"German Syrup"

A Farmer at Edom, Texas, Says: "We are six in family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles is—Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this country.

The Voice of the People

Reaches us—or should do so—through the ballot-box. This is the medium through which it ought to speak in clarion tones. But there are other means by which the people voice their sentiments, irrespective of politics, concerning matters of vital importance. Successful or unsuccessful are those popular admonitions as they are heard distinctly or faintly. But health, the grand desideratum, appeals to us all. The avenue is only cleared when the obstacles which bar its complete recovery are swept aside. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has for nearly a third of a century occupied the first rank among proprietary remedies for debility, dyspepsia, constipation, disorder of the liver and kidneys, and as an effectual means of conquering and preventing malarial complaints. Since the advent of "la grippe" it has also signalized itself as a cure of the complaint.

GROWTH OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

The Many Practical Uses to Which the Art Is Being Put.

Few people realize to what an extent the art of photography is used at the present day. There is hardly a business that does not employ it in some way, and architectural photography has developed into a large and lucrative business, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Although there are tens of thousands of photographers, there are only six widely known architectural photographers—men who make a specialty of this branch of business and do nothing else. One of them has just returned from an extended tour of the West, where he has been engaged in photographing important buildings in the principal Western cities for the New York Society of Architects. In speaking to me about his work he said: "I know of no business that is so wearing and exciting as this. Out of the 365 days of the year we only get about 146 days when the weather is sufficiently clear for us to make good pictures of high-class architectural work. The thing is to reproduce as accurately as possible the idea the architect has conceived, in keeping the lines perpendicular and preserving the right proportions between each story. Good judgment is required in selecting the best lights for the pictures and the best points from which to take the photograph. All this demands constant care and study. I have to keep myself like a doctor, ready to be called on any hour. For instance, should the wind shift around to the north to-night and the atmosphere clear up, I would have to be up at 3 o'clock to-morrow morning and go way over to New Jersey and take a view that I have been trying to get for several weeks. Buildings on the south side of the street can only be photographed five months in the year, and the least haziness in the atmosphere will ruin a picture. It took me three months to get six views which I have of the interior of St. Patrick's cathedral, New York, and I expended over $1,000 to obtain them.

In referring to the various uses of photography he said that he was constantly called upon to take pictures of buildings by law firms for use in cases upon which they were engaged; that in suits for damages against the elevated roads a great many of them were required, where the owner desired to show the exact encroachment of the elevated structure on his casement; also its effect upon his light, etc. A few years ago architects kept a collection of their drawings to show customers. Now they keep immense albums filled with magnificent views exactly reproducing their work. Some of these architectural protographs are exceedingly beautiful. They certainly show the extraordinary strides made in the art of photography during the past few years.

Sea-Sand as Soil.

It is hard to think of anything more barren, more destitute of fertility, than sea-sand. In connection with some studies of the chemistry of vegetable production in the laboratory of the Wesleyan university we have been growing plants in just such sand, brought from the shore of Long Island Sound. To divest it of every possible trace of material which the plant might use for food except the sand itself, it was carefully washed with water and then heated. The young man who prepared the sand for use, in his zeal to burn out the last vestiges of extraneous matter, heated the iron pots in which it was calcined so hot that they almost melted. The sand was put into glass jars, water was added, and minute quantities of chemical salts, which plants take from the soil, were dissolved in it. In the sand thus watered and fertilized dwarf-peas were grown. Peas of the same kind were cultivated by a skillful gardener in a rich soil of a garden close by, and grew to a height of four feet, while those in the sand with water and the minute quantities of chemical salts reached a height of eight feet.—Century.

"The Blue Hen's Chickens."

Everybody knows that natives of Delaware are called the "Blue Hen's Chickens," but not one in a hundred can tell you why they are so called. The epithet is said to have had its origin in the following:

One of Delaware's most gallant fighters in the war of the Revolution was a Captain Caldwell, who was notorious for his fondness for cock-fighting. He drilled his men admirably, they being known throughout the army as "Caldwell's game-cocks." This same Caldwell held to the peculiar theory that no cock was really game unless its mother was a blue hen. As the months wore away Caldwell's men became known as the "Blue Hen's Chickens," a title which only increased their respect for the old game-cock captain. The nickname became famous and after the close of the war was applied indiscriminately to all natives of the "Diamond state."

"There's something behind it." That's what you think, perhaps, when you read that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 reward for an incurable case of Catarrh. Rather unusual, you think, to find the makers of a medicine trying to prove that they believe in it. "There must be something back of it!"

But it's a plain, square offer, made in good faith. The only thing that's back of it is the Remedy. It cures Catarrh in the Head. To its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases yield, no matter how bad or of how long standing. It has a record that goes back for 25 years. It doesn't simply relieve—it perfectly and permanently cures. With a Remedy like this, the proprietors can make such an offer and mean it. To be sure there's risk in it, but it's so very small that they are willing to take it.

You've "never heard of anything like this offer?" True enough. But then you've never heard of anything like Dr. Sage's Remedy.
