IS WHAT ITS NAME IMPLIES.

The Woman's Club Has Lived Up to Its Broad Title for More than a Quarter of a Century.

ALL THAT IS WOMANLY WELCOMED.

From a Modest Beginning It Has Steadily Grown in Membership and Influence for Good.

The women's clubs of this city are growing to be one of its distinctive features, and if they increase as rapidly in the next decade as they have in the past Brooklyn will soon excel Boston. Foremost among the clubs in this city stands the Woman's Club, an association which last May rounded out a quarter of a century of earnest work. All the members are women noted for earnestness of purpose, who have interested themselves in various philanthropical works since the formation of the club.

Early in May, in the year 1869, a little company of women met in the parlors of Mrs. Anna C. Fields, at No. 158 Hicks street, and there formed a little society which, as the constitution afterwards adopted sets forth, was for the improvement of its members, and the practical consideration of the important questions that grow out of the relations of the individual to society and the effect of existing institutions upon individual development. Mrs. Celia Burleigh was elected the first president of the little society thus formed, and Miss Lilla Kellogg was the secretary.

When the club was thoroughly organized a room in the Low building on Court street was secured and the meetings held there during that year. The following year rooms in the Mansfield Academy on Henry street were rented. Here the club met twice a month and discussed the questions of the day. One of the early rules of the club was that every member must express some opinion on any subject which might be brought up at a meeting.

The philanthropical spirit early manifested itself as it would be sure to do in a company of women devoted to thoughtful purposes. One of the first manifestations of this spirit was in the protection of the Brooklyn Woman's Union, which, while not directly under the protection of the Brooklyn Womans' Club, was a result of the spirit it fostered. As soon as a suitable house was secured for the union the Woman's Club rented parlors at Willoughby and Bridge streets. These rooms were used by this and various other women's associations until the Young Women's Christian Association opened its doors. Then the Woman's Club moved there and the parlors at the Willoughby street house were occupied by some of the other clubs which have sprung up.

The club to-day has a membership of over one hundred and fifty. The membership has been limited to 200 and there are more than enough applicants to fill the membership list. The influence of such an organization cannot but be helpful to the community, and many of the small associations which are doing so much to develop the Brooklyn women have been suggested by this association. Until recently the club maintained several free kindergartens, but this year they turned them over to the Kindergarten Association of Brooklyn. This year the work of the club will be principally literary.

Among the well-known women who are members of the Brooklyn Women's Club are Alice Morse Earle, Caroline B. Le Row and Margaret Welch, all women who have made their mark in the literary world. Miss Susan M. Barstow, the artist, is also a member.

The meetings of the club will be held on the second and fourth Mondays in each month, and are under the auspices of the committees into which the club is divided. They are the literary, music, economics, science, current topics, art, the home, education and hospitality. Each committee furnishes the programme for two of the meetings during the year. The officers for the year 1894-1895 are Mrs. Helen H. Backus, President; Mrs. Mariana W. Chapman and Mrs. Mary Louise Cathin, Vice-Presidents; Mrs. Elizabeth Porter, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Clementina S. Wing, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Olive W. Faris, Treasurer.
