TALK ON AND OFF THE STAGE.

Mrs. Kendal a Connoisseur in Eyebrows as a Guide to Talent.

Hard Luck of Members of "The Younger Son" Cast.

Stars and managers have different ways of judging if an aspirant has histrionic ability. Some take the dress into consideration; others consider the vocal equipment; the gestures and the deportment are all studied. Mrs. Kendal, however, laughs at this. She has a theory of her own. It is simple and apparently facile. She receives the aspirant, and looks merely at his eyebrows. He may have a pug nose, a misshaped mouth, and weak eyes, but all these infirmities will be forgiven for the sake of the eyebrows. These must be long and full, curving around the eye. Mrs. Kendal says this has been her guide for years. She has remarked that all great actors have the long, drooping eyebrows. Of course this does not mean that all people with long eyebrows are great actors. She considers that the actor possessing that attribute is more likely to succeed than one without it. Mrs. Kendal points to Jefferson, Brougham, Lester Wallack and Coquelin as examples. She says nothing about Mr. Kendal's eyebrows, however. It is to be presumed that they drop in the approved fashion. Actors seeking admission into Mrs. Kendal's company must cultivate the eyebrows or submit to being declined with thanks in Mrs. Kendal's own gracious, ultra-refined way.

The withdrawal of "The Younger Son" from the Empire Theatre is pleasant for the people, but somewhat distressing for several members of the cast. New dresses were purchased—many of them—and they were designed to shine at more than six performances. Now they will have to be subjected—may be before they are even paid for—to that merciless process known as "making over," for it is one of the unwritten laws of the stage that costumes used for one play shall not be permitted to do duty in another.

Little Selma Goerner is back again at her post with the Liliputians. She appeared for the first time in "A Trip to Mars" Saturday afternoon. Miss Goerner has been ill for a very long time, suffering from nervous prostration, and she was sorely missed from the ranks of the clever little people at Niblo's.

"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" is to be produced in California, but not by the Kendals. Those artists will not venture out to the Pacific coast again. Last time they were there, the rude and hypercritical Californians did not show enough enthusiasm, and the frigidity of the reception accorded to the Kendals at that time has placed Frisco on their black books. Pinero's play will be done at the coast by Hayman's stock company, an organization that is to play for a season at the Baldwin Theatre. It will be made up of A. M. Palmer's company, and supplemented by artists selected by Al Hayman. The repertoire will include, in addition to "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Dancing Girl," "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Counsellor's Wife" and "A Woman's Revenge." The artists will be Wilton Lackaye, J. H. Stoddart, E. M. Holland, Frederic Robinson, E. J. Henley, May Brookyn, Mrs. H. H. Bowers, Mary Hampton and Mrs. Phillips.

It is said that Joseph Jefferson will devote the rest of his theatrical career to "Rip Van Winkle." This play has been attended by so much success that the famous actor does not feel called upon to do anything else.

* * *

Woolson Morse is engaged upon a revision of his "Cinderella," which De Wolf Hopper will present when he returns to New York. The burlesque will be called "Dr. Syntax; or, Cinderella at School." Morse is very proud of it. He won his spurs with it when it was presented at Daly's Theatre with Ada Rehan, James Lewis, Digby Bell, Laura Joyce, and others in the cast. He will not ask Mr. Daly to allow Miss Rehan to appear in De Wolf Hopper's version.

"Maine and Georgia," California's latest military play, is coming to New York very soon, and will probably be seen at the Fourteenth Street Theatre. Manager Stockwell has great faith in this San Francisco product, and he is even bringing actors across the continent to appear in the piece. He might save money, and secure better people by selecting his artists from the teeming Rialto of this city. It is said that the people in "The Cornerácker" Company have received their two weeks' notice.

Ben Stevens, on the De Wolf Hopper Company, was in the city Saturday. His organization appears in Newark this week. While in the West Mr. Stevens wanted to appear in a certain town, but was told that the town was held by one of the many "hardly able" companies now on tour. This did not alarm him. "We shall play there just the same," said he; "the company is going to collapse." And his words came true. The company smashed up in the nick of time, and Stevens was happy.

Laura Schirmer Mapleson is to appear in "The Fencing Master" in this city after all. The opera will be heard at Hammerstein's Harlem Opera House Dec. 11. Mrs. Mapleson, it is definitely announced, is getting exceedingly thin, and is consequently far more fitted for the part than she was.

Abbey's French company and his Irving-Terry organization were forced into rivalry in Chicago. Of course, the Irving forces won, having the advantage of the English language on their side. Irving and Terry's season in this country has been so far extremely brilliant.

Pledges to support labor measures in the Legislature were secured by the Brooklyn Central Labor Union yesterday from sixteen candidates for Assembly and six Senatorial nominees, while several others sent communications declaring that they could not pledge themselves to any measures without knowing the details.

Local Assembly 2,196, K. of L., bakers, has changed its place of meeting from the first and third Saturdays to the second and fourth Saturdays of the month. Secretary Julius Hehl has sent a circular to all local assemblies affiliated with District Assembly 220 stating that L. A. 2,195 have adopted resolutions declaring that the boycott against the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum is altogether lawful.

John H. McCulloch, of L. A. 7416, K. of L., machinists, stated yesterday that nonunion men played at the Republican mass-meeting held at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn last Saturday, and that Bandmaster Stowe, who is not a member of any union, paid those men $1, instead of $3, which is the regular rate.

Cigar-Makers' Union No. 90 held a special meeting yesterday and received the report of its delegates to the International Convention at Milwaukee, which was indorsed, although the delegates conceded that they had made some mistakes when voting or making motions, but that they were forgiven, as the Union considered that acts of the delegates to have been taken in good faith.

To the Senatorial and Assembly candidates in Essex County, N. J., the Essex Trades Council has submitted a circular asking these questions: Will you oppose all attempts to repeal the Fifteen-Foot Hour law? Will you oppose all attempts to repeal or weaken existing labor laws? Will you vote for a bill creating a commission to make the first Monday in September be set aside as a National labor holiday?

A special committee, which had been sent to Furniture Manufacturer Worn, of Brooklyn, by the Socialist Labor Federation, to induce him to recognize the Furniture and Machine Wood-Workers' Union, reported yesterday that Mr. Worn did not receive them very politely, and that he declared he would not employ union men under any circumstances.

Stationary Association of Engineers No. 3, Newark, N. J., has elected William Potter, President; William Baldwin, Vice-President; William Barr, Corresponding Secretary; William Aveland, Financial Secretary; John Hipple, Recording Secretary; C. H. Archibald stated at yesterday's meeting of the Central Labor Union that the 300 employees of the Borden Condensed Milk Company were treated like slaves, being compelled to work about twelve hours per day for $11 per week, and that the company required them to give $150 each as a guarantee for faithful service, which sum the men would not get back if they left their places without giving thirty days' notice. The Executive Committee was instructed to make an investigation, and, if possible, organize these men for the purpose of improving their condition.

For having reduced wages at Boss Kohler's shop, John Wiechmann was prohibited from acting as foreman for the next two years by the New York Framers' Union yesterday, of which he is a member. The Secretary was instructed to notify the Conference of Trades and Labor Unions that no more circulars or any other communications are desired from that body, as the framers are opposed to the political tactics of the conference. Several members working for Miecht & Brahn were fined $5 each for having made statements to the Executive Committee which were not founded in fact.

Delegates Mathias Barr and George Brueshin attached their signatures yesterday to a report made by Delegate J. J. Daly in regard to the suspension of Cabinet-Makers' Union No. 7 by the Building Trades Section of the Central Labor Union. The report stated that the Section was justified in suspending No. 7, as its members had acted like "scabs" on the jobs of Marcotte & Co. An attempt was made to have the report declared irregular because the signature of Delegate Daly, who was absent, had not been attached, but the report was indorsed by a large majority of the delegates, and printed copies will be sent to the press and the affiliated unions by the Corresponding Secretary.

At yesterday's meeting of the Conference of Trades and Labor Unions, President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, who is a candidate for Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention on the Republican and People's parties tickets, stated that he considered it to be his duty to accept the nomination, tendered him by members of trades unions, and he advised all union men to vote for members of unions no matter on which ticket they might be running. SPORTING NEWS AND GOSSIP.

More Talk Anent the Corbett-Mitchell Fistic Affair.

Football Now Has a Monopoly of Outdoor Sports.

A man who knows a few things about boxers said to the writer: "Charley Mitchell will never box Jim Corbett at the Coney Island Athletic Club or any other club, in fact, unless he gets one-third 'take-off' of the receipts. And at that he doesn't like the game in having to go up against Corbett to get that 'take-off.'

"To substantiate what I say allow me to tell you something. Mitchell received a cablegram from Atkinson, of London Sporting Life, saying an offer of a purse had been made to have the contest take place at Monte Carlo. Instantly the broad-beamed Englishman said: 'Why do you know, I think I'll accept that. Here's a place where the greatest spenders in the world go to blow in their cash. Why, we could draw in a ton of money.' And that same ton would have to yield its little one-third to Charley.

"Another thing, Mitchell never in his life, as manager of a boxer, or as one of the principles in a boxing match, made a match that he didn't take a great big look at the loser's end of the purse. His motto isn't both ends and the middle, but one end, anyhow, and that one must be a good, decent bit, you know. I might as well tell you, too, that I think the match, if fought anywhere, will be brought off right here in Coney Island. Just keep this for about two weeks and then if things do not go right, why there won't be any battle at all.

"The sporting oracle stopped. He wasn't exhausted either, and then he added: "You know I'm right, for I've done business with both of those guys. Charley's the greatest 'con' man in the business, and between you and me, Jim can play them as close as any financier I ever ran up against."

The oracle's remarks placed a new phase on the pugilistic pastime. Purses of $40,000 could be offered with reckless impunity where the boxers and the Club stand in for an even division of the receipts, provided the fight proves as hard and as swift, where they have the gate receipts in front of them, as they would where a purse was hung up for the winner. But, both having a management interested in the gate receipts, it is rather difficult to figure how either could give his entire attention to the business of punching. Look at it any way and it's a puzzling question.

"Punting" and "backing the centre" are the only terms heard nowadays when speaking of outdoor sports. Football dominates the day, and the giant-framed youngsters, with their hair a la doormat, rule the roost. New Yorkers are enjoying the fine frenzy for the annual jubilee of jabbing and slugging on Manhattan Field which invariably occurs when Yale and Princeton meet on Thanksgiving Day. Meanwhile Princeton and Yale are practising with second elevens and minor teams and getting used to being kicked in the eye and having their heads shoved into the earth. Princeton and University of Pennsylvania will meet in Philadelphia on Manhattan Field next Saturday. That will be the first gun heard in this season's football war. Saturday's game at Manhattan Field between Princeton and Wesleyan was merely a warming up heat for the Zebras. It was too easy. Penney will give them something better.

Everybody at the entertainment of the New York Athletic Club Saturday night was delighted, and the only regrettable features were the apology that Ferris Dunn made for Jack Abel and the announcement Dunn made of Mayor Harrison's murder. That should have been deferred until the close of the entertainment and not made between the rounds of a boxing contest. It was not respectful. Assistant District-Attorney Weeks might have held the despatch a few minutes longer.

The Boston A. A. eleven will meet the Crescents at Eastern Park next Saturday, and Harvard will face Cornell at Manhattan Field. It will be Harvard's first appearance in this city in six years.

BLOODGOOD'S BAD BLOOD.

It Led Him to Disturb a Mission Meeting with a Revolver.

Hermont Bloodgood, fifty-four years old, of 81 Perry street, was in the Jefferson Market Court to-day charged with felonious assault. While services were in progress yesterday in the Mission of the New York Port Society, at Charlton and Washington streets, Bloodgood, who was intoxicated, went in armed with a 44-calibre revolver, and began to stir things up.

Mrs. Frank Cassera, who was in charge of the services, screamed for help. Mr. Cassera, her husband, who was upstairs, went down on a run. Mr. Cassera is a small man, but he tackled Bloodgood without hesitation, and succeeded in pushing him out on the sidewalk.

Mr. Cassera had Bloodgood by the wrist so that the intruder could not shoot, and pushed him against a wagon.

Bloodgood succeeded, however, in hitting Mr. Cassera a violent blow on the head with his revolver. Then he ran away. Policeman Grean, of the Charles street station, saw Bloodgood running, pistol in hand, and after a short chase caught him.

At the station-house it was found that the revolver was loaded. Bloodgood was held for trial in court this morning.

FINK & CO.'S LOST JEWELS.

Head of the Firm Is Out of Town and the Exact Loss Is Unknown.

Joseph Fink, of the firm of Fink & Co., the jewellers, at 49 Maiden lane, has not yet returned to the city, and it is impossible to estimate the exact amount the firm will lose by the alleged robbery of their salesman, J. M. Berks, with, at first, $10,000 worth of jewelry.

It is supposed that some pickpocket knew of the large amount of goods carried by Berkowitz, and placed his pockets while in a crowd. Berkowitz has been in the employ of the firm for some time, and their confidence in him perfectly trustworthy. The loss will probably reach $5,000. Mr. Fink has offered a $100 reward for the return of the jewels.

Will Bring Home the Exhibit.

Gen. Clark, Secretary of the Health Department, has gone to Chicago, to be present at the closing exercises of the Fair. He will bring home the Health Department exhibit side in the New York State Building.

FIVE DAYS TO CONTRIBUTE.

"The World" Train Will Soon Start on Its Journey of Mercy.

Suffering of the Sea Island Unfortunates Increased.

There are only five days remaining during which to make contributions to the relief train which "The World" will send to the people of New Brunswick and the Sea Islands.

There are now probably enough provisions and clothing to fill eight cars, but a Pennsylvania Railroad engine can haul many more. Surely nothing would better demonstrate the good feeling of the North for the South than to send to the starving victims of hurricane and sickness a train of cars a half mile in length filled to the limit with the things so greatly needed.

The greatest need is for warm clothing, second hand or new, it doesn't matter, and articles of food. It is getting cold off the Georgia and Carolina coast but the same air is here, and as the North sends southward whistling winds it seems only just that it should send along with them clothing to keep unfortunates warm and food that they may not be hungry.

Contributions should be made promptly, for five days is a short time, and neglect may mean delay until the opportunity is gone. Merchants and grocers have been particularly liberal, but there are enough who should willingly contribute to load a dozen trains with boxes and barrels packed with just what the Southern sufferers need.

Philadelphia and Trenton are preparing to add carloads to "The World" train and will have them ready to be attached as it goes through each city.

The benefit to be given at the Imperial Music Hall Friday afternoon promises to be very successful. Mr. Krauss, the proprietor, has offered to turn over to the fund every cent of the proceeds. The talent that has already promised to assist at the performance will render a programme well worth witnessing.

This money, as well as all received by direct contribution, will be used to purchase provisions and clothing. Purchases will be made only from firms that will sell at cost or lower, so contributors can feel assured their money is being put to good purpose.

HIGHWAYMAN CAUGHT AT WORK

O'Brien Had His Hand in an Old Man's Pocket When Arrested.

Patrick O'Brien, a laborer, aged twenty-nine years, of Eighth street, Jersey City, was arrested at 4 o'clock this morning on a charge of attempted highway robbery.

The complainant is Joseph F. Pullis, aged sixty-three years, a salesman, occupying a room at 95 Cortlandt street, this city.

The men met in a saloon in Exchange place, where they had several drinks together. Pullis started to go to the house of a friend, and O'Brien volunteered to show him the way. On arriving at a dark place on Greenes, near Montgomery street, O'Brien threw the old man to the ground, seized him by the throat and was searching his pockets when pounced upon by a policeman. Pullis had in his possession two gold watches, one with a valuable chain, and also a purse containing a few dollars.

The prisoner was committed to the county jail by Justice O'Donnell to await trial on a charge of attempted highway robbery.

HE WAS LOST IN A DESERT.

Body of J. H. C. Leonhart, from New York, Found in California.

NEEDLES, Cal., Oct. 30.—The decomposed body of J. H. C. Leonhart, of New York, was found yesterday on a desert four miles from here.

Leonhart mysteriously disappeared from Santa Fe about Sept. 2, between Denver and Oakland. He was en route from New York to Oakland, where he was to appear to Friday. It was supposed he wandered from the train and was lost in the desert.

Death of a Miser Merchant.

NASHUA, N. H., Oct. 30.—Nelson Tinker, the proprietor of the most unique general store in New England, died yesterday, aged eighty-five. He had kept the store for years, in which he had lived and slept. In it were stored goods he had purchased second hand, which he was a young man, and pile had passed through region. He was this week before he was missed, and a search is now going on for wealth which he is supposed to have hidden.

THE FLOWER SHOW.
It Will Be Held in the Industrial Building—Novel Plans.
The Flower Show this year will be given at the Industrial Building on Lexington avenue and Forty-fourth street, and will open on Nov. 6.
The New York Florists' Club, under whose auspices the exhibition is given, have decided that the new quarters will be preferable to the Madison Square garden, where the fall exhibition had been previously held, because they afford a much larger floor space, and the arrangement of the rooms will enable the committee to produce many novel effects in the way of decoration which have not been attempted before.
The evening show will be very elaborate, and the arrangement of the flowers and ornamental shrubs will give the effect of a vast conservatory. The best authorities say that the remarkable fair and balmy weather this fall has brought the hardy out-door flowers to a state of perfection never before reached and that such fine chrysanthemums as those which will be on exhibition may never again be grown in the center.
The entrance on Lexington avenue will be decorated in a magnificent style with flags and bunting and ornamental greenery and evergreens, forming a beautiful bower, and the whole floor space in the main exhibition hall will be arranged in a reversible the centre of floral parade. The entire floor will be occupied by palms, ferns, rhododendrons, azaleas and the like, and to the right and left of the principal walks and flowers in flowers will be displayed, and will form a novel design on ribbon facsimiles, placed in regular lines.
Hundreds of chrysanthemums, roses, violets, carnations, marguerites and orchids will be shown in abundance.

THE MISSING COAT.

A Mistake Which Nearly Drove a Man to Suicide.

My name is Frederick Putnam. I have been for the last ten years foreman and bookkeeper of the lumbering establishment of William Winston & Co. Mr. Winston is the resident partner and manager of the business. The other members of the firm live in the city, and attend to the sales of lumber which we send to them by vessel.

One cold evening, as I was preparing for home I heard footsteps outside, and presently a tall, stout, well-dressed man with a small travelling-bag in one hand and a shawl over his arm entered the office. I was alone. I had already put on my overcoat and was turning down the light.

"Good evening," said the man, walking up to the stove and kicking the damper open with his foot. "Has Winston gone to the house?"

I answered that he had.

"Whew! I was afraid of it." He drew out his watch. "I shall not have time to go up," he said. "The train is due in fifteen minutes."

"Is there anything I can do?" I asked.

I wanted to leave some money with Winston. I intended to stop in town a day or two, but I have just got a despatch that calls me home."

"What name, sir?"

"Anderson, of Andersonville."

I knew him then, though I had seen him but once before. He had been one of our best Western customers. I say had been, for the reason that during the last year his payments had not been so prompt. In fact, he was considerably behind, and Mr. Winston had that very day told me to writ to him and "punch him up a little," as he expressed it. The letter was then in the breast pocket of my overcoat.

"You can leave the money with me, sir; I will give you a receipt," I said. He seemed to hesitate, which nettled me. I never blamed anybody since, however.

"How much is my bill?" he asked, eying me sharply.

"Eleven thousand, seven hundred and fifty dollars and twenty-three cents," I answered promptly, for I had struck the balance not more than half an hour before.

"Humph! Less than I supposed. Write me out a receipt for that amount."

He left the stove and came and looked over my shoulder while I wrote.

"It's all right, Mr. Putnam. I know you now. You've been with Winston a long time. I can tell your signature anywhere."

He drew from his inside pocket a wallet, and, counting out eleven piles of banknotes, he told me to count them. It was a short and easy task, for each pile contained just 100 bills. The balance was in fives and twenties.

At this moment we heard the whistle from the station. Anderson sprang for his travelling bag, and giving me a hasty handshake was off. I closed the door and counted the money again. Finding it right, I wrapped a piece of newspaper around it and slipped it into my overcoat pocket. I did not feel easy to have so much money about me, for as Mr. Winston's house was at least a mile distant I concluded to keep it until morning, when I could deposit it in the bank.

I drew on my gloves, took the office key from the nail over the door and walked over to extinguish the light. As I did so I saw on the floor the receipt I wrote for Mr. Anderson. He had dropped it in his hurry. I put in my pocket and thought no more about it, only that I would mail it to him. I would have done it then, but as the last mail for that day had gone on the train which took Mr. Anderson I could do it just as well in the morning. Then, too, I was in something of a hurry. Last night, for I had an appointment with a young woman whom I hoped would be my wife before many months.

I hastened to my boarding-house, ate my supper, and then went over to the home of my intended bride, wearing the coat with the money in it, as I did not feel easy about leaving it in my room. Car
