POINTS FOR FLOWER.

An Indictment of Maynard Drafted for the Governor's Benefit.

LAWYERS PAUL FULLER AND JOHN E. PARSONS ON THE CASE.

BAR ASSOCIATION MEMBERS ROUSED.

Gov. Roswell P. Flower's defense of Judge Maynard continues to provoke grave comment by members of the Bar Association. The reply to the Governor made by Clifford A. Hand, printed in yesterday's World, together with the interviews with Frederic R. Coudert and James C. Carter, published some days before, are regarded by Maynard's opponents as most effective.

Paul Fuller, of the firm of Coudert Bros., who offered the resolution at the Bar Association meeting the other night, providing for the appointment of a committee authorized to take steps to indict Judge Maynard for the alleged theft of the Senate in 1891, said yesterday that in his judgment Mr. Hand's reply to Gov. Flower was unanswerable. "I am a Democrat, and always have been a Democrat," added Mr. Fuller, "but I cannot close my eyes to the fact that a great crime has been committed, and that it is sought to reward the man who perpetrated it by electing him to a seat in the highest court in the State.

"The offense, which, mind you, Judge Manard has practically admitted that he was guilty of, has not been stated as concisely as it ought to have been. Gov. Flower says he is not a lawyer, nor can he see wherein Judge Maynard has perpetrated any act by which the people of the State have been injured. In order that the Governor may have no excuse for pleading ignorance hereafter, let him glance through this indictment. It contains but six points, and I think the Governor is capable of comprehending it, even if he is not a lawyer.

"I would suggest that the headline be, 'What Maynard Did.' Here is the indictment:

1. The Board of County Canvassers of Dutchess County, after the election of 1891, threw out thirty-one Republican ballots, thus securing to the Democratic Senatorial candidate a sufficient majority to elect him.

2. The Supreme Court of this State decided that the thirty-one Republican ballots had been improperly thrown out, and directed that the Board of County Canvassers make a new canvass and count these thirty-one ballots. The Board obeyed the direction of the Court and made a new canvass, which assured a majority to the Republican candidate for the Senate.

3. In obedience to the order of the Supreme Court, the County Clerk of Dutchess County forwarded the corrected return to the Governor, the Secretary of State and the Comptroller, at Albany, as required by the statute.

4. Isaac H. Maynard went to the Comptroller's office in his absence and took from his desk the corrected return. That return has not been seen since.

5. The Court of Appeals decided that the State Board of Canvassers had a right to canvass this corrected return, if it was really sent to the Board.

6. Isaac H. Maynard was present when the State Board of Canvassers canvassed the returns from Dutchess County. He heard inquiries made as to whether this corrected return had been received, and sat silent while the false return was canvassed, concealing the fact that he had himself purloined the corrected return. The result was that votes duly cast for the Republican Senatorial candidate were ignored and the Democratic candidate was seated.

"I trust that Gov. Flower will have no difficulty in understanding what is meant. If he will peruse Judge Maynard's letter to Judges Earl and Follett he will readily see that the Judge confesses that the indictment is drawn correctly and that he declares that what he did was the proudest act of his life.

"When the Governor has had sufficient time to digest the indictment let him turn to section 34 of the Penal Code and read what penalty is fixed for the felony which Isaac H. Maynard committed and which he admits he committed. Section 34 reads:

"A person who wilfully and unlawfully removes, conceals or obliterates a record, map, book, paper, document or other thing, filed or deposited in a public office or with any public officer by authority of law, is punishable by imprisonment for not more than five years, or by a fine of not more than $500.

"Surely as Governor of this great State Mr. Flower ought to be familiar with the statutes covering violations of the law. Surely he should seek to have all offenders against the law punished. But it seems to make some difference just what a man steals. Should a man rob a bank the Governor would, no doubt, insist that he be punished according to the statutes. But when a man steals a whole Legislature it seems to make a vast difference.

John E. Parsons, who was one of the seven Democratic members of the Bar Association Committee who signed the report in condemnation of Judge Maynard, was seen at his office yesterday by a World reporter. He had read Gov. Flower's defense of Judge Maynard, and, in reply to it, said:

"Gov. Flower ought not to have told the dollar-bill story if he desired to clear Judge Maynard's skirts. It makes the case appear one of setting a thief to catch a thief. I have been a Democrat all my life. I am a firm believer in Democratic principles, but inappropriating election returns is not one of them. It was with the greatest reluctance that I served on the committee which was chosen to investigate Judge Maynard's conduct in the Senatorial cases. Almost to the last moment I hoped that some evidence could be presented which would show that what he had done he did upon the spur of the moment, because, perhaps, of zeal to serve his party. It was not until I read his letter to Judges Earl and Follett that I was compelled to admit that nearly every accusation made against him was not only corroborated by the evidence, but by his own written communication.

"Maynard's letter furnished us with evidence even stronger than the committee had previously had in its possession. He admitted taking the corrected return from Dutchess, which would have elected Deane, Republican, to the Senate; he admitted that this return was not placed before the State Board of Canvassers, and that when it was called for by the board he, though present, and though well aware of the fact that the decision of the Court of Appeals required the counting of the corrected return, permitted the false return to be counted, and therefore gave to the Democracy a majority in the Senate to which it was not legally entitled.

"It is puerile for Gov. Flower or any one else to defend Judge Maynard upon the plea that the end justifies the means. Judge Maynard's offense, as our report declared, was one of the gravest known to the law. He has made public proclamation of the fact that his decision to take that corrected return was made with a full knowledge of the entire situation. He committed the offense with full deliberation, and, after mature consideration, he accepted the full responsibility for it. Had he recognized his mistake, admitted it, and explained that he did what he did believing he was conferring a benefit rather than an injury upon the community, I should have far more sympathy for him.

"It does seem inexplicable that after it became known that Maynard went deliberately to work to perpetrate this offense he should have been elevated to a seat on the court of last resort. It seems scarcely credible that a Governor of a great State would permit himself to thus reward a self-confessed violator of the law. It cannot be said that there was politics in the Bar Association's report upon Judge Maynard. We looked at his case rather as that of a client instead of a defendant. Every possible chance was afforded him to defend himself. The most lamentable feature, perhaps, was that he should have been convicted out of his own mouth.

"Were a member of the Bar Association to commit the offenses charged against Judge Maynard, would he not be liable to disbarment?

"He certainly would. More than that, I have no doubt his case would be taken to the courts and pushed to the bitter end. I regret very much the critical situation in which a Judge of the Court of Appeals finds himself. I do not see, however, how any honest, conscientious lawyer can support Judge Maynard at the polls."

While the Bar Association of the City of New York does not intend to take any further action at present as an organization, in opposition to the election of Judge Isaac H. Maynard to the bench of the Court of Appeals, individual members of the bar will participate actively in a campaign against him.

The association at the meeting last week, while condemning the nomination of Judge Maynard as one unfit to be made, rejected a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee to institute criminal prosecution against him for the crime of which the association had already declared him guilty.

A large contingent of the members of the association feel that the lawyers of the New York bar should make an active canvass against Mr. Maynard. While recognizing the propriety of the action of the association in refusing as an organization to make this canvass, they will carry on the fight as individuals.

A committee of fifteen lawyers has been appointed to prepare a statement regarding Judge Maynard and his career, and this statement will be circulated throughout the State as a campaign document against him. Who the members of that committee are there members of the Bar Association who are known to feel most keenly the disgrace which Judge Maynard's nomination has brought upon the bench and bar now refuse to state, but their names will be made public with the issuance of their statement, which may be given out today.

A member of the Bar Association who is known to be a leader among the lawyers opposed to Judge Maynard and who is in all probability a member of the Committee of Fifteen now preparing a campaign document against him, said yesterday:

"Our purpose is to beat this man and to make the public realize the disgrace of his nomination for a seat on the bench of our highest court. When the Bar Association met last week and reiterated its condemnation of Judge Maynard, branding him as a criminal, sentiment was divided as to the proper course for the association to pursue. All were united in voicing the exhaustive denunciation of Maynard made by the association at the time of the commission of his crime, but many believed that the resolutions adopted then were so emphatic and such an unmistakable expression of the feeling of the association that further aggressive action was unnecessary.

"What we propose to do, acting as individuals, is to take our intimate knowledge of the facts and our appreciation as lawyers of the damage his election would entail, and try to impress our views on other voters and citizens. We intend to carry on a campaign against him. We shall prepare a fair statement of the case of Judge Maynard and see that it is widely circulated."

WHERE IS FRANK MALONE?

Not Even His Wife Knows the Present Address of the Treasurer of Mount Vernon's Excise Board.

(Special to The World.)

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Oct. 16.—It is rumored that Frank Malone, Treasurer of the Board of Excise Commissioners of this city, has decamped. Owing to the absence of Mayor Brush from town it cannot be learned who Malone's sureties are. It is said Mayor Brush tried some time ago to oust Malone on a charge of intoxication, but Gov. Flower decided in Malone's favor.

Malone is about twenty-eight years old, and was appointed by Judge Appell while acting Mayor, in April, 1892. The last meeting of the Commissioners was held on July 12, and since then Malone has not been seen here.

Frank Malone was well known and well liked in New York business circles. He would undoubtedly have been successful if it had not been for his besetting fondness for drink. He was employed up to Aug. 25 last as a salesman by James L. Rankine, President of a brick manufacturing company, with offices in the Times Building. Previous to entering the employ of Mr. Rankine he had represented Morris Ebert, a dealer in cement in the same building. Mr. Rankine said yesterday that Malone had left his employ because business was dull. The company could save Malone's commission, and, therefore, let him go. Malone was one of the best sellers of building materials and had a more extended acquaintance among contractors in New York than any other man. Mr. Rankine said, but his affairs at Mount Vernon seemed to act as a drag on him. He had not been in the company's office for several weeks, though he had been in the building. Since he left the brick company's employ a street many people had inquired for him, but no definite information was obtainable as to his whereabouts.

Malone was married and lived for more than a year with his wife at No. 230 West Nineteenth street. When Mrs. Malone, who is a small delicate looking woman, was seen at her address yesterday she said that she did not know her husband's whereabouts. He had left home five or six weeks ago and she did not know where he had gone.

"He has left me," said Mrs. Malone, bitterly, "and he ought to be in a lunatic asylum. He all concerns me getting mixed up in politics in Mount Vernon. You can't touch dirt and remain clean. If he had stuck to his business he would have been a successful man. Now, even I, his wife, do not know where he is."

From other sources it was learned that Malone was fond of the society that is to be found along Fourteenth and Twenty-third streets, though his name was not connected with any particular group. His business associates declare that high living was the cause of his troubles, and that the creditors who mourn his departure are numerous.

Real Estate.

The great fortunes of the Astors and other wealthy New York families are due largely to wise purchases of real estate. The founders of these fortunes saw that with the rapidly increasing population of this great metropolis the land in the vicinity must increase enormously in value within a few years, and they had the courage of their conviction and bought promptly.

There is just as good an opportunity now, and the certainty of success is even greater than in their case of making large fortunes on Staten Island. When the Rapid Transit Road was building Erastus Wiman, knowing the exact situation of affairs, bought large tracts of the best land on the island. He thought he was laying the foundation for a great fortune (he was, but for others). Unhappily his other ventures turned out disastrously, and now the Trustee for his creditors is compelled to sell in lots and villa plots this superb land which Mr. Wiman was holding for a great rise. The Trustee cannot hold on until times are better, for he must sell and pay the creditors. Looking at the subject, however, from the standpoint of the advantage to the people, it must be admitted that these forced sales will prove a great boon to hundreds of people who will buy, build and own their own homes. Those who now have their money in savings banks, where they get very little interest, will find the lots which the Trustee is now going to sell the safest possible investment, and one that, instead of producing a profit of 2 or 3 per cent., will double in value in a very short time.

Get a pass and go to Gifford's by-the-Sea, and look over and prepare to buy some of those choice lots and villa sites, which the Trustee, through H. T. Metcalfe & Sons, Auctioneers, will sell on Thursday, Oct. 19, at 2.30 P. M., on terms which will be most attractive. Passes, maps and information can be had from Erastus Wiman, No. 1 Broadway; H. T. Metcalfe & Sons, Auctioneers, No. 145 Broadway and at Gifford's; Folsom Brothers, No. 826 Broadway, or Chris. Holser, 59 Liberty st., or Black & King, 44 Pine st.

Special trains will run on day of sale, leaving New York at 1.00 and 1.30 P. M.

SORRY HE MARRIED A "DAILY HINT."

Now Mr. Stoll Wants a Separation from His "1492" Charmer.

Harry Stoll, a young Boston druggist, created a sensation in theatrical circles eight weeks ago by taking in marriage Miss Hattie Mattison, one of the "six daily hints" in "1492."

There was a lot of talk about the wedding and all the clown girls said it was a fake.

Mr. Stoll wishes it was.

He finds he cannot live happily with the "hint from Paris." A World reporter saw him at the Starlewont House last night.

"Yes," said he, "it is true that I am seeking a separation from my wife. Our temperaments are not compatible and I do not care to continue this farce any longer. We were married while under the influence of wine and neither of us knew what we were doing. My friends tell me she is not the girl she was when I married her. Since the wedding and I have been living there, I have made application to the courts to have our marriage annulled on the ground that we did not realize what we were doing."

Mrs. Stoll said she was perfectly sober when the ceremony was performed, and she referred all inquirers to Dr. Houghton, of the Little Church Around the Corner, as to Mr. Stoll's condition. She refuses to live with Mr. Stoll for reasons which she will not state, but insists that the marriage was perfectly legal.

On the other hand Mr. Stoll says he was so drunk when the ceremony was performed that he displayed a borrowed porter's badge as an evidence of good faith. He says he will never live with Mrs. Stoll and she is equally decided in being away from him, but will not consent to a divorce.

ELIZABETH SCHUMAKER WANTED.

Her Anxious Sister Invokes the Aid of The World in Finding Her.

Anna Schumaker, a widow living at No. 1727 North Tenth street, Philadelphia, is anxious to learn the whereabouts of her sister, Elizabeth Schumaker, and has asked the aid of The World in searching for her. The missing sister was born in Weinersberg, and when last heard from was living with the family of Capt. Brown, on Washington street near Liberty, this city. That portion of the downtown district has been rebuilt to such an extent, however, that a World reporter was unable yesterday to find any one in the neighborhood who even remembered Capt. Brown or his family.

It is supposed that Miss Schumaker is either in New York or Brooklyn, and, whether dead or alive, any information regarding her will be thankfully received by her sister.

DUNRAVEN SAILS TO-MORROW.

A Reception Will Be Given Him by the New York Yacht Club To-Night.

At high noon yesterday a report from the brass cannon on the pierhead of the Atlantic Yacht Club echoed among the Bay Ridge hills, announcing the close of the yachting season of 1893 for that organization. Superintendent Hunken hauled down the pretty white pennant, with its scarlet letter "A," from the tall flagstaff and Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie saluted by dipping her flag.

The sassy black cutter is to go out of commission soon. The 2,300 pounds of lead ballast borrowed from Commodore B. F. Sutton was returned yesterday, and all the things that were taken out during the races have been replaced. This morning the yacht will be towed to City Island, where she is to be laid up for the winter at Hawkins's yard. The Vigilant is also to be laid up at the Pierpras yard.

Lord Dunraven was given a reception last night by the members of the New Rochelle Yacht Club at their house on Echo Island. The Vigilant, lying at anchor a cable's length away, was illuminated, and C. Oliver Iselin and a party of friends were present at the reception.

The New York Yacht Club will give Lord Dunraven a reception at its club-house tonight. He will be elected an honorary member of the club. It is understood that he is to sail on Wednesday morning for Liverpool in the Vigilant, for six stateprooms have been secured for his party.

Schaffer Willing to Meet Ives and Sloason.

(Special to The World.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 16.—Jake Schaefer does not think that George Sloason will come to Chicago, and therefore there is but little hope for the proposed three-cornered billiard tournament. As far as he is concerned, he is willing to meet Sloason and Ives in New York, and while he favors it, he is not especially anxious for a Chicago tournament. Jake does not want the tourney to interfere with his match with Ives. After that game he is willing to meet any player living for any amount of money.

Maurice Daly, the veteran billiardist, arrived in the city yesterday, and will put in a few days at the Fair. He has offered to arrange a match for a purse of $1,000 between Ives and Schaefer, to be played in New York after the Chicago match. If the tournaments fall through, a New York meeting between the two Western experts may be brought about.
