

upon all three occasions, it will be because he or she is unavoidably detained. It is to be the one big show of the year with a million attractions, a million, count 'em, and the ladies of the Nonsectarian Charity league who have done so much good for the poor of the city in the past and who are making an extra effort to make the County Fair an artistic and financial success are unsparing in their energy, and there will be eats and drinks and dancing and a hundred fun creating ideas to make it the one best bet of the season.

Twenty-five cents is the admission fee. It might cost a little more to get out, but that doesn't matter if the fun is fast and furious enough. There will be games, old and new, there will be attractive booths presided over by the leading matrons in society who will be assisted by a hundred of the young ladies, and while all of the attractions have not been announced, there will be enough to suit the taste of everyone who attends.

It is believed that no one will be detained except those who are incapacitated, raising a family or attending to some other detail which will preclude the possibility of their making an appearance. J. W. Mellen has generously donated the hall, a long list of merchants have contributed in various ways, the newspapers are giving the ladies a million dollars worth of space, and nothing but an earthquake or some kindred trouble will prevent the County Fair from being the biggest attraction of the winter. It is up to everybody to go early and stay late.

In old Cheyenne they give real society affairs, if the following excerpt from "The Leader" may be taken as a criterion. Deft workers at the sauer kraut party at the Dutcher manage, let fly quip and jest, and all things considered it was a regular party, the account of which might offer a suggestion for those who are suffering from ennui in Salt Lake's smart set. However, hardly any of those here have vegetable gardens, though in an emergency they might collect some cabbage heads from among the guests. The story follows:

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Dutcher were the clever originators of a sauer kraut party, which took place Friday evening at their home east of Lake Minnehaha.

Seven couples of their friends were bidden to the party, and were instructed to bring a big jar and a kraut cutter. The idea savored of a frolic, and there was no hesitancy in accepting the invitation.

At 7.30 o'clock, the guests arrived, bringing with their jars a readiness for any fun that might be forthcoming.

The host, who is a remarkably successful gardener, had a great heap of cabbages ready for the cutting, and without delay the men doffed their coats, and the ladies enveloped themselves in big aprons and the cabbage fairly flew, so deft were the workers. Some were novices and didn't know what to do next, but others, who claimed to be veterans at the business gave instructions freely, and the company was busy for a couple of hours packing and tamping the shredded cabbage, with a judicious sprinkling of salt. "First aid" was rendered to two of the overzealous workers, who sliced their fingers.

The most delightful informality prevailed and quip and jest flew back and forth. The fun makers inquired about red cabbages, and insisted that a few should have been included in the supply, to take the place of the "red ears" at a corn husking. The guests raised their voices in the singing of familiar ditties, such as "We're Here, Because We're Here," "To Drive Dull Care Away," "John Brown's Body" and the like, and
