Eli Perkins on Round Dances.

In a letter, Eli Perkins gives his opinion of round dances as follows:

Yesterday I asked a young lady if she danced round dances.

"Yes," she replied, "with my intimate friends. I don't dance them with strangers."

Happy and good young lady. She don't let only her intimate friends put their arms around her. None but intimate friends can hold her hand and draw her palpitating bosom to his. Oh! no! Strange young fellows from Hoboken can't line up on a first introduction and encircle her in their arms—unless they're good looking and practiced in the subtle art of the Brown boys. This good young lady is the only girl in Saratoga who will not gladly permit an entire stranger to be presented, and then fall squarely into his arms. O tempora, O mores! I guess old Cicero would have exclaimed worse than that if he had seen Miss Cicero Africanus three minutes after a Coliseum introduction. Now, then my dear mother in Israel, do you think all this is just right? It is the ritual of society, I know; but can't society have its dogmas as well as religion? If it is wrong for a fellow to even touch a young lady's hand in the parlor, is it altogether right for a stranger to encircle her in his arms in the ball room! Don't, my dear mother, think for a moment that we fellows dislike it! Don't think we are not willing to clasp your daughter to our aching hearts, for we are. We can hold them in our arms for hours, and never tire of the delightful amusement. Don't thick we are sick of it, but with us it is a question of morality. We want to be good.

The old lady who refused to ride in a mail coach because she didn't think it right to ride altogether with gentlemen, is here, and she holds her daughter's opera cloak every night while she dances with the "hugging Brown boys. De gustibus, etc. Hugging is a terrible word, but we are dealing with terrible facts.

Parental Egotism.

There are very few parents who unknowingly, in moderation, understand that the element of personal feeling should be eliminated in the management of children. The parent is a judge, and the judge must be dispassionate, else all authority is weakened.

Let us see how it works. John breaks a vase. His mother is very much irritated at the destruction of her favorite vase, and punishes him, not according to his sin, but according to her annoyance. She does not stop even to inquire whether or not the vase was broken by one of those unavoidable accidents which might have happened to herself or to a most careful person. In thus punishing her [illegible] guilty of selfish injustice and cruelty. She has weakened his respect and his affection for herself has done much to destroy her authority. The child feels that his mother is only avenging her own personal grievances.

A few days later the same John is guilty of an act morally as bad. It may chance that no evil consequences follow. The mother is glad to avoid trouble, and she lets it pass with little or no admonition. Johnny is a sharp little boy, and puts two ideas together very quickly. "It does not matter that I do wrong," he says, "if I only don't bother mamma. But I must take care not to touch anything of hers, else I'll catch it." It would be hard for family government to do a child a greater injury than to leave just this impression upon his mind. The mother has succeeded in confounding all moral distinctions in his mind, has weakened all authority, and set the example of selfishness, cruelty and injustice.—Hearth and Home.

To Save Coal.

The most practical suggestion yet made toward economy in coal seems to be the use of solid bottoms in ordinary fire grates. It is asserted, and indeed proved, that in any fireplace not excessively small, a plate of iron placed upon the grate will save the consumption of coal, reduce the smoke, and leave a cheerful free burning fire. Quite sufficient air enters through the bars, no poking is necessary, and the fire never goes out till the coals are consumed. Any householder can try this experiment, and reduce his coal bill, say, thirty per cent., at the cost of a shilling.

A Misunderstanding.

The parson went in to console with Mrs. Jones. Poor Jones! It was very sudden; and the widow was altogether inconsolable. So the person prepared to depart, saying, as he took his hat:

"I will leave you, poor bereaved one, with this injunction, pray—pray that God will vouch safe his comfort; that he will enable you to perceive the promised bow in the—"

"Oh! parson! at least in, "how can you think of such a thing? It's too—too—too premature, I assure!"

Money Order Decision.

The Attorney General has decided that after the remitter of a post-office order has sent it or delivered it to the person to whom it is made payable, he cannot stop the payment of it, but the party to whom it is made payable is entitled to have the amount paid to him on making proper demand. This is a decision which our traders will do well to remember.—Louisville Commercial.

A GENTLEMAN in Paris, Ky., according to the Kentuckian, sheds his big-toe nails regularly every year, the old nails going off without giving him the slightest pain, and giving place to perfectly formed new ones. The gentleman is perfectly healthy, having no disease of body or foot.

HERE is one of the soundest temperance arguments we have ever come across. The only temperance railroad in the United States—indeed, in the world—it is said to be the Marietta and Pittsburg railroad, running from Marietta to Cambridge, a distance of fifty-nine miles. Every officer and employe of the road is a practical temperance man, and not a single fatal accident has ever occurred upon it since it was first opened. This is suggestive as far as it goes; and it goes fifty-nine miles.—Pittsburg Commercial.

THE Amount of national bank currency authorized is $353,917,170. Of this, $108,648,279 is held in the six little New England States, while New York and Pennsylvania have a fraction over $103,000,000, and the Southern States, including Kentucky, have only $39,976,108. This leaves for the Western States about $102,000,000. Is is not high time that Congress should legislate for the benefit of the country at large, instead of that of New England?—Courier-Journal.

All Wrong.—The practice whereby boys stand in front of the opera house entrance at the close of the entertainment with their umbrellas raised and their trowsers rolled up. It is provoking indeed for a young lady, who after observing these indications of prevailing rain, stops in the lobby, fixes her things, covers her head with something and muffles herself generally, to step out under a starlit, cloudy sky, and hear the wicked boys giggle. It is all very wrong.

A YOUNG lady who had been studying French lately wrote to her parents that she was invited out to a dejeuner the day before, and was "going to a fete champetre the next day." The professor of the college was surprised to receive a telegram from the "old man," a day or two after, saying, "If you can't keep my daughter away from these blasted menageries and side shows, I will come down and see what ails her."

THE blossom, when crushed, yields its sweetest fragrance; the swan breaths its most thrilling melody in its death song. No character, however lovely, is perfected until it has passed through the ordeal of suffering. It spiritualizes the whole inner life; it detaches the soul from earthly things to which it has, perchance, clung heretofore, and brings it nearer the things pertaining to an unseen world. It makes the invisible [illegible] "If it can lie" asked an affectionate wife of her receding husband. "I don't know," he snapped out, querulously. "It would look better in you to be thinking about what is to become of me."

"THIS company shall never get another cent of my money," said an angry lady on a railway train. "How then will you travel?" asked the conductor, "I'll pay my fare to you."

RHEUMATISM NEURALGIA

GOOD WILL REMAIN

$5000 Reward offered to the Proprietors of any Medicine for Rheumatism and Neuralgia which can produce one-fourth as many genuine cures within the same period of time as Dr. Fitler's Vegetable Rheumatic Remedy—the scientific prescription of an able and educated physician, and the only reliable specific ever discovered.

$2000 Reward offered to any Person proving that Jos. F. Fitler, M. D., is in no other than a graduate of the celebrated University of Pennsylvania in 1843, and Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology.

$1000 Reward to any Chemist, Physician, or Others able to discover Iodide of Potassa, Colchicum, Mercury, or anything injurious to the system in Dr. Fitler's Rheumatic Syrup.

$500 Reward for any evidence that Dr. J. F. Fitler has not been particularly and successfully treating Rheumatism and Neuralgia, professionally, in Philadelphia for many years. Curing 50 in every 100 treated.

$510 Reward for the name of any preparation for Rheumatism and Neuralgia warranted to cure, or even similar local pretensions, selling with the exact number of bottles to cure or return the amount paid for some to the patient in case of failure to cure. Full description of cases requiring guarantee must be forwarded by letter to Philadelphia. The guarantee, signed and stating quantity to cure, will be returned by mail with advice and instructions without any charge. Address letters, Dr. J. F. Fitler, 40 South Fourth Street. No other remedy is offered on such honorable terms.

$100 Reward is offered for any case of Neuralgia or Rheumatism of any form, pronounced curable, that Dr. FITLER'S RHEUMATIC SYRUP will not cure. The proof that no other specific exists is found in every community in persons afflicted for many years past and still suffering. If physicians could cure it, if a specific did exist, this would not be so. Dr. Fitler's Vegetable Rheumatic Syrup is sold by druggists at $1 75 per bottle—six bottles $6 00. Full information, with circular containing reference to physicians, clergymen, &c., may be obtained of W. H. ANDERSON, sole agent for Stanford.

1,000 AGENTS WANTED

FOR THE

PEERLESS

BEE-HIVE!!

Patented Dec. 26th, 1871, by

J. S. PROCTER,

Of Franklin, Kntucky.

To Bee-keepers Everywhere:

The following points of excellence comprise a few of the many, that may be truthfully claimed for my hive:

1. It is simple in construction, neat in appearance and is the most easily understood and managed movable comb frame Hive ever invented.

2. The only material required in its construction is 26 feet of lumber, the nails necessary to fasten it together and a few small scraps of wire cloth to cover ventilators. Not a screw, screw eye, hook and eye, hinge, pivot, piece of tin, tin tube, glass, or other expensive material is used in its construction.

3. When properly used, it is the coolest hive for summer and as warm as the warmest for winter use, affording ample protection for the successful wintering of colonies on the summer stand.

4. By its use the necessity for "honey boards" or "honey bars" is entirely dispensed with, while the chambers may be contracted to suit the condition of any sized colony of from one single frame to ten, enabling the keeper to confine the animal heat to the space only occupied by the colony.

5. Less time and labor is required in handling, and the brood is less exposed than in using other first-class hives.

6. While it does not claim to be positively "moth proof" under all circumstances, yet it is provided with the least expensive and most effectual device for the capture and destruction of moth millers ever attached to a hive, and will do more to protect the bees from the ravages of that terrible scourge, than all the expensive and complicated "traps" ever invented and will in most cases afford perfect protection.

7. The construction is such that the frames and false ends fit equally well either the brood or surplus chamber.

8. A number of small colonies or nuclei may be used in the same hive, or one or more may be kept in surplus chamber, receiving all the necessary natural warmth from the colony confined to the brood chamber.

Other advantages might be enumerated, but the above are deemed sufficient.

An examination of fifteen minutes, will, I believe, satisfy any disinterested, practical Apiarian, of the superiority of the over any, and all others; and I CHALLENGE COMPARISON with any Hive on the AMERICAN CONTINENT, North, South, East or West.

Farm Rights and Sample Hive.....$10 00
