STAGE CUSTOMS A CENTURY AGO.—The admission of spectators upon the stage, which was prohibited in 1704, but not wholly abolished till many years later, was a serious annoyance to the audience before the curtain and to the performers, who were often embarrassed by the movement and loud talk around them, which they sometimes attempted to still by directing their acting particularly toward the offenders. The opinion of the privileged spectators not infrequently differed from that of the rest of the house, and a noisy contest ensued. At benefits the crowd upon the stage was at times so great as to leave a space no bigger than a table cloth for the acting of the piece. The suggestion has been made that the impossibility of changing scenery under such circumstances contributed to the adoption by the French of the law of unity of place. Men about town gathered on the stage, "more delighted," said Cibber, "to be pretty objects themselves than capable of any pleasure from the play." They "took their daily stands where they might best elbow the actor, and come in for their share of the auditor's attention." As the dress of the performers frequently closely resembled that of the quality around them, the audience sometimes mistook one for the other. On attendit Auguste, on vit paraitre un fat. In 1721 a tipsy lord crossed the stage during a performance to speak to a friend. Manager Rich who was standing near, told his lordship that in future he would be refused admission behind the scenes. The earl slapped the manager's face. Rich drew their swords, and their friends took up the quarrel. After a lively fight the actors expelled their adversaries, who then rushed into the front of the house, slashing sconces and hangings until they were overpowered by the constables. When Garrick was playing Lear in Dublin a gentleman put his arm around Cordelia's waist, and stood so while she pillowed the old king's head in her lap. The exclusion of the public from that city was brought about by a man-of-quality's kissing Miss Bellamy's neck, as she crowded past him to take her place where her part required. The Viceroy, Lord Chesterfield, applauded the spirit with which the actress resented the indignity. A notice dated New York, December, 1761, forbidding spectators the stage, shows that the practice referred to had been transplanted to this country.—Galaxy.

MRS. SURRATT'S CHAINS.—Mrs. Jane G. Swisshelm, of Pittsburg, writes to the New York Tribune in contradiction of Gens. Hartranft and Holt that she knows Mrs. Surratt was manacled while she was imprisoned and on trial, at Washington, as she heard the chains upon her ankles when they were slightly moved. The chains prevented her lifting her feet, and she only slid them on the floor. Every time the chains clanked Mrs. Surratt blushed painfully. Mrs. Swisshelm sat very near the prisoner in court, and says:

"Mrs. Surratt sat before or rather on one side of her judges chained with links of iron as heavy as those of a log chain, and while she sat thus she was grossly insulted by spectators, men and women, or things that looked like men and women. Once she turned pale when one of these creatures said: 'I hope they'll hang her! Just look at her! She looks like a devil!' I could not bear it, but spoke out and said: 'She does not look like a devil. She looks like a good, kind hearted woman and you are a mean coward for insulting a prisoner.' A man in reply said to me: 'She's a rebel,' and I repeated, 'Coward! coward!' Mrs. Surratt looked up and our eyes met. The expression of her face will haunt me to the grave and I thank God for the look of gratitude it wore. Mrs. Surratt's chains were a common subject of conversation in Washington at the time, and this morning is the first time I have ever heard any denial of the fact that Mrs. Surratt was fettered as she sat wearily through the long hours and days of that trial."

There are other persons who will testify to the apparant difficulty Mrs. Surratt had in moving about or lifting her feet at the time of the trial.

THREE EXTRAORDINARY suicides and a great thunder storm were reported in the English newspapers of July 31 as having occurred on the previous day. A well-dressed man pawned his watch and chain in London, traveled on foot and by rail to the summit of Shakespeare's cliff, from which he took a backward summer sault into eternity. On the same day the rector of South Perrett parish, in his dressing room, placing a pistol each side of his head, discharged them simultaneously, and so he died. Still on the same day, a man of respectable appearance placed his head on the railway for decapitation, which was performed by the next train. A journalist, fresh, doubtless, from the study of Buckle, thinks it not unlikely that "investigation will connect the culmination of such insane purposes with atmospheric disturbance." What an age this is for finding out "the causation of causes in the causes of things!"

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS' WORTH OF PEWS.—The new Jewish temple Aushi Chesed, in New York, which was dedicated on Friday, was well filled Sunday with Israelites at the auction of the pews. Diagrams of the seats in the audience room with printed conditions of the sale were distributed. The first pew was purchased by Mr. Nathan Asiel for $4,100, the second by Mr. Gerson N. Herman for $3,450, and the third by M. Fentelwanger for $1,500. Other pews brought all the way from $200 to $2,300. One half of the pews remaiped unsold. The sales closed at 4 o'clock, and about $140;000 was realized, and $75,000 additional is expected from the sale of the rest of the pews. A collation was served during the sale.

HAZING AT WILLIAMS COLLEGE.—Some of the students at Williams College, Mass., have revived the objectionable practice of hazing the freshmen, and a few nights ago they broke into some of the rooms, dragged several freshmen from their beds, ducked them under a pump, and acted with high-handed impudence generally. The faculty made an investigation, and suspended three of the Sophomores. When they left for the depot the rest of the class, some fifty in number, marched in triumphant escort with them, whereupon the Sophomore class was suspended until the members make an apology to the faculty. In consequence the students are loafing about the village, waiting for something to turn up.

MATIN AGUE MIXTURE
WILL POSITIVELY
CURE CHILLS AND FEVER!
Baltimore, Md., August 4, 1873.
This is to Certify, That I have this day sold unto Messrs. Janney & Co., of Alexandria, Va., the sole right to prepare and sell the Matin Ague Mixture, according to the genuine recipe as formerly owned by me. ROBERT H. BIGGER.
Alexandria, Va., August 15, 1873.
The very many instances which came under our personal observation while acting as General Agents for the sale of Matin Ague Mixture, in which it effected a cure when all other remedies had failed, induced us to purchase the recipe and proprietorship of the Medicine, and enables us confidently to recommend it to our patrons and the public generally, as a most reliable and valuable preparation. JANNEY & CO.

Each bottle is accompanied with an express guarantee of cure or money refunded. Liberal discounts to the trade.
