MONDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 10.

Putting a Hoop on a Barrel.

Putting a hoop on a flour barrel is an operation that will hardly bear an encore. The woman generally attempts it before the man comes home to dinner. She sets the hoop up on the end of the stave, takes a deliberate aim with the rolling pin, and then, shutting both eyes, brings the pin down with all the force of one arm, while the other one instinctively shields her face. Then she makes a dive for the camphor and unbleached muslin, and when the man comes home she is sitting back of the stove thinking of Saint Stephen and the other martyrs, while a burnt dinner and the camphor are struggling for the mastery. He says that if she had but kept her temper, she wouldn't have got hurt. And he visits the barrel himself and puts the hoop on very carefully, and then adjusts it so nicely to the top of every stave that only a few smart raps apparently are needed to bring it down all right. And then he taunts to himself to think what a fuss his wife kicked up for a simple matter that only needed a little patience to adjust itself; then he gets the hammer and gives the hoop a small rap on one side, and the other flies up and catches him on the nose, filling his eye with wrath and his eyes with tears, and the next minute the hoop is flying across the room accompanied by the hammer, and another candidate for camphor and rag is enrolled in the great army that is unceasingly marching toward the grave.—Danbury News
