NOTABLE WORK ON NEW MEXICO'S OLD MISSIONS

L. Bradford Prince Shows How Historically and Architecturally, This State Excels Ancient California.

Gov. L. Bradford Prince has contributed another valuable book to his notable works on various phases of New Mexico history. The present volume, of nearly 400 pages, beautifully illustrated, is descriptive of "Spanish Mission churches of New Mexico," which is its title.

Of the book Governor Prince says: "This is the only book ever published on the New Mexican mission churches which are 150 years older than those of California, and possess much more historic interest."

Of the book and the reasons which impelled him to write it at this time, Governor Prince says in the preface:

"Within the last quarter of a century many of the most interesting have disappeared, from natural causes or the hand of man. In Santa Fe itself, the old parish church of San Francisco, which served as a cathedral when a resident bishop was first provided for New Mexico, has given place to the new cathedral, which is a stately and beautiful building but without any flavor of antiquity, and the old Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, so quaint in its form and its adornments, has been modernized into an ordinary structure with a wooden steeple, that reminds one of New England instead of New Mexico.

"The old church at Fernandez de Taos, so noticeable for its massive buttresses which apparently would have stood for centuries, has been replaced by a modern building, no doubt more beautiful and more commodious, but which has taken away the precious associations with the heroic past; and San Juan, where the Christian faith was first proclaimed to the Pueblo Indians, has had a similar experience. Here the venerable parish priest, one of the earliest recruits brought from France by Bishop Lamy, has devoted not only his entire life, but also his ample means, to the people he loves so well, and caring more for their comfort than for matters of sentiment, first remodeled the ancient structure so as to be almost unrecognizable, and has since erected an entirely new edifice, of which he may be justly proud, but which to the lover of antiquity can scarcely compensate for the loss of the old church in which so many generations had worshiped.

"Then almost simultaneously, two of the oldest missions, those of Santa Clara and Nambe, succumbed to the combined attacks of modern improvements and cloud-bursts, as the new shingle roofs, substituted for the flat roofs of the older times, did not protect the adobe walls from the rainfall, and soon the massive structures which had stood for centuries, melted down into vast pyramids of mud. Meanwhile the great church at Santo Domingo, the home of many a grand festival, after many years of care and labor on the part of the Indians of the pueblo, in the endeavor to prevent the gradual approach of the river and the eating away of its foundations, found a grave in the rapid waters of the Rio Grande.

"Thus seven of the most important of the old religious landmarks disappeared in less than a generation, and it was evident that if the memorial of the ancient missions was ever to be written, or even their pictures preserved, it must be done at once. The collection of these pictures has been a labor of love, but one requiring patience and perseverance. Of some of those that had perished or been materially changed by vandal or modernizing hands, it seemed almost impossible to obtain a correct representation. The final success, however, is found between the covers of this volume."

CROWD TO BE AT NEW RIFLE RANGE FOR SHOOT TODAY

Opening of DuPont Competition, Jitney Service and Camp Dinner Will Combine to Take Many There.

Interest manifested in the opening of the new rifle range and the beginning of competition for the DuPont trophies led Roy A. Stamm, president of the Albuquerque Rifle association, to state last night that from 100 to 150 persons will be at the firing grounds, near Santa Barbara cemetery, today.

The fact that "jitneys" are to be run to the top of the hill overlooking the 1,000-yard range hourly will have bearing upon the size of the crowd. The first "jitney" will leave the city at 7:45 o'clock this morning. Firing is to start about 8 o'clock. "Open house" will be held there all day for members and persons interested in the development of shooting with military rifles.

Flags to Mark Route.

The top of the hill overlooking the 1,000-yard range will be marked with a United States flag to guide automobilists who go by way of the university. They are to turn north just beyond the university and turn to the left on the first road beyond the university fence. From that point the flag will show them the route. Another United States flag will be placed at the north end of the Santa Barbara cemetery as a beacon for automobilists who go that way.

Persons approaching on either of these roads will not be in any danger. The riflemen will fire to the north, away from the roads. The butts are under the shelter of a sand hill, which will stop stray bullets.

Canvas shelters, ice water and a camp lunch will be furnished at the range. Preparations have been made to feed from 100 to 150 persons. Mr. Stamm announced that visitors would be welcome. The invitation includes the women.

The conditions of the competition for the trophies follow:

Target "A" Slow Fire.

Time—No limit. Shots—10. Position—Prone with sand-bag rest.

Time—No limit. Shots—10. Position—Prone.

Time—No limit. Shots—10. Position—Five kneeling and five sitting.

Time—No limit. Shots—10. Position—Standing.

Target "B" Rapid Fire.

Time—1 minute. Shots—10. Position—Prone.

Time—1 minute. Shots—10. Position—Sitting or kneeling.

Time—1 minute. Shots—10. Position—Any position with rest.

The club will fire in four or five of these positions today. All firing will be at 200 yards range.

The Albuquerque club is believed to have an excellent chance to capture one, at least, of the trophies. About twenty members of this club give promise of breaking into the expert rifleman class within a short time.

MME. OLGA PETROVA

In "The Heart of a Painted Woman" at Pastime Today and Tomorrow; Story of the Play.

Selma, daughter of poor parents, leaves her home in Pennsylvania to go to New York and take up her career as a singer. Unsuccessful, she abandons singing and secures a position as model in the studio of a rich artist. After a few sittings model and master become infatuated and before the first painting is finished, Selma succumbs to his wiles and becomes his paramour.

Later, Selma is abandoned and the artist becomes the husband of a prominent heiress. Desperate and discouraged, Selma sinks lower and lower in the human scale and as an entertainment, she meets Young Spendthrift. Enthusiastic over Selma's rare beauty, her latest admirer suggests a game of cards, the stakes to be Selma herself. The winner to accompany her to her home. Disgusted at the affair, Selma flees—but is followed by Young Spendthrift, the winner. Spendthrift offers Selma large sums of money—but to no avail. Selma leaves Spendthrift and tells him that if she had his opportunities in life she would have accomplished things, instead of being the "sort of woman she was."

Struck with an inspiration, Spendthrift decides to give her a chance. And presents her with one hundred thousand dollars. Later, Wealth, father-in-law of Selma's former lover, covets the fortune of Spendthrift and uses the artist to bring about his ruin. By means of underhand methods, Wealth gains his end. Spendthrift is ruined. Selma, in the meantime has devoted her money and time to creating a hospital for the care of abandoned children. Visiting among the poor families takes mues of her time.

Spendthrift, learning that the artist was responsible for his downfall, as well as Selma's, plots revenge and with this end in view invites all his friends to see him bury his past life. Artist comes to the affair with Spendthrift, becomes intoxicated and at the end the two lie down to sleep off the stupor.

Wealth then appears, tirades against Artist's actions and the treatment by him of his, Wealth's daughter—while Spendthrift, in the throes of a drug passions—See the rest of this magnificent allegory in "The Heart of a Painted Woman."

CAPITALISTS INTERESTED IN NEW MEXICO MINING

John M. Moore, Jr., has just returned from a four weeks business trip to Salt Lake City, Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis. He reports that many factories, other than war agencies, are working at full force and there is a decided improvement in the confidence held by business men generally. There is no longer talk of hard times but everybody seems to be sawing wood.

Salt Lake City is on the eve of one of the greatest mining booms the country has ever witnessed, due to the recent strikes in what is known as the Alta-Cottonwood district. The prediction is quite general that this camp will outrival Leadville and the days of the Virginia Consolidated from which so many millions have been taken.

He was agreeably surprised to meet a number of capitalists who are interesting themselves in the development of mining properties in New Mexico and Arizona. The east is looking this way as a profitable outlet for its fast accumulation of money.
