There was no mail yesterday—Sunday—and so only a few letters and contributions which came in late Saturday evening were received for the Free Bread Fund.

At the headquarters, No. 18 Delancey street, where 5,000 loaves of bread are distributed every morning, there were 5,070 hungry men and women and children clamoring for food. From East Ninety-eighth street, from West Fifty-first street and from away across the Harlem—one woman walked down—they came to get their one loaf of bread.

It means so much to them, this bread you are generously giving. It is doing good so simply, this charity of yours. It reaches the hungry ones in the best way. There is almost no chance for impostures. The most any can hope to gain is a loaf of bread or at most two or three loaves. They can't pawn it, they can't sell it—they can only eat it. And if you only saw them eat it—devour it—well!

HELPING TO DISTRIBUTE LOAVES.

There never yet has been a man or woman come from the finer streets to the Free Bread Headquarters to look on but became an instant convert. Why, even the policemen—and heaven knows they see enough of the dark side of this big town of ours—even the policemen are affected, and say they never saw anything like the picture these hungry people make.

Charles Stowell, an electrician, came down to the store where the bread is distributed yesterday and spent his Sunday morning with his coat off working at the loaves helping to hand them out and to pile them up. He has a mechanical mind, and measured the space the 5,000 odd loaves took—something like a pile 20 feet long, 6 feet high and 6 feet wide. And still there was not enough to go round.

This bread is all that stands between these people and actual starvation. When they get work they can buy bread for themselves.

THESE CAN'T GET WORK.

It is curious in how many ways the hard times hurt the poor through the economizing of the rich. There never were so many barbers out of work as just now. Young clerks and older business men are shaving themselves and doing without their weekly shampoos. Coachmen can't get work because people have given up their horses, but worst of all are the washerwomen. Laundry work is about the last thing in the world one would think of economizing in and yet there are hundreds upon hundreds of washerwomen who can't get work. People who have servants are making the servants do this work, too. And there is a glut of servants in the market for the first time in years and years.

These people simply must get something to eat while they are looking for work. One dollar sent to this fund buys twenty loaves. Five dollars buys 100 loaves.

OUGHT TO DIE.

Some of the persons who come for bread are those who have made the mistake of living too long. They have been young and have learned a trade and have worked at it, and the husband has brought in the money and the wife has spent the wages week by week for the marketing or to pay the rent.

They have had money in the bank—sometimes much as $40. Children have been born to them and they have known what it is to follow the little white hearse over the ferry and along the dusty roads to the cemetery.

They have lived on and have seen their boys and girls grow up and get married. They have seen other lives come, and one day they wake up and find they have grown old, for they have heard a child say "grandpa" or "grandma." And then these children move away or they forget their parents—it is always so. The old man gets too old to work at his trade and the poor old couple shift as best they can. Every year sees them in poorer and poorer tenements.

Then one of them dies, and the other, all broken with the weight of years, forgotten by children, friends all dead and gone, lives on somehow, the Lord only knows. Strangers out of pure charity give them a bed and a bite or sup, and that's the kind of an old age they have.

TOO OLD FOR USE.

It doesn't seem right that people who have worked hard all their lives, who have helped build up the country and who have begotten children, should be treated worse than a worn-out horse, who at least is given pasturage and is shot when he gets to be too much of a burden to himself.

To these it does not seem cruel in savages to knock the old people in the head with a club. That is a tender-hearted practice sometimes.

But there are Old People's Homes?

Oh, yes. And it takes more money and influence to get a nice, clean old woman into one of these homes than to be appointed Minister to Italy.

Now, here is the case of Mrs. Maria Hipler. She is eighty-four years old and a widow eighteen years. All she owns in this world is the clothes she stands in, and they were given to her. She was turned out of the furnished room that covered her, at No. 204 Eldridge street, because she couldn't pay the rent. Then Mrs. Lapple, of No. 184 Allen street, took her in and gave her shelter.

SOMEBODY'S GRANDMA.

Mrs. Lapple calls her "grandma."

"She isn't any kin to me, though," explained Mrs. Lapple. "When I came to this country and got married I sent for my mother. She only lived five months after she got over, and I had Mrs. Hipler to help me take care of her. That was ten years ago. I moved away soon afterwards, and Mrs. Hipler lost me, and I didn't hear anything more of her till just the other day. She's nothing in the world to me, but because she used to wait on my mother I couldn't bear to see her out in the street. She's a nice old lady, and as willing to work as can be.

"She goes to the baker's and peels and cores apples all day long. She gets 25 cents for that."

"But there are people who don't even make 25 cents a day."

"Oh, you didn't think she had a steady job of it? Oh, no. Only one place she has. She goes there only on Fridays, and only last Friday her rheumatism was so bad that she couldn't hold a knife in her poor old hands."

Poor old hands! All knotted and swelled and glossy at the joints from rheumatism. How many stitches have they taken, and every one a bit of mother's love, as she sat up far into the night mending the clothes for a red-cheeked boy who would have fought if any one had said he would ever leave her to starve.

FORGOT HIS MOTHER.

That is just what he has done.

Maria Hipler's son is married and lives somewhere in this country, she doesn't know where, and Maria Hipler was homeless and starving till she got a loaf from the Free Bread Fund and found out where Mrs. Lapple lived.

Twenty-five cents a week for that poor old creature! That was her pittance.

What is that after she had bought a pint of oil for her lamp and a pail of coal for her stove? And who is to care if she dies of hunger?

Well, people have tender hearts. That is, the poor people have. Maybe that is one reason why they aren't millionaires. There are hundreds of families on the east side which haven't an income of more than $12 a week who are sheltering old folks not kin at all.

"We can't turn them out." That is what they say. "Simple, isn't it?

They can't bear to see them starve either, and many is the poor baker who is supplementing the Free Bread Fund with a loaf or two of his own.

Avenue C can't rest easy knowing that others haven't a crust to eat. Fifth avenue—well—.

THE POOR MAN'S DIMES.

The sight of the distribution of bread always prompts passersby to contribute to the fund. A man, a poor man he was, too, came in yesterday and said: "It's a good scheme and I'm with you. I haven't got much."

He handed out 50 cents.

"What name should it be credited to?"

"Oh, never mind about that."

"Wouldn't you like to know that it is acknowledged?"

The man gave his initials and then reached down into his trousers and slowly fished out another dime.

If there are any good hearted people who would like to be put in the way of helping the poor they may call at the Free Bread Fund Headquarters, No. 18 Delancey street, before noon any day, where they can be directed to any number of worthy cases.

WHAT CORRESPONDENTS SAY.

All sorts of kindly suggestions are made by those who write to The World inclosing contributions. Everybody seems trying to help.

I have collected $1.50 for the Free Bread Fund and send same herewith. The World cannot be congratulated on its wonderful success in relieving the poor and distressed. FANNY SCHEIER.
Plattsburg, N. Y., Sept. 22.

Inclosed you will find $1, which was handed me by one of the hardest working men in the village (D. H.) to be added to the small fund which was raised in this place and sent to you a few days ago. The charity it represents is far in excess of the amount. Z. S. H.
North Long Branch.

I inclose $2 as an expression of sympathy for the noble work in which you are engaged, hoping it may bring broth to a sick one or bread to a hungry child.

I wish I could help in bringing Brockway to justice. Seven or eight years ago I was a frequent visitor in Elmira and then heard frightful tales of his cruelty. It is not enough that he be dismissed. I hope you will see that he is punished. I would suggest peddling. You can do it if you try.
Wilkesbarre, Pa. GRATEFUL READER.

Change your tactics. Start a World train of relief. Thousands of farmers all over the country would be willing to keep one person for two weeks for The World. They could give them on the farm. Send circulars with your papers and ask all who are willing to help one starving soul to send in their names. They will be sure of good food for two weeks or more and will cost less per head than to maintain them in charity. Try it.
Yours in the hope that better times will soon be here. B.
Gouverneur, N. Y.

ANOTHER KIND OF LETTER.

Just to let the reader into a little secret. Below is the type of another kind of letter—a kind that keeps pouring into this office. This case has not been investigated, so at this moment it is impossible to say whether the case is deserving. But the chances are that it is. The kind of letter we receive of such letters every day. Isn't it heart-breaking?

Would you, for God's sake, help me, if ever so little. I have not had a bit of bread to eat in two days. I could not go down to get the bread, for I have no shoes to put on, so would be able to walk. I have three little children and expect to be confined any day. If I only had a few dresses to put on my child I could send them to a nursery where they would get something to eat. For sake reference of the truth of what I am saying look up Chas. Gaskill, 1 Jones place, off Bleecker, twenty-first house on the left hand side, middle floor, front room. I hope to God you will heed this, as it is my only hope.
Mrs. HARRIET O'DONNELL.
356 West Forty-fifth street, basement.

My attention has been called to the case of little Jennie Goldfarb, described on Friday's World as suffering from some disease of the eyes and unable to pay for the attention of a specialist. I consider it a privilege to contribute what I may to such a worthy case. If you will send little Jennie to my office, No. 10 West Thirty-third street, between 11 and 1 o'clock I will be glad to give her my services without charge, and if the parents have too poor to pay car fares I will supply that also. We are at liberty to refer any deserving one, and, in case of urgent cases to me for immediate or similar conditions. GEORGE W. CALDWELL, M.D.,
No. 10 West Thirty-fifth street,
New York, Sept. 24.

This Free Bread Fund is doing much to keep alive these desperately poor people. It is your money that is doing this good, and there is need for more money and more bread. Do you care to help? Do you care to write for a subscription blank and raise money for bread?

DUBLIN'S MAYOR LEAVES US.

He'll Come Back, However, When He Has Seen the Fair.

James Shanks, Lord Mayor of Dublin, is on his way to the World's Fair. Accompanied by Mrs. Shanks and his richly liveried servant, the Lord Mayor left by special car over the Pennsylvania route at 2 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The distinguished visitor spent the morning driving through Central Park. He went in the direction of Harlem a little way, but did not call upon Mayor Gilroy. On returning, the Lord Mayor attended services at St. Patrick's Cathedral with his wife. Before leaving for his train the Lord Mayor expressed regret that he could stay no longer just now.

"Your city has grown marvellously since 1867, when I last visited it," he continued. "There are many new and grand buildings which I have never seen. I shall try to inspect them when I come back. I can stay in America but a month this trip. I think of coming back before long and making a tour of the Pacific coast, Canada and Mexico."

THEY FORGOT SENATOR HILL.

Will Murphy, Sheehan and Croker Kindly Revise That Slate?

DAVID B. SUGGESTS A YOUNG MAN FOR SECRETARY OF STATE.

Such a One, for Instance, as Col. George B. McClellan or Col. Samuel J. Tilden, Jr.—One Who Would Arouse Enthusiasm and Spur the Young Democrats to Active Work—The Senator Still Steadiest for Maynard.

Certain Democratic leaders in making up the slate for the State ticket to be named at Saratoga appear not to have consulted the personal wishes of Senator David B. Hill. The latter has not participated in the conferences which Senator Murphy, Richard Croker and Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan held in this city recently, and he would prefer that the slate should be changed in one or two respects.

Of course, Senator Hill is heart and soul for making Judge Isaac H. Maynard the head of the ticket. He is not, however, so much taken with the idea of choosing Thomas E. Benedict for Secretary of State. Benedict was once Public Printer under President Cleveland, and though he finally entered the Hill camp, the Senator is said to have doubts as to whether he will not soon desert it. Again, Benedict is over fifty years old and has been in office almost since he was a youth.

Senator Hill's idea is that the nominees for the State ticket shall be, so far as possible, young, enthusiastic, aggressive Democrats. Were it not for the fact that he thinks Judge Maynard must be vindicated, and that Attorney-General Rosendale and State Engineer Schenck deserve renominations, he would prefer not to have a man on the ticket older than were William F. Sheehan and Frank Campbell when they were chosen for Lieutenant-Governor and Comptroller respectively.

While in Albany on Saturday Senator Hill tried to impress upon leaders who saw him the desirability of selecting for Secretary of State, especially, a young man of unimpeachable character, bearing a name which would arouse enthusiasm and which would spur the young Democrats of the State to work with ardor for his election.

The names of two young men were suggested. One was Col. George B. McClellan, President of the Board of Aldermen of this city, and a son of the hero of the Army of the Potomac. The other was Col. Samuel J. Tilden, Jr., nephew of the Sage of Greystone, and the active leader of the Democracy of Columbia County.

Of Col. McClellan Senator Hill spoke in laudatory terms. He had known him as a newspaper reporter, as Treasurer of the New York and Brooklyn Bridge Trustees, as a member of his own Gubernatorial staff, and later as a Democratic candidate who had carried this city by nearly 75,000 when running for President of the Board of Aldermen.

It was Senator Hill's judgment that there should be a candidate on the State ticket from west of the Harlem, and that Col. McClellan would prove a winner if nominated. A leader who called upon the Senator retired pretty well convinced that if Richard Croker would renew his suggestion to have Col. McClellan nominated, he would have the support of Senator Hill.

The Senator also spoke highly of Col. Tilden, who has for years been one of his strong adherents. Col. Tilden led the fight for a recount in the district, which was finally declared to have been carried by Osborne (Dem.) instead of Deane (Rep.) for the State Senate. He is an active member of the State Committee, and is popular.

The World reporter's informant declared that Senator Hill had assured him that he had given no pledge whatever as yet to any candidate for Secretary of State and State Treasurer, the two offices for which new men are to be selected, and that any assertion to the contrary was entirely unauthorized. He was very hopeful that Judge Maynard, Frank Campbell, Simon Rosendale and Martin Schenck would be renominated.

Senator Hill passed through the city yesterday on his way to Washington. He had no time to see political leaders here. He is said to prefer the nomination of ex-Mayor William B. Kirk, of Syracuse, to that of Hugh Duffey, of Cortland, for the State Treasurership.

LOIE FULLER SUED.

Paul Arthur and John F. Kellerd Say She Owes Them a Lot of Money.

John E. Kellerd and Paul Arthur, well-known actors, have brought suit against Loie Fuller for salaries aggregating over $1,000. They started to sue Robert Grau, manager of the company in which they appeared for part of one night, but he sailed for Europe before they could get at him.

Grau's American Celebrities opened at the Garden Theatre some weeks ago. Arthur and Kellerd appeared in a one-act sketch called "The Idea." It was hissed the opening night, and the audience wouldn't allow Arthur and Kellerd to proceed. Miss Fuller said last night that the suit was an outrage.

"If their engagement had depended upon me," she remarked, "they would never have been employed. I don't think much of either gentleman. But the less I say on that subject the better. I was engaged by Mr. Grau and am not responsible for unpaid salaries. They think I have money evidently, and that it was a partner in the Celebrities scheme. I wasn't and have been victimized by promises which were never made good."

MORE MOB RULE AT NEW ORLEANS.

A Negro Said to Have Been Tortured by Fire to Force a Confession.

(Special to The World.)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 24.—To-night it was learned that a negro, who was arrested last night on the suspicion that he was Julien, had been bound hand and foot and then tortured by having fire applied to his feet. The negro was arrested for stealing a horse in the Parish of Jefferson, just below the city. He denies the charge.

He was arrested in Kenner, the home of Judge Long, the leader of the regulators, and as his description tallies almost exactly with that of Julien, the murderer, a movement was immediately set on foot to lynch him.

Persons in the crowd who knew Julien denied that the prisoner was he, and then the mob decided to torture him with the intention of forcing information from him regarding Julien's whereabouts. He could give none.

When seen to-day his feet were horribly burned and swollen. The mob claim that he tried to burn his way out of jail, and in the attempt burned his feet. This is not generally believed.

The investigation which was ordered by the Governor will begin, and the regulators are very much scared. The leaders were all over the Parish to-day attempting to hush the matter up.

NOT A MAN TO BE FRIGHTENED.

Ex-Chief of Police MacMorris Tells the Mob Where He Can Be Found.

(Special to The World.)

ROANOKE, Va., Sept. 24.—Among those upon whom anonymous notices to leave the city were served was ex-Chief of Police MacMorris, who was inside the jail during the fatal riot. He was threatened with lynching that night, but the mob was unable to find him. He has since come out of hiding, and when he received the threatening notice he promptly announced that he could be found at his residence. He has not been molested. The ex-Chief has a reputation for nerve and marksmanship.

It is understood that Mayor Trout, who is now in Richmond, has telegraphed to friends here that he will come back as soon as the wound in his foot will permit. There are some here who believe that the shot was from his own revolver. The Mayor is a native Roanoker, and is said to be worth in the neighborhood of $50,000. He is Vice-President of the Roanoke Loan and Trust Company, ex-President and now one of the directors of the Roanoke and Southern Railroad, and a stockholder in the Norwich Lock Works, the Duvoil Engine Works, the Roanoke Electric Light and Power Company and the City Railroad Company.

Some excitement was caused to-day by the report that Capt. Bird, who, it was supposed, had left town on the night of the shooting, was still in hiding in the city. His friends say he will appear before the Investigating Committee to-morrow. It is feared there will be trouble if he does.

THE NEW WHITE ELEPHANT.

Vogel Bros. Take the Old Name as Their Trade-Mark.

A large crowd was in attendance at the formal opening of the new establishment of the Vogel Brothers, at the corner of Broadway and Thirty-first street, last Saturday, and those present were gratified by the sight of one of the largest and best-appointed clothing stores in New York.

The site of the new store has long been famous under the name of "The White Elephant," and Messrs. Vogel Brothers have retained the title for their trade-mark, and propose to therefore make it a synonym for stylish and well-made garments.

The friends of the firm sent many handsome and not a few elaborate floral tributes of regard for the opening, and the general public thronged the place all day, captivated by the fine stock displayed and the courtesy with which they were welcomed at the door and shown the immense variety of high-class clothing, furnishings, shoes, hats, &c., for all ages of men and boys.

The garments offered by Messrs. Vogel Brothers are cut in the very latest styles, and are the embodiment of the current fashions. The most critical can find in their stock all that they can desire in the way of fit, durability, finish, quality of goods and general excellence.

In every case the purchase price will be refunded if the clothing bought at this house does not prove entirely satisfactory. Over six hundred skilled tailors and designers are employed by this firm in the manufacture of their goods. Those who are too long in limb or too stout in person to ordinarily expect to obtain a well-fitting garment can find at this establishment exceptional sizes made especially to meet their requirements.

The new building and site occupied by Messrs. Vogel Brothers represents the expenditure of $1,000,000. The building is six stories high, and provided with every convenience and modern sanitary improvement. The salesrooms are well lighted and furnished most attractively and in the best of taste.

The firm, comprising Messrs. Jacob and Louis Vogel, propose to offer the public the higher grades of ready-made clothing at the lowest prices that are possible when quality is considered. They are to be congratulated on possessing one of the best sites in the city. Those who desire to know what will be in fashion this Fall and Winter ought to apply for "The White Elephant" catalogue. They can obtain it at the corner of Broadway and Thirty-first street. ***
