Short Sermons.

If any man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him.—Christ.

People look at you six days of the week to find what you mean on the Sabbath.—Spanish Proverb.

Keep a good character yourself and other folks will give you a good character. Lies will not stick to you.

The wider the intellect, the larger and simpler the expressions in which its knowledge is embodied.—Holmes.

Nothing is more dangerous than a friend without discretion; even a prudent enemy is preferable.—La Fontaine.

The blessed end of right believing is right living; and the best kind of faith is that which is manifested in righteous conduct.

However brilliant an action may be, it ought not to pass for great when it is not the result of a great design.—La Rochefoucauld.

Brethren, if any man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.—Paul.

Make not a bosom friend of a melancholy soul; he'll be sure to aggravate thy adversity, and lessen thy prosperity. He goes always heavy loaded, and thou must bear half.—Fuller.

It is not always necessary to answer an accusation publicly. When there is no evidence for it, when it is contradicted by other evidence, one can afford, if his character is above reproach, to despise it and scorn it.—Independent.

Fear is not the Omega, but the Alpha of wisdom; it is good to start on. It goes before the assurance of faith and the perfect love which casts out fear. Understand, then, that the Scriptures only assert that fear is the beginning of wisdom. In the end love shall swallow up and cast out fear.—John R. Paxton.

The best recipe we know, if you want to be miserable, is to think about yourself, how much you have lost, how much you have not made, and the poor prospect for the future. A brave man with a soul in him gets out of such pitiful ruts and laughs at discouragements, rolls up his sleeves, whistles and sings, and makes the best of life. This earth was never intended for a paradise, and a man who rises above his discouragements and keeps his manhood will only be the stronger and better for his adversities.—Interior.

Willing to Come Down a Little.

In riding over to Lost Mountain from Marietta I came across a young man who was digging post holes for a barbed wire fence, and when I told him what I wanted, he replied:

"I'll go with you. I was in that fort myself, and I kin point out every position."

When we reached the ground he began telling where this and that regiment was stationed, and finally he halted beside a huge boulder, and said:

"Right here, stranger, was where I squatted for four hours. I rested my gun right thar on that ledge, and I reckon I killed exactly twenty-eight Yanks that day."

"No!"

"Solemn fact, and I know a dozen men who'll swear to it."

"Let's see? This battle was fought in 1864?"

"K'rect you are."

"That's about eighteen years ago?"

"Jist about."

"And you are about twenty-five years old?"

"I was 25 this spring."

Then I looked at him for a long time, but he never winced. When we were going home, and after a long period of silence, he suddenly remarked:

"Stranger, don't you believe I was thar?"

"Perhaps you were, but you see you were not quite seven years old on the day of that fight."

"That's what I've been figuring on," he continued in a very serious voice, and I'll tell you what I'm willing to do."

"Well?"

"I'll call it twenty-four instead of twenty-eight dead Yanks in front of my position. That's fair, isn't it?"

I told him that nothing could be more liberal, and cordial relations were at once restablished.—Detroit Free Press.

Disease in the Schools.

I said in my address at the health congress, at Brighton, what was quite true, that I had never in my life seen a healthy child, by which I meant that I had never seen a child that had not in it either some actual or latent constitutional disease. Touching the subject now in hand, it is equally true to say that it is all but impossible to find, in the board schools of our large towns, any semblance, critically viewed, of health. Constitutional taints, which under favorable circumstances may often be concealed, and which may or may not be apparent, are there. Various conditions of disease are there, independently of the tendency from heredity; there of themselves, in some irregularity of body or limb, in some imperfection of sense, in some deficiency of quality of blood, in some feebleness of respiration, in some nervous irregularity of function, in some shade of mental aberration.

The field of disease which is presented in some of the schools situated in crowded localities is indeed a sight at once for anxiety and pity. To the eye of a physician who, like myself, has spent many years in dispensary practice, it tells a story which is absolutely painful, if he permit the result to be calculated out in his mine at leisure hours; if, that is to say, he compares what he has witnessed in his survey with what he has learned, from long observation, of the meaning of the phenomena in the history of life. It is not necessary to strip the children, perceuss and sound the chest, examine the spine, or practice any of those refined arts of diagnosis with which he is familiar. He reads from the indications of temperament, of expression of countenance, of color of skin, of position of limb, of build of body; of gait, of voice, sufficient outward manifestation to discern what is the true physical state, what are the stamp and extent of disease, what is the vital value of the lives generally that are before him.—Dr. R. W. Richardson, in Popular Science Monthly.

FOR THE LADIES.

Mrs. S. A. Edson puts in a bill of $10,000 for nursing President Garfield.

Miss Francis E. Willard has been re-elected president of the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union.

Miss Jennie Steever, of Cass township, Huntingdon county, Ind., has completed a quilt containing 10,500 pieces.

Sarony, who paid Oscar Wilde $1,200 for the exclusive privilege of photographing him, has paid to Mrs. Langtry $6,000 for the same privilege.

The British Women's Temperance Association has presented to Parliament a petition for Sunday closing, bearing the signatures of 150,000 English women.

The movement of the higher education of women in England, which led to the establishment of various excellent colleges for them, seems to be justifying itself by practical results. Miss Botham Edwards is an acknowledged authority on Egyptology, and Miss Margaret Harkness is now delivering a course of lectures on the ancient Assyrians at the British museum.

The will of Miss Barbara Scott, a wretched old woman who inherited several fortunes and increased them by every means which her miserly instincts could advise, has been upheld by the Superior Court in Montreal. McGill University gets $40,000, and various hospitals, churches and charitable institutions receive the rest. For years before her death she lived isolated in the old family mansion in the suburbs of the city, until the dirt and filth became so intolerable that the board of health was forced to interfere.

A very important movement in the interest of the higher education of women has been undertaken in New York by an organization which has among its membership such names as those of Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Mrs. D. F. Appleton, Mrs. Dr. William H. Draper, Miss Minturn, and Mrs. Dr. E. P. Kinnicutt. The object is to secure for women the benefits of a systematized course of study in the principal institutions of learning, and to raise the standard of instruction in the existing girls' schools. The association is said to have the indorsement and support of many of the most prominent clergymen and physicians in the country.

Mrs. Chapman, of New York, has built up a new industry for women in the manufacture of leather edge braid. She began by making large collars for children out of two braids connected together, or aided in forming designs, by lace stitches and crochet stitches, executed with needles and knitting cotton. This was four years ago. The demand speedily outgrew her powers of supply. She now has seven hundred women working for her, many of them being married ladies, who wish to have a little money of their "very own." Seventy-five thousand collars were supplied last year to the wholesale house which takes Mrs. Chapman's work.

The Ideal Mule.

No wonder the mule is a kicker. Were I a mule, I, too, would kick. I know just exactly what kind of a mule I would be. A bay mule. One of those sad-eyed old fellows that lean back in the breeching and think. With striped legs like a zebra. And a dark brown streak down my back and a paint-brush tail. And my mane cut short, and my foretop banged, and a head as long as a flour barrel, and I'd be worth two hundred and a half in any market, and I'd wear a flat harness and no blinders, and some day when some man hitched me up to a dray, and piled on a ton and a half of pig iron, a cord of wood, six barrels of flour and a steamboat boiler, I would start off with it patiently and haul it steadily until I got to the top of the grade on the new road around North Hill, and right about there and then a falling maple leaf, fluttering down in a spark of gold and crimson, would scare me all out to death, and the authorities would have to drag the Mississippi river six weeks to find all of that load and some of that driver, while in three minutes after that emeute I would be tranquilly browsing on the grassy heights that smile above the silver flowing river. That is the kind of a mule I would be.—Burlington Hawkeye.
