DAILY EMPIRE.

DROWNED.

Where the mud lies black and slimy,
Where the waters sweep along,
Where the wharfmen, stout and grimy,
Heave and haul with many a song—
Heaving still
With a will,
Every coming day to fill;
Hauling with a laugh and shout,
Bales of wondrous size about;
Straining to the ponderous weight
Of the good ship's wealthy freight.

Where the wide and swelling river
Rolls in one perpetual rhyme,
Where gracious winds deliver
Glorious things from every clime—
Stuffs to wear,
Spices rare,
Lie in heaps, or scent the air—
Where the merchant full of gold,
Welcomes home the seaman bold;
Where each heart, its love confessed,
Clasps the loved one to the breast.

Where the soft voiced land breeze ever
Hums its tune by mast and shroud,
Where the rough tongued master never
Ceases crying to the crowd—
"With a haul,
Lubbers all,
Stretch your muscles to the full!
Where the never ceasing flow,
Man above, and waves below,
Night and day, pours on and off,
Mingling on the city wharf.

There the vagrant boy is standing
With a ghastly, frightened air
While each lounger is demanding
What he sees to make him stare.
Still his eyes
Grow in size
As his stammering speech he tries;
And his finger points below,
Where the waters ebb and flow,
Still his lips give forth no sound
But a hoarsely whispered "Drowned!"

Where the planks are green and rotten,
Sending forth a sickening steam,
Where the daylight is forgotten,
And the wharf rat reigns supreme—
In his eyes
Fierce surprise
As his toothsome human prize;
Squeaking, gibbering forth a cry,
As the crush above goes by;
Heeding neither man nor horse
In his battles o'er the corse.

With a crow bar to the planking
With the tackle and the fall,
With a heave and with a clanking,
Shivering hands give willing haul.
There he lies!
Open eyes
Turned toward the summit skies—
There he lies in oozing slime,
Heedless of the place and time,
Heedless of the gazing throng,
Heedless of the clash and song.

Sunlight falls like shadows fading
Still the song goes on aloud—
Still with gaze that seems upbraiding
Stares the dead man on the crowd.
Hours fly
Swiftly by;
Sunset darkens on the sky
Ere the lingering men and boys
Hear the dead cart's rumbling noise
O'er the distant stone clad ground
Coming for a man that's "Drowned."

Had his limbs been clothed in scarlet,
Were his linen rich and rare,
Had he been the veriest varlet,
Taunting God's own perfumed air,
Would he lie,
While hours fly,
Staring sightless to the sky?
Would the crowd so careless stand
If a gem gleamed on his hand?
Would they sing, and laugh around,
Were he better dress'd when "Drowned!"

READ THE FOLLOWING:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, FEBRUARY 15, 1857.

This is to certify that I have examined the samples of J. Beckley and Co.'s Cement and Composition Roof, and can say that I think them equal, if not superior to any Cement or Composition Roof now in use. I have one on my house, adjoining to where I was lately burned out, and must say that it stood the test admirably. D. A. POWELL.

CINCINNATI, June 29, 1858.

This is to certify that we have employed Messrs. J. Beckley and Co. to put their Cement Roof on our foundry at the west end of Eighth street, and thus far it has given entire satisfaction, having been fully tested by severe rains, etc. The burning of a large frame ware-house adjoining, scorching our wood work and destroying our glass, produced no effect on our roof from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm or vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with comparative violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

Fever and Ague,

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, as it does cure this affective disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more;
