Dr. Talmage on Newspapers

In the course of one of his sermons recently Dr. Talmage spoke as follows of the printing press:

"Paul says that in the city of Athens there were people who did nothing but gather up and tell the news. Why more so in Athens than in any other city? Because Athens was the wisest city under the sun, and in proportion as men become wise they become inquisitive, not about small things, but about the greater. The great question in Athens is the great question now: 'What is the news?'

"To answer this cry for a newspaper the centuries set their wits to work, and China first answered the cry, and there is in Pekin a newspaper which has been published every week for a thousand years—printed on silk. Rome answered this cry by publishing the Acta Diurna, in the same column putting fires, political events, marriages, deaths, tempests and earthquakes. France successfully answered this question when in Paris a physician wrote out the news for his patients.

"Thank God that there is no need of our going around like the Athenians to hunt up and then to scatter the news, since the printing press does both for us.

I tell you, my friends, that a good newspaper is the grandest temporal blessing that God has given to the people in this century. All the people read the newspapers. The old man looks for the deaths, the young look to the marriages, the stock broker looks to the money column, the importer looks for the shipping, the philosopher looks to the editorial, the unemployed look to the wants, and the Christian looks all through to see what God is doing among the nations.

"Now, I think I could arouse your appreciation of this great blessing if I told you the money, the train, the exasperation, the anxieties, the losses, the wear and tear of heart strings involved in the publication of a newspaper. On the theory abroad in the world that anybody can make one, inexperienced capitalists every year are entering the lists, and it is a simple statistic that there is an average of a dead newspaper every day of the year. Generally three or four fortunes are swallowed up before a newspaper is established. The large papers swallow up the small papers, one whale taking down fifty minnows. Although we have over seven thousand dailies and weeklies in the United States and the Canadas, only thirty-six are a half century old. The average of newspaper life is five years. Most of them die of cholera infantum! It is high time it were understood that the most successful way of sinking a fortune and keeping it sunk is to start and conduct a newspaper.

"Almost every intelligent man during his life is smitten with the newspaper mania, and start a newspaper, or have stock in one, he must or die. But, let me tell you that if you have an idea on any moral, social, political, or religious subject, you had better charge on the world through the columns already established. Do not take the idea so prevalent that when a man can do nothing else he can edit a newspaper. If you cannot climb the hill back of your house, you had better not try the sides of the Matterhorn. If you cannot navigate a sloop up the Norte river, you had better not try to engineer the Great Eastern over to Liverpool.

"To publish a newspaper requires the skill, the precision, the vigilance, the strategy, the boldness of a commander in chief. To edit a newspaper one needs to be a statesman, an essayist, a geographer, a statistician, and so far as all acquisition is concerned, encyclopædia. To man and to propel a newspaper requires more qualities than any other business on earth. I say this to save men from bankruptcy. If you feel called to start or publish a newspaper, take it for granted you are threatened with softening of the brain, throw your pocket book into your wife's lap, and rush up to Bloomingdale asylum and surrender yourself before you do something desperate.

"God Christianize the printing-press! When I see the printing-press standing with the electric telegraph on the one side gathering up material, and the lightning express train on the other side waiting for the tons of folded sheets of newspapers, I pronounce it the mightiest force in our civilization. So I commend you to pray for all those who manage the newspapers of the land, for all type setters, for all editors, for all publishers, that, sitting or standing in positions of such great influence, they may give all that influence for God and the betterment of the human race.

"An aged woman making her living by knitting unwound the yarn from the ball until she found in the centre of the ball there was an old piece of newspaper. She opened it and read an advertisement which announced that she had become heiress to a large property, and that fragment of newspaper lifted her from pauperism to affluence. And I do not know but as the thread of time unrolls and unwinds a little further, through the silent yet speaking newspaper may be found the vast inheritance of the world's redemption."
