HOW QUEEN LIL FELL.

Mr. Blount's Report of the Great Conspiracy in Hawaii.

Marines Landed Before Even the Conspirators Were Ready.

President Damon, of the Advisory Council, a Reluctant Witness.

What purported to be an abstract of the Hawaiian report of Commissioner Blount was published in this city this morning. It was made up of a series of written statements and reports of verbal statements gathered by Mr. Blount at Honolulu. The effect of the document is to confirm the view of the situation taken in Secretary Gresham's published note to the President, that the so-called revolution in Hawaii, by which the Queen was unseated and the Provisional Government established, was accomplished through the aid of American marines from the cruiser Boston, under orders from Minister Stevens.

The first important statement is signed by Mr. F. Wundenburg, of whom, as showing his standing in Hawaii, it is given out that the Provisional Government offered to him the Collectorship of Customs, which he declined.

The gist of Mr. Wundenburg's declaration lies in the following statements:

The Committee of Safety met at the office of W. O. Smith, in Fort street, at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, Jan. 16, 1893, for the purpose of discussing the steps necessary to be taken in the formation of a new government.

Shortly after the Committee met they decided they were not ready for the landing of the American troops, and a committee of three, with Thurston as the Chairman, was at once despatched to the American Legation to prevent Minister Stevens to delay the landing of the Boston's men. The Committee returned shortly, and said Mr. Stevens had said to them, "Gentlemen, the troops of the Boston landed at 5 o'clock this afternoon, whether you are ready or not." * * *

The Committee met at Mr. Waterhouse's residence that evening at 7:30. The formation of some sort of government was under discussion, and it was decided a commander-in-chief of the forces supporting the proposed new Government should be appointed. The position was offered to John H. Soper, who demurred, not seeing any backing whatever to support the movement. Mr. Soper was answered by members of the Committee that the American Minister would support the move with the troops of the Boston.

Mr. Soper still doubted, so a couple of the Committee escorted him over to the Legation, which, by the way, was in the adjoining premises, and the three came back after a time, reporting that Mr. Stevens had given them full assurance that any proclamation of the Government, put forward at the Government building, or any other building in Honolulu, for that matter, would receive the immediate recognition and the support of the forces of the Boston. This assurance seemed to satisfy Mr. Soper, and he accepted the position.

On Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 17, the Committee of Thirteen, or Committee of Safety, proceeded to the office of W. O. Smith (now Attorney General in the Provisional Government) in the Government building, and there read the proclamation of a new government at 2:45 o'clock, they being practically an audience, whatever. In the reading proceeded a dozen or so loungers (armed), and near the close of the ceremony about thirty supporters variously armed, came to the yard and gathered about the Committee.

At this moment the United States troops, in the temporary quarters in the rear of the music hall, less than 100 yards away from where the Committee stood, appeared to be under arms, and were evidently prepared for any emergency.

During all the deliberations of the Committee, and in fact through all the proceedings connected with the move up to the final issue, the basis of action was the general understanding that Minister Stevens would keep the promise to support the movement with the force from the Boston, and the statement is now authoritatively made (with the full knowledge of the lack of arms, ammunition and men, also the utter absence of organization at all adequate to the undertaking) that without the previous assurance of support from the American Minister and the actual presence of the United States troops no movement would have been attempted, and if attempted would have been a miserable failure resulting in the capture or death of the participants in a very short time.

Having been present at the several meetings referred to in this statement I hereby certify that the same is correct in every essential particular.

An interview with Mr. S. A. Damon follows. Mr. Damon is President of the Advisory Counsel of the Provisional Government. It is stated that he granted the interview unwillingly, but certified to the correctness of the report made of it. The points in the interview corroborate Mr. Wundenburg's statements.

Mr. Damon describes the starting from Smith's office, on Fort street. There were about eighteen men in all. Damon says they divided into two bodies, taking different streets, because "they were afraid they might attract attention. They were afraid of being interfered with by the police, he says, showing that the Queen's Government was still in possession of the city.

The men straggled out so as not to attract attention, for they knew they were simply a band of conspirators. At the Government house, Damon says, no one was found save the porters and officials employed there.

Mr. Cooper read the proclamation, and as the members of the Committee who had assembled for this purpose felt anxious about their personal safety they sent word to Col. Soper, in command of their forces, for guards. Then it was that men came running in with rifles in their hands.

Mr. Damon continues:

While we were in the Government building, and during the reading of the proclamation, and while we were all extremely nervous as to our personal safety, I asked one of the men with me there, "Will not the American troops support us?" Finally I asked one of the men to go over and ask Lieut. Swinburne if he was not going to send some one over to protect us. The man returned and said: "Capt. Wilts's orders are to remain passive."

I was perfectly nonplussed at not receiving their support. I could not imagine why we were there without being supported by the American troops. We were there fifteen or twenty minutes, without their supporting us in any way.

Being asked what was accomplished by the first visit to the station-house Mr. Damon at length replied:

The Queen's Ministers virtually gave it up. They said if they had only the provisional government to contend with and the forces of the provisional government they would not surrender. They felt they could meet the emergency so far as the provisional government was concerned, but it was clear they were willing to yield, and the Queen and I went along with them to the palace.

We asked for a surrender and the Ministers advised it. At first Judge Widemann opposed the idea, but couldn't when Mr. Neumann did. It was the Queen's idea that she could surrender pending a settlement at Washington. It was on that opinion that she gave up. I told her she could surrender or abdicate under protest.

Q. And that the protest would be considered at a later period at Washington.

A. Yes, at a later period.

The fact that Minister Stevens recognized the new Government before it was in possession of the station-house and before the abdication of the Queen, this recognition being used as a weapon with which to intimidate the Queen, is established by an affidavit of Charles L. Hopkins, who carried a letter from Antone Rosa to Minister Stevens at a quarter to three P. M., January 17.

In ten minutes a reply from Minister Stevens was handed him addressed to Samuel Parker, Minister of Foreign Affairs. In this letter Minister Stevens recognized the Provisional Government as the de facto Government of the Hawaiian Islands.

This is confirmed by Minister Stevens himself in a report now on file with the records of the United States Legation.

The points regarding the quartering of the troops from the Boston are next touched upon, with Admiral Skerrett's letter declaring his opinion that the men were poorly placed if they were there to protect United States property and citizens, but wisely placed if they were there to support the Provisional Government.

Next comes a statement from Mr. Cornwall, of the Queen's Cabinet, confirming the story of the conspiracy, from a royalist point of view.

Col. Soper is quoted by Mr. Blount in confirmation of his reluctance to take command of the Provisional forces and his persuasion, as previously related.

The statement closes with a defense of the ex-Queen from the scandal connecting her name with that of ex-Marshal Wilson.

NO STAY FOR ELLISON.

Jury Had a Right to Consider All the Counts.

His Case Not Prejudiced by Charge of Assault in First Degree.

The Charge of Recorder Smyth Declared Unquestionable.

The application of Frank Ellison for a stay of proceedings, pending an appeal from his conviction for an assault on Broker Henriques, has been denied by Justice Barrett, of the Supreme Court. The Judge says:

"The defendant was not prejudiced by the refusal of the learned Recorder to withdraw from the consideration of the jury the count for assault in the first degree. This is apparent from the fact that the jury rendered a verdict of assault in the second degree, and thus acquitted him of the higher offense.

"But in my judgment there was sufficient evidence to justify the submission to the jury of the higher crime. The testimony showed threats to kill followed by a violent and brutal assault, which might well have effected the defendant's proclaimed purpose.

"There was no error in allowing Mrs. Neame to testify to the defendant's threats. If these threats were accompanied with threats against the witness and general abuse, the defendant should have asked to strike out the latter. The witness simply gave the entire interview in which the threats against the complainant were made. The request to strike out the entire testimony was properly refused.

"The charge was unexceptionable, and the requests to which my attention is called were properly refused. As to the fifth request, the jury could not properly have inferred from the mere possession by the complainant of the pistol that the defendant had fair and reasonable ground to apprehend danger to his life. Nor was there such an undisputed use of the pistol as to justify this interference. The question of this use was a question of fact for the jury. The proposition was founded throughout upon assumptions of fact when the facts themselves were in dispute.

"The other points are without merit and call for no special consideration. The defendant was fairly convicted upon evidence which plainly preponderated in favor of the people, and the jury certainly took a lenient view of this case when they rendered a verdict of assault in the second degree.

"The application should be denied."

Ambrose W. Purdy, Ellison's counsel, was much surprised when he heard of Justice Barrett's decision refusing the application for a stay for his client. He had expected a favorable decision.

He said, however, that he would not allow the matter to rest where it was, but would make a second application to-morrow to some other magistrate for a stay pending the appeal in Ellison's case.

Ellison, who is in the Tombs, refused to be interviewed on Justice Barrett's decision this morning and referred all cases to his counsel. It is said, however, that the failure to obtain a stay was a great disappointment to him.

In the usual course of proceedings he would probably remain in the Tombs for a day or two until the orders requiring his transfer to the State prison, but if his counsel makes another application for a stay he will be kept at the Tombs until this is decided.

BURGLAR TRIES BLUFFING.

Falling, He Showed Fight, but Was Arrested.

About 1 o'clock this morning Policeman Hill, of the West Forty-seventh street Precinct, saw a hole in the window-pane of the New York Provision Company building at 559 Tenth avenue. On making a further investigation he found the side door of the building unlocked. He entered the place and saw a man crouching behind a chopping block. The man was armed with a piece of iron.

Before Hill had a chance to ask a question the man said, "Sh, there are some people in the building," intending to lead the officer to believe that he had a right to be there.

Hill did not rise much stock in the fellow and was about to blow his whistle when the man knocked it out of his mouth.

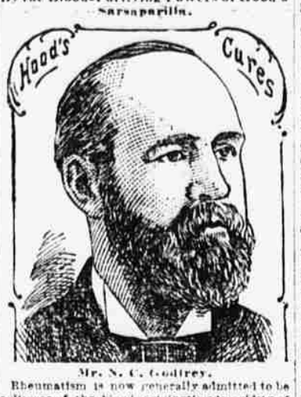
Hill knocked the man down and disarmed him. He then took him to the West Forty-seventh street station where he described himself as Thomas Kane, twenty-four years old, of 65 Eleventh avenue.

Kane was arraigned before Justice Hogan at the Yorkville Court to-day. The cash register of the provision house had been smashed, but the burglar found that he had his labor for his pains, as all the money was locked up in the safe. He was held for trial.

Rheumatism

INTENSE SUFFERING ENDED

By the Blood-Purifying Powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla.



Mr. N. C. Godfrey.

Rheumatism is now generally admitted to be a disease of the blood, originating in acidity of the vital fluid. Hood's Sarsaparilla being a radical blood purifier, neutralizes the acid, restores the blood to the vitality of health and thus cures the disease. The following is from Mr. N. C. Godfrey, a well-known carriage and wagon builder at Clayton, N. J.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"Gentlemen: A year ago I was stricken down with rheumatism, and for three months it seemed to me there was to be

No End to My Suffering.

I was attended by the best physicians, but with no good result. Like one grasping for some support, and to get at the facts about Hood's Sarsaparilla, I bought a bottle of this medicine and began taking it. The effects were astonishing, for I was soon perfectly cured and

At My Business Again.

Twice since that attack I have felt symptoms of the old disease, and at once commenced with a new bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, with the same good effect, driving away all trace of the disease. Rheumatism, in my mind, comes from a disordered state of the blood, and disarranges the whole system, and I am sure in my case Hood's Sarsaparilla acted directly upon the blood, as it gave me relief so soon." STABBED IN FRENZY.

Christiana Wounds Brother-in-Law, Nephew and Niece.

Lost Money at Cards and Was Crazed with Rage.

He Escapes and His Victims Will Recover.

Petro Bargi, an Italian butcher, forty-five years old, of 135 Mott street, is in St. Vincent's Hospital suffering from a stab wound in the abdomen. A call was sent out early this morning for a Coroner to take his ante-mortem statement. The wound was inflicted by Angelo Christiana, Bargi's brother-in-law. Christiana is in hiding from the police.

In addition to wounding Bargi, Christiana is charged with slashing Giuseppi, seventeen years old, and Marina, twenty months old, both children of the wounded Petro. They are not seriously hurt.

The Bargi family lives on the third floor of 135 Mott street, a six-story tenement. In the basement is a saloon, where habitues from the "Bleat" and elsewhere assemble nights to play cards and drink.

Christiana, who lived with his brother-in-law, is also a butcher. Both are said to have been employed about Centre Market, near Broome street.

Last night Angelo was playing cards in the saloon. Luck was against him, and after showing his ugly disposition for an hour, his companions refused to have him longer in the game. It was then 9 o'clock.

Angelo left the saloon in a rage. He went upstairs to the Bargi apartments and sullenly took a seat in the kitchen.

Young Bargi was in a playful mood and, noting his uncle's sullenness, began to tease him by tickling his ear with a straw. Angelo stood it for awhile, then suddenly slapped the boy across the face.

The boy's father resented Angelo's blow and hot words followed. Then the two men began to fight.

Mrs. Bargi sprang between her husband and her brother with Baby Marina in her arms. Angelo drew a big clasp knife from his pocket and stabbed Petro in the left side of the abdomen.

Giuseppi flew at his uncle, who fought like a madman. One of the lunges slashed Baby Marina's arm and another sliced a piece of flesh out of young Bargi's right arm. There was a great uproar, and the neighbors came running up the stairs. Angelo fled.

Petro, bleeding profusely, followed in hot pursuit. He caught Angelo on the sidewalk and tried to hold him, but he was weak from loss of blood and no one came to his assistance. Angelo hurled Petro from him and then fled in the darkness. Petro then fell unconscious on the sidewalk.

Policeman Hector Weeden, of Mulberry street station, heard the shouts and hastened to the scene. He rang for an ambulance from St. Vincent's Hospital and then started to find Angelo.

Other policemen hurried to the scene, and when the ambulance came Petro was taken to the hospital. At noon to-day the physicians there said he would recover.

Changed His Mind; Killed Himself.

BABYLON, L. I., Nov. 20.—James Ryan, aged forty-five, a laborer, committed suicide at his home in this village this morning. He was about to start with his dinner-pail to go to work, when he suddenly changed his mind, went upstairs and, while standing in front of a looking-glass, cut his throat from ear to ear. He leaves a widow and three children.

Judge Russell Discredits It.

A report that L. H. Cunliff, manager of the Stewart estate at Garden City, L. I., will not permit his successor to the postmastership at that place to occupy the post-office building, is discredited by Judge Horace Russell, who has charge of that portion of the Stewart estate. The estate takes in every building in Garden City, except the railroad station, and Cunliff's alleged action, it is said, is the result of his being disgruntled over his removal.
