PACKING PLANT FIRE

CUDAHY BROS. LOSE $400,000 IN THE BLAZE.

Fire Starts in Killing Department of Plant Near Milwaukee, Wis., and Spreads Rapidly—One Fireman is Killed and Several Injured.

The big packing plant of the Cudahy Brothers Packing company, at Cudahy, Wis., six miles south of Milwaukee, burned Friday evening.

Patrick Cudahy estimates that the loss will reach about $400,000. The plant carries an insurance of about $600,000.

One fireman was killed and several others are said to have been seriously injured.

The big building in which the lard refinery, beef house, glue works and killing department are located is a total loss. The fire got into the main building, but the flames were checked there and the structure was saved.

The fire started in the lard department. The cause is still unknown. The flames spread with great rapidity and were not discovered for some time, as the workmen had gone to their homes.

The entire town turned out to assist in fighting the blaze. Long before the firemen could get water on the flames the fire had spread over the entire building, which is about 300 by 900 feet in dimensions and six stories high. The Milwaukee department sent several pieces of apparatus.

The fire throws 500 men out of employment, but the building will be rebuilt immediately. The report that a fireman had been killed proved erroneous.

CITY OWNERSHIP DEFEATED.

People of Seattle Turn Down Proposition by Big Majority.

Municipal ownership of street railways as represented in a proposal to bond the city of Seattle in the sum of $4,272,000, of which $1,172,000 was to be charged against the general funds of the city and the balance to be an indebtedness against 20 per cent of the gross receipts of the system when in operation, was defeated at a special election held in that city Wednesday. Out of a total of approximately 13,000 votes cast municipal ownership lacked 935 votes of a majority. Four precincts out of 96 have yet to be heard from, but the result will not be materially changed by the missing votes.

Registration for the special election was 23,000, of which a true over half was cast. The weather was inclement, but the working classes voted heavily.

It was proposed to build a great municipal street railway system that would parallel and extend beyond the lines of the Seattle Electric Railway company, owned by Boston capitalists.

TO INDICT WRECKERS.

The Grand Jury Decides on Twenty True Bills.

P. O. Stensland and Henry W. Hering took another long stride toward the penitentiary Tuesday when the September grand jury at Chicago voted against them more than twenty indictments charging forgery, perjury, embezzlement, and the receiving of deposits after insolvency.

The jury practically completed the taking of evidence in one day and the return of the indictments took place before Judge Kavanagh Wednesday.

One feature of the investigation lay in the fact that Theodore Stensland, son of the bank wrecker under arrest in Tangier, escaped indictment, while the other directors of the institution are reported to have been made victims of the bill of the preliminary vote taken by the grand jury. Young Stensland owes his escape to the fact that he proved a willing witness by going before the grand jury and practically repeating the story he told on Aug. 12. He was the only director called as a witness.

According to reports, the jurors returned an indictment against Ole Stensland, on account of his sharing in the $1,000 taken from the bank by Hering for the purpose of investing in Union Pacific stock.

The story of Walter Frantzen, the former teller who is supposed to have taken $34,000 from the bank, was told by young Stensland and his evidence may result in the indictment of Frantzen, who is in New York.

WESTERN UNION TO EXPAND.

Stockholders Will Vote on Issuing $25,000,000 in Bonds.

The directors of the Western Union Telegraph company have authorized President Clowry to call a meeting of stockholders on Oct. 10 to vote on a proposition to issue $25,000,000 in gold bonds. The directors also voted that $10,000,000 in gold bonds be issued immediately for subscription by stockholders. The money realized from the bonds is to be used for new construction and the purchase of new property.

A circular which sent out to the stockholders of the company in reference to the bond issue reads:

During the first few years the rate of growth of the business of the company and the consequent demand for increased facilities have been greater and the expenditures for construction for new property have been consequently correspondingly increased. All the $20,000,000 4 1/2 per cent real estate bonds authorized by the stockholders in 1900 have been issued.

TO REIMBURSE DEPOSITORS.

Receiver Earle Hopes to Pay Hipped Creditors in Full.

Receiver Earle's plan, by which he hopes to reorganize the defunct Real Estate Trust company, of Philadelphia, was formally approved by the directors of the company Wednesday and was mailed to the stockholders, depositors and other creditors of the institution. The amount of cash pledged by the directors is $2,500,000, and this with the good assets of the company is believed to be sufficient to pay the depositors dollar for dollar. The proposition is to pay the depositors one-third of their claims in cash, giving them preferred stock in the company for the remaining two-thirds which is to remain as working capital for the rehabilitated company.

The veterans' peace committee Tuesday morning submitted the following basis for peace propositions and the executive committee of the moderate party unanimously accepted them and promised to lend their services heartily toward pacification through this means. Whether the insurrectionists will accept them is considered questionable, as they do not provide for the amendment of any of the last elections. The propositions follow:

"Repeal of the general electoral law and the new judicial law permitting the permanent tenure of offices by judges; prohibiting the discharge of public employes without full hearings and investigations, not permitting the suspension of mayors or aldermen without court trial; declaring for the complete autonomy of municipalities in accordance with the constitution; providing for the formation of the municipality of Havana into a federal district, the officials of which shall be named by a commission appointed by congress; favoring a new election law which shall provide that registrations be supervised by judicial authorities and delegates from each party, and declaring that each party shall have absolute respect for the rights of minorities in all elections."

If the revolutionists and liberals accept the propositions the war will be declared ended by the moderates.

HOW RAILROADS BUY RAILS.

Chief Engineer of Line Determines Amount to Be Used.

Steel rails form one of the costliest items in the annual expenditures of a railroad, and the manner in which a railroad buys its rails from one of the great steel concerns is one which suggests the importance of the annual event. In all the large systems the president and board of directors are notified and the matter is first passed upon by them before the purchasing agent of the railroad begins to work out the details, says the New York Herald.

It is a small order these days when a system orders 10,000 tons of steel rails. At the present prices for rails an order of 10,000 tons means an outlay in cash of $280,000. More frequently, however, orders for rails run up above $1,000,000 a year. There are no rail equipment trusts by which the cash is furnished, as there are car trusts and equipment trusts. As a result, when the rails are being delivered cash is paid.

Usually it is the chief engineer of a railroad system who makes up his estimates of the necessities of the coming year for the company. The main line, he figures, needs so many tons of heavy standard rails and the branches require so many tons. Usually his estimates are cut down when the president and his subordinates go over the matter, but then, again, they may be increased. Other changes are made when the ideas of the president are suggested to the engineer. When the final estimates are made up the matter is presented to the directors by the president and the purchase is then authorized. The engineer again takes up the subject, together with the purchasing agent. The engineer makes up specifications and the purchasing department gets in touch with the steel rail concerns. Freight charges and nearness to point of shipment are among the considerations which the purchasing department have to weigh.

When the engineer's department has completed the details of the grade of steel with the proportion of the essential that are to enter the rail then the order is taken up by the president again and conferences are held with the leading officials of the steel company. After many suggestions and changes the order is finally placed.

Making Fuel from Waste.

It has been estimated that in the mining of coal, the dust, slack and screenings represent nearly a fourth of the output of the mines, writes W. Frank McClure in Technical World Magazine. To utilize these products has long been a problem. The fact that in France, Germany, and Cardiff, Wales, the utilization of this waste has been an established industry for years, lent impetus to the introduction of some such plan in America; but European methods, it was found, could not be advantageously adopted here. The advanced price of coal and the likelihood of strikes, however, have kept the problem of using waste products to the front, until now inventive genius is being crowned with success and both anthracite and bituminous fields will ere long be profiting greatly thereby.

A new machine, recently completed, in its first practical tests at St. Louis, Mo., produced from what was previously considered waste products eight tons of fuel in one hour's time. This fuel is in the form of briquettes each oval in shape, weighing three-fourths of a pound and being 3 inches in diameter and 1 1/2 inches thick. This is much smaller than the briquettes produced in Europe, which seldom weigh less than 6 pounds each. The smaller size insures more perfect combustion.

Thanks!

John Ridgley Carter, secretary of the American embassy at London, was piloting some American friends through the museum at Hastings when he observed an unhappy attendant wearing a military uniform, with a helmet from which a chin strap hung, at whom an inquisitive tourist was firing all manner of silly questions.

The tourist's last question was: "Say, what is that strap under your chin for?"

The attendant sighed. "The strap is to rest my jaw when I get tired answering questions," said he.—Harper's Weekly.

Where Amber Is Found.

The shores of the Baltic Sea are the world's principal source of amber. Here a large number of people earn a precarious livelihood gathering the precious substance along the shore. At some points along the coast divers search the bottom of the sea for lumps of amber hidden in the seaweed or jammed between rocks. The largest piece ever found weighed eighteen pounds, valued at $30,000. It is now in the Royal Museum in Berlin.—Technical World.
