REALTOR

The man of worth is he who does his best,
His very best—lives he in east or west—
Eager to be of use in his own state,
Remembering the true alone are great,
Enduring disappointments when they come
And, spite of loss, preserving his aplomb,
Life holds for him no pleasure more worth while
Than giving honest service with a smile.
On his good works the country's weal denends,
Regard him, then, as one of your best friends.
