JUANITA CLUB AT HOME.

An Association of Kindred Spirits in Brooklyn.

Located in the Heart of the Business District.

The Juanita Club is a social organization which occupies a peculiar position among the social clubs of the City of Churches.

It was born right in the heart of the busiest portion of Brooklyn and has been in a flourishing condition from the day it was founded.

WILLIAM HUGHES.

The members of the Club disdain anything of a silk-stocking nature for their organization. They maintain that the Club is but an association of kindred spirits, who enjoy each other's company, and who go in for a good time.

The membership is drawn from among the busiest of Brooklyn's merchants and professional men. There are just enough politicians sprinkled in to give spice to the complexion of the membership roll.

The Juanita Club had its foundation in a musical club, which existed in Brooklyn's Eleventh Ward twenty years ago. The musical club went the way of most good things, and the Juanita Benevolent Association took its place.

The Juanita Social Club was incorporated just about two years ago with ninety-five charter members. Most of the founders have been together since they were boys. The want of a congenial meeting place led to the organization of this Club and the rental of a house.

The Club's home is at 493 Bridge street. It is a plain looking three-story and basement red brick house. There is nothing striking about its outward appearance unless it be two gas lamps at the bottom of the steps which lead to the parlor floor. These gas lamps are of heavy plate glass with the Club's monogram upon them.

The basement of the club-house is used as a pool and billiard room. Off the main room is a cafe, which is a feature of the Club. Eatables and drinkables can be found as long as the house is open. The person is yet to be found who has given an order for any kind of liquid refreshment and found the article wanting. The pool and billiard tables are of the first grade, and there are plenty of them.

A pair of pretty little parlors are the attraction on the next floor. The carpets and furniture are of elegant texture and design. The draperies and pictures give the rooms a very artistic appearance. Telephone and messenger calls are on this floor.

The second floor is used as an office, reading-room, card and committee rooms. Appropriate and beautiful pictures are the rule throughout this floor.

The top floor is occupied by the steward.

The main feature of the house is the fact that none of it is too good, and all of it is good enough to be used at any and all times by its members.

There is something of interest going on all the time at the Juanita Club. Pool, billiard and card tournaments keep the members busy. Stag rackets are given every month. Ladies receptions are given two or three times a year.

The annual election occurs the first week in January. This is always followed by a royal good time. The annual dinner is held in June. This outing has been held each year from the founding of the old Juanita Musical Society.

At the present time a cribbage tournament is in progress at the club-house. There are forty-eight members, or twenty-four teams, in the tournament. While the club-house did very well for a starting place, the members already feel the necessity of having a larger headquarters. The Club expects either to build or buy a place within a year or two.

The new home of the Club will not be very far from the City Hall. The Club wants a bowling alley badly, and feels cramped, because it has not sufficient room in which to build one.

The Club now has a membership of 150. The President is William Hughes, a well-known lawyer and Supervisor of the Eleventh Ward. He has been connected with the Juanita organization for eighteen years.

The Vice-President is Deputy Coroner Daniel M. Kelly; Recording Secretary, Peter L. Kenny; Financial Secretary, W. J. Larkins; Treasurer, W. J. Farrell; Board of Directors—C. J. Healey, M. J. Dwyer, John Tierney, Brian Tully, J. M. Van Wagner, James F. Mooney, Thomas H. Woods, Joseph J. Moran, Benjamin F. Barry and James F. Minogue.

Charles J. Healey is Chairman of the House Committee; D. M. Kelly, of the Social Committee; W. J. Farrell, of the Library Committee, and P. L. Kenny, of the Membership Committee.

Among the well-known members of the Juanita Club are: Assemblyman John J. Hennessy, Coroner Joseph A. Kene, Police Justices Walsh and Hagerty, Anthony Barrett, Thomas J. Moore, E. A. Warren, Subway Commissioner Frederick R. Leigh, John S. Gray, William C. Herbert, ex-Alderman E. H. Itjen, E. J. Longstaff, Supervisor McGuire, Dennis McNamara, F. J. Munson, Peter Mallen, Thomas Murphy, C. H. Medicus, H. E. Nelines, John E. Nolan, M. F. Read, Dr. M. W. Smith and M. J. Conway.

DON'T BUY CAR TICKETS.

Otherwise Your Friends Will Ride at Your Expense.

"You take my advice," said the street-car conductor, as he tore off a pasteboard slip and returned the remainder to a Washington Post reporter, "don't you ever buy tickets.

"Economy's the road to wealth. A hundred times in my life I've seen three or four fellows get on and one would rush for his money. 'Hold on" another would say, 'I've got tickets.' Back would go the money and in would go the pasteboards.

"There is something in human nature that makes a man spend car tickets as if he was a duke. He looks on them as worthless. The fellow who lets them alone and puts up a nickel when he has to, generally rides free. Watch it some time time and see for yourself."

AT THE BROOKLYN THEATRES.

Wilson Barrett at the Park Next Week.

"Gloriana" at the Columbia—Other Attractions.

Wilson Barrett, the well-known English actor, with a competent company, will appear at Col. Sinn's Park Theatre, in Brooklyn, next week in a repertoire of plays. Monday and Wednesday nights and at Wednesday matinee "Pharoah" will be given his first production in Brooklyn; Tuesday and Thursday nights "Ben-My-Chree" will be given. Mr. Barrett's version of "Hamlet" will be presented on Friday night, and the last two performances of the engagement will be devoted to a revival of "The Silver King." All the plays will be handsomely staged.

"Gloriana," James Mortimer's farce-comedy, will be presented at the Columbia Theatre Monday night by Charles Frohman's company. Among those who are in the cast are Charles B. Wells, Thomas A. Wise, Edwin Stevens, Hyde Robson, Otis Harlan, William Lewers, Henrietta Crossman, Margaret Robinson and May Robson.

"Men and Women," which will be the offering at the Amphion during the coming week, is the last and best joint work of David Belasco and Henry C. De Mille. One of Charles Frohman's companies will interpret it. In the cast are Frank Burbeck, Frank R. Mills, Fred G. Ross, Neil O'Brien, Lula Vane, Nanette Comstock, Maud White, Myrtle Dow, Mrs. Kate Meek and George Turner.

A new comedy, called "Billy Boot," will be the attraction at the Grand Opera-House next week. Numerous songs and dances and other specialties are introduced in the performance. The piece is said to have met with a good measure of success in California and the West. It will be in the hands of Harry William's company, which includes Joseph J. Sullivan, Larry Smith, John and James Russell, Ethel Lynton, Maud Raymond, Annie Russell, Maggie Colton and a score of others.

"The Ensign," which has been seen at the Park Theatre during the past week, will move over to the Eastern District Monday evening and open at the Bedford Avenue Theatre. "The Ensign" is clean and wholesome, and is fairly strong in dialogue. Mr. Fawcett's performance of the old salt stands out as a real flesh and blood figure, finely drawn and finely shaded.

Wallace Ross, the well-known oarsman, has been engaged to appear in "A Dark Secret," which is to be put upon the stage at the Lee Avenue Academy Monday night. "A Dark Secret" is the original "tank drama." It will be presented by a company which numbers half a dozen acrobats, a quartet Sam Allen, who will give a specialty act, and many other persons.

At Huber & Gebhardt's Casino the list of performers includes Cyrene, in dancing specialties; Ward and Brown in burlesque, Tessie Langdon, serio-comic; Laura Mortimer, songs and dances; Fred Barr; banjoist, and Miss Minnie Schult. Tuesday afternoon and evening the box office receipts will be contributed to the German Hospital Benefit Fund.

Losing Her Relatives.

[From Texas Siftings.]

Miss Gadder—Oh, dear, I do hate Winter! It's such hard work for me to select becoming gowns and bonnets. I do so envy Mrs. Mayfair.

"Why, my love?"

"Because she has such luck that scarcely three months pass that she does not lose a relative."

Charity.

[From Truth.]

Dusty Rhodes—I thought you might be willing, perhaps, to bestow a dime as a thank offering for continued health and prosperity.

Mrs. Dogood—What have you done with the dime I gave you a year ago, you improvident man?

BRAVE BESSIE M'DOUGAL.

The San Francisco Girl Who Dared Death and Receives Notable Thanks.

A general order of the Secretary of the Navy has been read from the quarterdeck of every ship in the service to the assembled officers and crew, tendering the thanks of the nation to a young and beautiful girl for services rendered on the occasion of the recent explosion at Mare Island Navy-Yard, California. A dozen or more young sailors from the United States ship Boston were filling shells at the Mare Island magazine.

Somehow—for, according to Kate Field's Washington, no one is alive to tell how a shell exploded, and in an instant the whole building went up in fire and smoke. A dozen men were killed outright. At the moment of the explosion a young girl was driving in a pony cart towards the magazine, about a quarter of a mile away. As she passed the Naval Hospital a doctor rushed on and started to run towards the high pile of smoke that hung over the southern end of the island.

Promptly realizing the emergency, the young lady called to the doctor to jump into the cart, and whipping her pony into a canter, soon carried him to the scene of the accident. There they found that several small magazine buildings, in which shells were exploding every moment, had caught fire. The dead and wounded lay around.

There were enough explosives in and about the burning buildings to destroy a city. But they heed them not, heeding nothing but the calls of mercy, they passed into the smoke. There a watchman—Collins by name—half dazed to a blow from a flying fragment and blinded with blood that flowed from a wound in his forehead, was found staggering to building, closing the iron shutters and doors to prevent further disaster.

Our young heroine calmly stopped in that smoking inferno to tie a bandage around his wounded head and then helped Collins and for other wounded to whom her gentle hands might bring relief.

Amid the continuous flashing of fresh explosions and the moaning of shells the brave girl stayed until other helpers arrived and insisted on her leaving, so dangerous a place. For this the Nation's thanks have just been tendered to Miss Bessie McDougal.

Miss McDougal, who is now visiting friends in Washington, is as beautiful as she is brave. Moreover, she comes of a brave stock.

Her grandfather, the late Admiral McDougal, who was the hero of Shimonoseki, when in command of the Wyoming, a sloop of only six guns, engaged a force of ten batteries, mounted thirty heavy guns and twelve men-of-war carrying eighteen guns—forty-eight guns in all—destroying one of the batteries, sinking two ships, disabling the third and emerging from the conflict with his ship in good fighting condition and but four of his crew killed.

Commander McDougal, our heroine's father, lost his life while on duty as lighthouse inspector on the Pacific coast. A splendid swimmer, he might have saved himself, but he tried to save a companion and died with him.

NOT IN THE PLAY.

An Unexpected Thump Which He Attributed to New Business.

The other night a policeman heard fierce wrangling in the house of a colored man on Calhoun street, and he knocked on the door as a warning that he was around, says The Detroit Free Press.

It was opened by the man of the house, who saw that his visitor was an officer, and explained:

"Dis hesn't no family fight or nuffin' of dat sort. We is sort o' rehearsin' fur a play dat is comin' off at our cake walk."

"Oh, that's it? I thought I heard you call your wife a fool?"

"Dat's in de play, sah."

"And she called you a thief?"

"In de play, sah."

"And you threatened to split her head open?"

"Zactly, sah—all in de play."

He was standing in the open door, and at that moment a stick of wood hit him in the back of the head and keeled him over, and he alighted on the ground, where he lay for half a minute without motion. He was slowly struggling to his feet when the officer queried:

"Was that in the play, too?"

"N-no, sah—not 'zactly," was the reply, "but dat's some new business jist worked in, I reckon!"

ANYTHING GOES FOR THEM.

The Emus at the Park Are Fond of Diamonds and Watch Chains.

The pair of emus, those two long-necked birds from the Antipodes, out at Golden Gate Park, that are much taller than a man, are enjoying themselves these days, says the San Francisco Examiner.

Both of them are gentle in a way, but are exceedingly curious, and come running up to the fence enclosing the quarters set apart for them in one corner of the buffalo paddock when any one approaches. They are particularly attracted by bright and shiny objects, a peculiarity which several persons have been made aware of in a startling way.

First they take in a few sections of neck, until their heads are on a level with that of the visitor, and gaze at him a moment with an inquiring look that they intend for a very fierce sort of frown on their feathery foreheads.

Then the visitor is sized up, the next thing is to make a wild dash at anything the person wears, from a sparkling diamond to a love button. Most anything of the kind will do, including umbrella handles, cane heads, watch charms and chains, for the emu is not an over-particular bird in the simple matter of food. Something that will scratch the throat as it goes down seems to suit best.

Yesterday a lady who carried a slender parasol paraded, with a silver knob on the end, was pounced out to a round dozen times. Upon inquiry and peculiarities of Mr. and Mrs. Emu.

She did not know of their ruling passion, and explained her remarks with the silver-headed parasol, when suddenly two fierce heads shot out and violently snapped several feet away, shot out its head. The silver knob was snapped from the handle and a ridge marked the location of the morsel as it slowly slipped along the bird's esophagus.

The parasol emu is sold to be carrying it disposed around that it deftly extracted from the shirt front of an incautious sight-seer, and is also in possession of a handful of pretty glass marbles, which it dived into a small boy's pocket.

The big birds have very strong beaks, and generally get what they go after.

TWO QUEER EPITAPHS.

Those of Daniel Barrow and Stage-Driver Hank Monk.

The two most remarkable epitaphs in the United States are those of Daniel Barrow, formerly of Sacramento, Cal., and Hank Monk, Horace Greeley's stage-driver, says the St. Louis Republic.

The former reads as follows: "Here is laid Daniel Barrow, who was born in sorrow, and borrowed little from nature except his name and his love to mankind and his hatred to redskins; who was, nevertheless, a gentleman and a dead shot; who, through a long life, never killed his man except in self-defense, or by accident, and who, when at the last, went under beneath the bullets of his cowardly enemies in Jeff Morris's saloon, did so in the sure and certain hope of a glorious and everlasting morrow."

Hank Monk's epitaph reads thus: "Sacred to the memory of Hank Monk, the whitest, bigest-hearted and best known stage-driver of the West, who was kind to all and thought ill of none. He lived in a strange era, and was a hero, and the wheels of his coach are now ringing on the golden streets."

An Exception.

[From Truth.]

"Deception never pays," said the moralizer.

"Oh, doesn't it?" said the demoralizer. "I know a man who made $5,000 out of false teeth last year."

Homeric

[From Judge.]

"Ingersoll says that Homer didn't believe in religion."

"Nonsense! We have reason to believe he went to church, any way."

"What is it?"

"Didn't he sometimes nod?"

WHO ATE GERRITY'S GOAT?

Rumor Says It Was Peddled Out as "Spring Lamb."

Many South Brooklyn Pets Said to Have Met the Same Fate.

The family goat as a well-recognized institution in South Brooklyn, and Thomas Gerrity, of 459 Dauglass street, was the owner of a buck billy that was the pride, not only of his household, but of the entire neighborhood.

Several family goats in that vicinity have recently mysteriously disappeared, and when Mr. Gerrity's was recently reported missing, there was a sensation in the block.

The case was reported to the police, and the detectives worked so successfully that before long they had James Nugent and John Gottlieb in custody.

There is said to be no doubt that they are responsible for the disappearance of Mr. Gerrity's pet, but the police made a discovery in connection with the prisoners which has horrified every resident of that neighborhood, sent women into hysterics, and even caused strong men to feel queer sensations.

This is that the prisoners have for a long time been making a practice of robbing the goat pens of the vicinity, and, after securing their booty, have disposed of it to a neighboring butcher, who has sold it to his customers as Spring lamb.

The police say that they have conclusive evidence of this, and that the facts will be brought out at the examination, for which both Nugent and Gottlieb were held by Justice Tighe at the Butler Street Police Court.

Nothing has been found of Mr. Gerrity's family goat, and it is presumed to have taken the usual course.

The police have not yet ascertained the name of the butcher, but it is safe to say that if it becomes known he might as well make ready to peddle, or to transfer his business to some other part of the State.

Quer Clothes.

[From Truth.]

"Have you all kinds of pants?" he asked of the clothing clerk.

"Yes, sir."

"Then show me some dogs' pants."

"I'm afraid we are quite out of dogs' pants now, but I can show you some dove cotes."

It's ineffective, except for the moment—the ordinary pill. Because it upsets your whole internal economy, you needn't think it's doing you good. It only shocks and weakens your system. Take something that's better. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do good that lasts. They regulate the system, as well as cleanse and renovate it; mildly and gently, but thoroughly and effectively—no griping, no violence. They're the smallest and the easiest to take, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and the best liver pill ever known. Only one little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. Sick or Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved and cured.

They're the cheapest pills you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction.

TALK OF THE TURF.

Brookdale Stud Farm Has Been Purchased by William P. Thompson.

NARKA COLT IS NOW BRYAN.

Prince Fortunatus Declared to Be Hopelessly Gone—Gossip.

The news, exclusively printed in last night's Sporting Edition of "The Evening World," that the Indiana Legislature contemplated the passage of a bill, which would stamp out Winter racing in that State, furnished a choice morsel of gossip for the sports last evening. It was the general opinion that it would be the best thing that ever happened to Indiana, for the Winter racing associations have disgusted every one by their constant squabbling in the courts. The racing associations have no one to blame but themselves, and no sympathy will be expressed for them when the law closes their gates. It has been a constant fight for the dollars of the public, and their actions have been such as to arouse the indignation of the public and the press. The Legislature will, it is said, prohibit racing during the months of December, January, February and March.

* * *

The Narka colt has been renamed Bryan, after a turf critic of that name. McCormick declares that he is inspired by motives of revenge, for he knows Bryan will tip the colt just to see his name in print. In this way, Bryan (not the colt) will lose his friends and his money for Bryan (not the man) is an uncertain kind of a dog. McCormick will be satisfied to get the handsome outfit which Bryan has promised to provide for the colt.

* * *

The Brookdale Stud Farm, which was owned by the late D. D. Withers, has been purchased by William P. Thompson, who is the head of the Lead Trust. Mr. Thompson makes the purchase for his two sons, the Messrs. Lewis and William Payne Thompson. The young men are very fond of racing, and will devote their energies towards breeding and raising thoroughbreds. They will also take an active part in racing, having already bought extensively at the recent yearling sales. "All Black," the colors made famous by Mr. Withers, will probably be the colors worn by the Thompson horses. The farm consists of about eight hundred acres of rolling land, thickly wooded in places, and is situated in New Jersey, about five miles from Red Bank. The price paid is said to be $150,000.

* * *

David Gideon asserts that His Highness has recovered from his lameness of last year, and is to-day as sound as a dollar. Mr. Gideon believes that His Highness will be a hard nut to crack in the four-year-old division this season. He has refused flattering offers for the colt for stud purposes.

* * *

Prince Fortunatus, a starter in the mile event yesterday, did not finish. He broke down in the stretch, and his trainer, John Connolly, after examining him, declared that he was hopelessly gone.

* * *

Martin attempted to draw a fine finish with Woodchopper in the last race yesterday, but he was just nipped by Innovation, who had the Gloucester jockey, Yetter, in the saddle. Martin was confident that he won, but to those in the stand it looked as though he just failed to get up.

* * *

"Virginia" Bradley played Inspector C, yesterday, and the few that followed his lead were happy, for as good as 15 to 1 was quoted against Inspector B.'s son. This is the second good thing the Baden Stable has cut loose in the past few days.

* * *

Miss Belle was badly interfered with in the last race. But for this she would have been closer at the finish.

* * *

Belwood was given a nice easy race in the last event. Flynn took matters too calmly.

* * *

Young Leich is rapidly coming to the front as a good light-weight. He rides good races and invariably lands his mount in the first three. Yesterday he rod five mounts. He scored three seconds and a third.

* * *

Innovation was played down from 30 to 1 to 10 to 1, and her owners probably landed a barrel of money. It was her first start since she broke down last Fall.

* * *

Miss Belle and Fagot only beat Extra two necks. This horse is improving considerably, but why does his owner stack up against the best horses at the track? In his proper class, Extra could win many purses.

* * *

None of the horses in the first race dropped dead yesterday, but they were very, very tired. Annie W.'s victory was no surprise, for she went seven furlongs a few days ago in very clever style.

* * *

Krikina, Mohican and Azrael finished heads apart in the fourth race yesterday. With one more break Fidget would have been up with them, also. He was standing when the flag fell.

Ben March ran another good race yesterday. Keep an eye on him. He will be dropped into a soft spot very soon.

Dr. Crosby was last away in his race yesterday. He passed everything in the race, and was very close to the leaders a sixteenth of a mile from the finish, but the effort it cost him to get up proved too much, and he dropped back again.
