or "Benton." Cheap John will offer you one of these wretched imitations for half the price of the genuine, as he can well afford to do, its real value being nothing, and its cost but little more. Benson's are the only porous plasters that can be depended upon to cure every ailment subject to external treatment. They are prompt, sure and thorough. Protect yourself against deception by buying of reliable druggists only. The genuine bear the "Three Seals" trade-mark and has the word "Capsine" cut in the centre. ja20-MWAS
