Scrofula Tumors

Salt Rheum, Nervousness, Other Troubles

Complication of Diseases Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Ben. Shetterly

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sirs: From childhood I had been a great sufferer from scrofula, having a tumor on my left breast and another in my stomach. I was also afflicted with salt rheum. We spent much money for medical attendance and remedies, but all to no avail. Three years ago I commenced to run down. The trouble with my stomach would not allow me to eat and even milk distressed me very much. My right hand and arm became almost paralyzed, and my stomach difficulty was fast developing into Serious Female Troubles.

I became very nervous and was subject to fainting spells. Dark spots appeared before my eyes. The doctors failed to help me. In the spring I read about the wonderful cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to give it a trial. After taking it a short time I commenced to feel better, my digestion improved, and the

I shall continue taking Hood's Sarsaparilla as it is my cheapest hired servant. I am a farmer's wife, our place embracing 120 acres. We think Hood's Vegetable Pills cannot be beaten, and we have great faith in Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. BENJ. SHETTERLY, Buchanan, Michigan.

TRADE S.S.S. MARK

In 1886, my son, suffered very much from cancer of the mouth. By advice of physicians, an operation was performed, extending from the jaw bone, which they scraped but the cancer returned and grew rapidly. Finally, after trying many remedies in vain, I commenced to give him S. S. S.; after seven bottles had been taken the cancer disappeared entirely and though 7 years have elapsed, there has been no return, and I have every reason to believe that he is permanently cured. His cure is due exclusively to S. S. S.

TWO FRIENDS.

A Pathetic Story of the Siege of Paris.

One clear morning in January—that terrible January during the siege, when famine was knocking at the very gates of Paris—M. Morissot, a clockmaker by trade, but rendered an idler by force of circumstances, was strolling slowly along the outer boulevards. As with bowed head and hands thrust deep in his pockets he walked on engrossed in his own sad thoughts, he suddenly stopped before a man whom he recognized as an old friend. It was M. Sauvage, whose acquaintance he had made on the river bank.

On each Sunday before the war Morissot used to set out at dawn with a bamboo cane in his hand and a tin box strapped on his back. He went by the Argenteuil railroad as far as Colombes, and then walked to the Isle of Marante. Scarcely arrived at that dreamy place he would begin to fish, and would stay there till nightfall.

On each Sunday he used to meet a stout, jovial fellow, M. Sauvage, of the Rue Notre Dame de Lorette, who was also an enthusiastic fisherman. They often passed a half day together, sitting side by side, their lines in their hands and their feet dangling over the current, and a friendship soon sprang up between them.

On some days they would not exchange a word with one another, but they grew into that perfect understanding which exists between persons who have similar tastes and who experience similar emotions.

The two friends shook hands cordially, but both felt a tinge of sadness at meeting under such gloomy circumstances. M. Sauvage sighed and murmured:

"What a condition of things!"

Morissot gloomily replied:

"And what fine weather!"

They began to walk side by side and Morissot continued:

"And our fishing? How pleasant it is to think of it!"

M. Sauvage demanded:

"When shall we ever be able to go again?"

They entered a little cafe and drank together an absinthe and then resumed their promenade along the boulevard.

Morissot stopped suddenly:

"Another glass?"

M. Sauvage assented:

"At your pleasure," and they went into another cafe. When they came out M. Sauvage exclaimed:

"Supposing we go?"

"Where?"

"Why, fishing, to be sure."

"But where?"

"To our old place. The French advanced posts are near Colombes. I know Col. Dumoulin and I am sure that he will let us pass."

Morissot trembled with anticipation.

"Good!" he cried. "I am with you," and they parted to get their hooks and lines.

An hour later they were walking side by side on the highway, and soon reached the villa in which the colonel had established his headquarters. He smiled at their request and good-naturedly granted them a pass.

By eleven o'clock they had passed the outer pickets and Colombes, and found themselves at the border of a small vineyard that sloped down towards the Seine.

Before them lay the apparently dead and deserted village of Argenteuil. The heights of Orgemont and Sannois dominated the landscape, and the broad plain that extends as far as Nanterre was a picture of desolation with its leafless trees and gray stretches of bare earth.

M. Sauvage pointed toward the summit of the hills, and murmured:

"The Prussians are there."

"Eh? Supposing we should meet them?"

M. Sauvage replied with that Parisian joviality which never deserted him:

"We would offer them a fried fish."

But still intimidated by the ominous silence they hesitated to venture across the field. At length M. Sauvage decided:

"Come! Come!" And stooping down they crept through the vineyard, dodging from bush to bush, straining their eyes and ears to detect the slightest suspicion of pursuit.

A stretch of bare ground remained to be crossed. After a long hesitation they summoned their courage, and running at full speed attained the river bank and concealed themselves among the dry reeds.

Morissot listened with his ear to the ground for sounds of pursuit, but he heard nothing, and upon this assurance of their safety they began to fish.

Before them the abandoned isle of Marante shut out the view of the opposite shore. The little restaurant was closed, and appeared to have been deserted for years.

M. Sauvage caught the first gudgeon, Morissot the second, and from time to time they pulled in their lines with a fish wiggling on the hook.

The sun poured its warm rays upon them, and, absorbed in their pastime which had been so long denied them, they soon became oblivious to their surroundings.

Suddenly a dull sound seemed to burst from the earth. The cannonade was being resumed.

Morissot turned his head, and away to the left he perceived the great silhouette of Mount Valarien, which bore upon its brow a tuft of smoke. Soon a second jet of flame shot out from the fortress, shortly succeeded by a third intonation. Then others followed, and at regular intervals the mountain sent forth its death-dealing breath and exhaled its milky vapors, which, rising slowly in the calm atmosphere, hung like a cloud above it.

M. Sauvage shrugged his shoulders.

"They are beginning again," he said.

Morissot, who was anxiously watching his float, was suddenly seized with the anger of a peaceful man whose calm is disturbed, and grumbled:

"Isn't it stupid to kill one another like that?"

M. Sauvage replied:

"They are worse than the beasts themselves."

And Morissot, who had just pulled in another fish, declared:

"And to think that this sort of thing will continue as long as there are governments."

M. Sauvage stopped him.

"The republic would not have declared war—" but M. Morissot interrupted him, saying:

"With kings you have external war; with republics you have internal wars."

And then Alber Joseph a tranquil dis-

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned commissioners, therefore duly appointed by the Honorable Jame A Humphrey, judge of the district court of Dickinson county, Kansas, will on the 26th day of February, A. D. 1894, proceed to lay off, according to law, the right of way of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company, along the line of its route, as located through the county of Dickinson, all lands necessary for the route of said railroad, and also such lands as may be deemed necessary for side tracks, depots, workshops, water stations, material for construction, except timber, the right of way over adjacent lands sufficient to enable said company to construct and repair its road and stations, and the right to conduct water by aqueducts, and the right of making borrow pits, and appraise the value of the portion of any quarter section or other tract of land so taken and assess the damages thereto, which said lands so desired by said railway company are described as follows:

Lots ten (10), nine (9), eight (8), and the west half of lot seven (7), in block three (3), in the city of Herington, State of Kansas; the strip of land in the northwest quarter of section twelve (12), township twenty (20) south, range one (1) east, described as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of said block three (3), thence south forty (40) feet, thence east parallel with and forty (40) feet distant from the north boundary line of said block three (3), a distance of twenty seven and one half (27½) rods, thence south forty (40) feet to the north boundary line of said block three (3), thence west along the north boundary line of said block three (3) to the place of beginning, all of which said lots and lands being situated in the county of Dickinson, State of Kansas.

We will commence to lay off said route, as aforesaid at the northwest corner of said block three (3), and will adjourn from time to time until our labors in this behalf are completed.

Dated, this 20th day of January, A. D. 1894.

Non-pull-out

is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the groove, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark—

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. Ask your jeweler for pamphlet, or send to the manufacturers.

Dr. W. H. Morse of the Electro-Medical Institute, N. Y., replied to enquiry made by New England Farmer, Boston, whether it was possible to make an Electric Soap,—"In Dobbins' Electric Soap, Electricity certainly plays a part. It is a remarkably pure article, of excellent quality. It contains no soda or potash, apparently refusing to turn red with phenolphtalein. Thus the neutralizing property of electricity is apparent; and the presence of alkalies not being manifest, the soap has the effect of not drying skin, hair, and nails, as alkaline soaps do."

ELECTRICITY performs wonders now-a-days, and adds to our comfort, convenience and welfare in very many ways, but is nothing in all our wonderful than Dobbins' Electric Soap is, in its speedy attack upon dirt, wherever found, and in its lessened power to injure fabric or skin. A Model Line.

"Liberty" enlightening the world through the medium of a familiar trade mark regarding the unique and successful record and popularity of the "Erie Lines," in the safe and satisfactory handling of the unprecedented travel to the World's Fair, also as to the complete transformation of the physical condition of the property.

This popular road has been practically rebuilt within the last five years, and now ranks second to none in point of construction and equipment. Its trains, composed of cars of the latest and most approved type, run solid between New York, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cleveland, Chicago and Cincinnati. The passenger engines burn anthracite coal, which is a guarantee of freedom from smoke and cinders, and are designed to haul heavy trains at a high rate of speed over a double track road with heavy steel rails resting on a road bed crowned with a deep ballasting of broken stone.

Last, but not least, is its perfect system of interlocking block safety signals, protecting the line from one end to the other. These modern improvements and appliances place the Erie in the front rank of American railways.

Consider and solution of the great political problems with the limited reason of peaceful, quiet men who agree upon the one point that they will never enjoy true liberty.

Meanwhile the thunder of Mount Valarien continued incessantly, at each discharge demolishing so many French homes and lives, rudely dispelling so many happy dreams, so many anticipated pleasures, and opening in the hearts of women and mothers in this and other countries wounds which will never heal.

"Such is life," declared M. Sauvage.

"Say rather such is death," lightly replied Morissot.

Suddenly they trembled with fear, realizing that some one marched behind them, and, turning their heads, they saw four German soldiers covering them with their muskets.

Their lines slipped from their hands and fell into the river; and within a few moments they were seized, bound, thrown into a boat and carried to the island.

Behind the house which they thought deserted they found a squad of German soldiers.

A bearded giant sitting astride a chair and smoking a huge pipe with a porcelain bowl asked of them, in excellent French:

"Well, gentlemen, have you had good luck?"

By way of reply one of the soldiers deposited at the officer's feet the basketful of fish which he had taken care to bring with him.

The Prussian smiled.

"Ah! that's not bad. But another thing first. Listen:

"To me you are two spies sent to watch me. I take you, and I shall shoot you. You pretend to be fishing in order to observe me the better. You have fallen into my hands—so much the worse for you. Such is war.

"But as you passed the advance posts you surely have the pass word with which to return. Tell it to me and I will release you."

The two friends, pale and trembling, their hands agitated by a slight, nervous trembling, remained silent.

The officer continued:

"No one will ever know it. You will return in peace. The secret will disappear with you. To refuse is immediate death. Choose."

The two friends made no reply.

The Prussian calmly said while pointing towards the river:

"Think that in five minutes you will be at the bottom of that stream. In five minutes. You have families?"

The two friends stood rigidly erect and made no reply. The German gave a few orders in his own language, and then moved his chair in order not to be too near the prisoners. Twelve men with loaded muskets then placed themselves at a distance of twenty feet.

"I will give you one minute—not a second more."

He arose and brusquely approached the two Frenchmen. Taking Morissot by the arm he led him a short distance away and said in a low voice:

"Quick, the pass word. Your comrade will never know."

Morissot made no reply.

The Prussian then took Sauvage aside and made the same proposal to him.

M. Sauvage made no reply.

They again found themselves side by side.

The officer gave a command, and the soldiers raised their arms.

By chance, Morissot's glance fell upon the basket of fish lying on the ground a few paces away. The shining scales of the still living fish sparkled in the sunlight. In spite of himself his eyes filled with tears and he stammered:

"Good-by, M. Sauvage."

M. Sauvage responded:

"Good-by, M. Morissot."

They shook hands. The officer cried: "Fire!"

The twelve reports rang out like one. M. Sauvage fell like a block. Morissot, who was taller, wavered, turned and fell across his companion, face upwards, a flood of blood rushing from his breast.

The German gave a new order, whereupon his men marched away, but returned presently with cords and stones, which they attached to the feet of the corpses.

Two soldiers took Morissot by the head and feet and bore him to the river, and two others followed with Sauvage. The bodies, poised for an instant, were thrown into the stream and, describing a curve as they fell, plunged feet foremost into the current.

The water foamed and boiled and then became calm, while a few little waves reached as far as the shore. The surface was slightly stained with blood.

The officer, still serene and unruffled, quietly remarked:

"Now it is the turn of the fishes."

Then, turning toward the house, he noticed the basket of fish on the grass. He picked it up, examined it, smiled and cried:

"Wilhelm!"

A soldier wearing a white apron ran up at his call, and the Prussian, throwing the fish to him, commanded:

"Try these for me while they are still alive. They will be delicious."

Then he resumed his pipe.—From Maupassant, translated by Arthur A. Folsom for Boston Budget.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

MANHOOD RESTORED "CUPIDENE"

This great Vegetable Vitalizer, the prescription of a famous French physician, will quickly cure you of all nervous or diseases of the generative organs, such as Lost Manhood, Insomnia, Pains in the Back, Seminal Emissions, Nervous Debility, Pimples, Aversion to Marry, Exhausting Drains, Varicocele and Constipation. It shows all losses by day or night. Prevents quickness of discharge, which if not checked leads to Spermatorrhœa and all the horrors of Impotency. CUPIDENE cleanses the liver, the seat of all impurities.

CUPIDENE is the only known remedy to cure without an operation. See testimonials. A written guarantee given and money returned if six boxes does not effect a permanent cure. $1.00 a box, six for $5.00, by mail. Send for free circular and testimonials.
