NO LAW FOR MUZZLING DOGS.

The Number of Persons Bitten Is Greater Than Usual.

Latest Case Reported Is that of an East Broadway Girl.

The question has been asked many times during the last week or two, why it is that the dogs running about the streets of the city are no longer muzzled.

The reason is that the new law, which went into effect last April, placing the licensing of dogs in New York City under the supervision of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, does away entirely with the muzzling provision of the old law.

This has been decided by Corporation Counsel Clark in an opinion which he submitted to the Mayor at the special request of the latter.

The old law was very stringent in its provisions with regard to the muzzling of dogs when running loose in the streets, and this was done because of the dread of hydrophobia. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, however, holds that muzzling a dog is no safeguard against the inoculation of hydrophobia unless the animal's mouth is closed tight by the muzzle, and such a practice is in itself productive of the disease.

It is for this reason that the Society as decided to do away with muzzl s entirely, and it more people than usual have been bitten by dogs of late it is the result of the new order of things.

The argument which the advocates of the reform use is this: They say that if the muzzle were a necessity, it would be right to use it even at the cost of inconvenience and suffering to the dogs. But since it is not necessary the use of a muzzle is in most cases a superfluous and gratuitous cruelty.

They say the muzzle is useless unless it keeps the dog's mouth shut. But if it does that it cruelly interferes with the perspiration of the animal, which exudes wholly from the mouth, and thus causes a fever, with intense nervousness, sometimes extending even to fits and other alarming symptoms, which often erroneously create the apprehension that the dog is suffering from hydrophobia, when, in fact, it is only tortured by the muzzle.

There are many nervous people, however, who do not believe in giving the dogs all the liberty which the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals sees fit to allow them, especially during these hot Summer days. Reports of mad-dog-shootings and of people being bitten by suspicious animals are alarmingly frequent, and not a few would be in favor of going back to the old custom of keeping the animals tightly muzzled during the dog days, if they are to be allowed to roam the streets in undisturbed freedom.

The latest report of this kind was made by the police this morning. The victim was Mary Cregan, an eight-year-old child, who lives at 127 East Broadway. She was playing last evening in front of 223 East Broadway, when a vicious dog ran up and pounced upon her, biting her severely in the right arm. The animal was pursued, but it escaped. The child was taken home, and is now a good subject for the Pasteur Institute.
