of them wanted to know, "Who is Meyer?" Many confounded him with Comptroller Theodore W. Myers, of New York City.

Alderman Long, of New York, when informed that Cord. Meyer was to be nominated said with a superior and knowing look:

"Young man, you are mistaken. You mean Theodore Myers."

Even the machine leaders had no idea of nominating Meyer until they came here. They found that they were confronted with serious opposition which had to be conciliated in the interest of harmony and the Democratic party.

The bosses, after hearing the reports of their lieutenants and looking over the situation, discovered that the Administration Democrats had been playing an extremely shrewd and successful game of politics, backed by Federal patronage, principally fourthclass post-offices. They invaded the Hill strongholds and in many instances routed the enemy.

The Anti-Snappers came here prepared to assert their rights, and if they didn't get them, to make trouble. Then Mr. Hill's representatives brought their masterful skill as political managers into play. Cord Meyer, jr., who has been one of Hill's bitterest opponents in Queens County, was sent for. He was asked if he would like the nomination for Secretary of State. Meyer said he would. Sheehan, Murphy and Croker gave it to him.

Meyer's nomination was calculated to allay the threatened opposition. The plan has evidently succeeded.

The Albany men, who are the head and front of the Anti-Snapper movement in the eastern part of the State, said this morning that no candidate would be placed in nomination in opposition to Maynard. That means that no voice will be raised against Maynard in the Convention.

Just what is the strength of the opposition will probably not be known, as Maynard will likely be nominated by acclamation. The Convention will, therefore, be harmonious.

The Anti-Snappers have gained what they fought for—recognition.

The nomination of Hugh Duffy may also be regarded as a partial concession to the Administration.

Mr. Duffy is a friend and neighbor of Secretary of War Daniel Lamont. Lamont's country estate in Cortland adjoins Hugh Duffy's farm.

Neither Smith M. Weed nor William A. Poucher, who were expected here, had arrived up to noon. Since peace has been declared they probably thought their presence unnecessary. Congressman Tracey and Mayor Manning are looking after the Cleveland interests.

Caucuses were held at 11 o'clock this morning by the Tammany and anti delegates. The delegations selected their members of the new State Committee and received their official instructions about the slate.

The last of the delegations arrived this morning. Several of them had brass bands. The music enlivened matters a bit and made things look like old times, when brass bands were features of conventions.

The Convention may be in session for two days. All of today will be taken up with hearings to be given contesting delegations.

The Anti-Snappers have not given up the hope of seating their men, although in the preliminary skirmish they have been defeated.

The State Committee has decided to place the names of the delegates from the Fourth Albany, Chenango and Monroe districts on the roll of delegates who will have a voice in the preliminary organization of the Convention. The seating of the Chenango and Monroe delegates by the Convention was foreshadowed in these despatches yesterday. To seat the opposition would be to admit that State Treasurer Danforth was turned down in Chenango and ex-Senator Raines in Monroe. That would hurt the pride and delicate feelings of those gentlemen.

The New Yorkers are greatly disappointed because Col. George B. McClellan will not be nominated for Secretary of State. It is said that Col. McClellan wanted the nomination, despite the fact that Mr. Croker and Mayor Gilroy advised him against it, on the ground that he would have a more successful career in local politics.

The young man yielded grace-fully when told that the place was wanted for some one else in the interest of the organization.

The only explanation given by the machine leaders for the selection of William B. Kirk, who was Hugh Duffy's strongest opponent for State Treasurer, is that they considered that Duffy would make a stronger candidate.

The rank and file of machine men are inclined to grumble, but as usual, they will obey orders, sullenly probably, but they will obey nevertheless.

Kirk is the Hill leader of Onondaga County, and thinks he has done enough for the machine to win advancement.

Duffy has never been recognized as an out-and-out machine man. He has, however, never done anything to incur the ill will of the machine.

It is the present intention to make the temporary officers of the Convention the permanent officers. That would be another concession that costs nothing to the Cleveland men.

Daniel Lockwood, of Buffalo, who has been chosen temporary chairman by the State Committee, is a Cleveland Democrat of the most pronounced type. But even if it was Mr. Lockwood's intention to favor the anti-Hill men he would be helpless, owing to the Hill majority in the Convention.

Deputy Attorney-General Gilbert, of Stamford, Judge Maynard's home, was expected to nominate Judge Maynard. Judge Gilbert, however, has been ill, and may not be well enough to do justice to the task.

Louis W. Pratt, of Albany, will present the name of Simon W. Rosendale to the Convention. Judge Griffith, of Troy, will do a like service for Martin Schenck for State Engineer. Henry M. Bowes, of Bath, will place in nomination Comptroller Campbell.

OFF FOR SYRACUSE.

Republican Delegates Start for the State Convention.

The first contingent of delegates from this city to the Republican State Convention, to be held in Syracuse to-morrow, left the Grand Central Depot at 9.10 o'clock this morning. Their train was the fast mail, of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad.

There were only about fifty delegates, alternates and their friends in the party.

They travelled as regular passengers. A special Wagner car was attached to the train for the benefit of the more opulent delegates. The majority, however, crowded into the ordinary smoking car.

The delegates were on hand a few minutes before 9 o'clock. Gen. Michael Kerwin was one of the first arrivals. He was joined later by Chairman Brookfield, of the County Executive Committee.

It was supposed that President Chauncey Depew would go on the train. A search for him resulted in the discovery that he would reach Syracuse late in the day.

The delegates filed into the cars at 9 o'clock. When the train pulled out they had already settled down to smoke.

The train was scheduled to reach Syracuse at 4 o'clock. This afternoon Many leading Republican lights, including Tom Platt, J. Sloat Fassett and Jacob Patterson, are already assembled there.

Among those who left on the fast mail were Chairman Smith, of the County Committee; John Collins, Job E. Hedges, William H. Townley, Eugene Seligman, John Reisenweber, W. H. Bellamy, Robert A. Gracson, Bernard Biggin, Capt. Hugh Coleman, Charles H. Murray, John Simpson and Robert P. Porter.

Probably the largest crowd on the North River was at the Iron Steamboat pier at Battery place. The pier was a dense, struggling mass of humanity that pushed and hustled one another, none too good-naturedly, in a vain endeavor to board the first vessel of the fleet. It was not until 10 A.M. that the last one of the big boats was finally loaded and started on its voyage. As each boat swung clear the crowd gave a hearty hurrah, even drowning the lusty German bands.

The Glen Sheam and the Grand Republic took on big crowds at Twenty-second street, but nothing compared to that which boarded them at the Battery. The long-bearded captain of the Sheam and Commodore of the Knickerbocker fleet wore a happy smile as he saw the big crowd aboard the two boats and ordered the line cast off, leaving a score or more unable to get aboard.

Ten minutes later the Magenta called at the Battery and took on fifty-seven hundred persons. Many not provided with tickets attempted to board her, but it was not permitted, as she had no more eager sportsmen yet to take on at the foot of South Fifth street and Thirty-ninth street, Brooklyn.

With a big band and 800 persons on board the Havana made the next Battery call, where 600 anxious passengers awaited a chance to get on board. She was quickly loaded and away. It required considerable vigilance upon the part of the boat officials to keep the passengers from getting on the wrong steamboat. The crowd seemed to think it made no difference if they only got on, as the captain could not put them ashore.

The steamboat Eliza Hancox was the last to clear the Battery. She carried a cargo of human freight that loaded her to the guards. She could lawfully have carried no more.

There was no livelier or gayer crowd than that which boarded the Mount Hope at the Fall River pier.

With flags flying and bands playing the big Stonington Line's Republic pulled out from the Company's pier at 3 o'clock. She carried a large number of special parties from Providence and Fall River.

The William C. Egerton, the flagship of the Starin fleet that left the foot of Cortlandt street, was hoo behind the other big boats in her passenger list, and when she cleared her deck there was not room left for a single passenger without crowding those already comfortably seated between her three decks.

Those who wanted a taste of ocean travel took the Tampa, Key West and Havana steamship Olivette. Her passenger list was limited to but one-half her capacity, although she could have tested it did she so desire. She had on board man parties from this city and Boston.

The big three-decked Taurus picked up her crowd at West One Hundred and Thirty-third street, West First street and the Bridge dock, at Brooklyn. She was taken possession of, however, at One Hundred and Thirty-third street by the Harlem and Kingsbridge public, who left but little room for those hoping to board her further down.

With the ensigns of the Norfolk Yacht Club floating from her jackstaff the Old Dominion line steamship Roanoke headed her bow towards Sandy Hook at 9½, putting out from the foot of Beach street, pier 29. While she had many New Yorkers on board, most of her passengers were from the South, including many Washingtonians.

The Iron Steamboat Cygnus got her crowd in Jersey City, and carried the Pavonia Yacht Club, its friends and sweethearts. The ocean tugs Barrett and Samuels, each with a special party on board, cleared from the foot of Christopher street. The Samuels's passengers hailed from Philadelphia.

Capt. Hazzard's face wore a complacent smile as he declined to carry any more passengers on the seagoing New Brunswick. Three big brass bands and an endless number of small inbound kegs were landed at the foot of West Tenth street, from whence she cleared, to help the 1,500 passengers while away the time.

With the Old Guard Band playing the National air, the Cromwell line New Orleans cleared from pier 9. She had a total passenger list of only 500, although she could have carried double that number. Several large parties were refused, as her commander, Capt. John Betts, said his orders were 500, and he would not crowd them with his own as the old man.

The well-known fishing-boat Angler was the first to cross under the bridge, she having shipped a cargo of 1,600 at Williamsburg and East Twenty-first street. The big 1,000-ton steamer Nutmeg State followed close behind the Angler, having a total list of 1,500 from pier 35, East River.

The Williamsburgers chiefly patronized the three-decked Waterbury, and, although she was advertised to stop at the Battery, and did so, yet there was room for but few before her legal list of 1,450 was filled.

The steel steamer Montauk, with 1,000 from pier 35, and the Columbia from Greenpoint, were the last of the East River fleet.

Inspector Williams and a force of forty officers started down the bay about 9 o'clock on the Aurora. There were about one hundred and fifty on board, including Commissioner McClave and Major Kipp. Capt. Byrnes was expected to be on board, but he did not appear.

VALKYRIE'S TIME ALLOWANCE.

Vigilant Must Grant Her One Minute and Forty-eight Seconds.

According to the conditions under which Vigilant and Valkyrie are to race Vigilant must allow Valkyrie a time allowance of one minute and forty-eight seconds.

That was determined after the measurement in Erie Basin of the English boat yesterday afternoon, and the measurement of the cup-defender.

George L. Watson, designer of Lord Dunraven's yacht, watched Monsieur Hyslop, of the New York Yacht Club, take the dimensions of both boats with a watchful eye.

The rules of the regatta are that any excess of load water line over eighty-five feet shall be counted double in calculating the sailing length for time allowance.

Vigilant's load water line is 84.9 feet, and Valkyrie's load water line is 85.50 feet, so that the cup-defender's time allowance measurement be 86.75 and that for Dunraven's yacht is 87.1.

The greater length of Vigilant gives Valkyrie the minute and forty-eight seconds time allowance in each race. The following table gives the dimensions of the two yachts in full:

Measurements.	Vigilant. Feet.	Valkyrie. Feet.
Load water line	84.9	85.50
Length from forward to main hoop aft	89.50	92.50
Length of mast to jib stay	76.00	80.75
Base of mast to jib topsail stay	76.00	80.75
Foot of jib topsail to forward point of measurement	24.75	26.75
Spinnaker boom	74.50	82.00
Deck to underside topsail halyard block	60.00	61.00
Deck to bowsprit	23.00	24.00
Length of bowsprit	36.00	37.00
Length of yard	54.75	55.00
Racing length by New York Yacht Club rule	86.75	86.11

"FIRST LOVE CAN NEVER DIE."

Miss Murray Says She Is Still Willing to Marry Stamm.

Matilda Murray, a small-featured little woman, thirty-two years of age, told a jury in the Superior Court to-day before Chief Judge Sedgwick how William Stamm, who is nearly ten years younger, had trifled with her affections, promised to marry her on several occasions, and then deliberately cast her aside. She thinks she is entitled to $20,000 damages for his conduct.

Matilda lives at 199 Amsterdam avenue. She said that after she became acquainted with William he took her out repeatedly to places of entertainment.

One evening while walking in the park, he told her he loved her, and that it was his intention to marry her as soon as he could.

He said that he hoped they would live happily together for many years. From that time he visited her three nights every week. One night he told her he had changed his mind, because if he married her he would only make her unhappy.

A few minutes later he inquired whether she would be willing to marry him on $10 per week. She told him that she would, and the following day he told her he would keep his promise and marry her.

After that he became very attentive. On Nov. 22, 1891, he told her that he did not intend to get married. That interview crushed her heart, and she has not had any conversation with him since.

"What are your feelings towards him now?" inquired the counsel.

"I love him still," was the reply.

"And are you willing to marry him still?"

"Yes," she said. "It was my first love, and it can never die."

Miss Murray stated that whenever William came to see her he always brought something with him. He never came without candy. He told her that he had $1,000 in one bank and $200 in another, and that he was earning $10 per week in his cigar store. It was his intention to live somewhere in Sixty-sixth street as soon as they were married.

Upon cross-examination by Lawyer Levy, Miss Murray told the jury that this was her first love. She had never loved anybody else and never could.

After their engagement Stamm always kissed her when he called to see her and showed the same mark of affection when he left her. Even now she said she loved him and would marry him.

She denied having had any similar trouble with any other man. But few letters had passed between them, and in these she addressed him as "Dear Friend William," and concluded with "Yours sincerely." He addressed her also as "Dear friend."

Lucinda Smith, a sister of the plaintiff, was called. She told the jury that she had introduced her sister to Mr. Stamm because he was a great friend of her husband. She told of his visits to the house and his attentions to her sister.

The court then took a recess.

PRATT AND CORBIN ARE FRIENDS

Report of a New President for the L. I. RR. Pronounced Absurd.

The statements that differences exist between Charles Pratt and Austin Corbin, and that as a result J. Rogers Maxwell would be made President of the Long Island road are regarded as absurd by friends of the parties in interest. Messrs. Corbin and Maxwell are both attending the yacht race, so that no authoritative denial could be obtained today.

Friends of Mr. Pratt say his relations with Mr. Corbin are most cordial, and the First National Bank people say Mr. Maxwell has no interest whatever in the Long Island road, and would not assume the management of the property under any circumstances.
