

A weekly newspaper published at Dakota City, Nebraska. Permission has been granted for the transmission of this paper through the mails as second-class matter.

While the Herald was not awarded the contract for printing the delinquent tax list of Dakota county for the year 1910, we will print the balance of the county business the same as usual along with all the other news, while it is news. Our bid on the delinquent tax list was not the lowest, as we believe in charging the county the same for advertising matter as we would a private citizen—no more, no less. The proceedings of the board and other matters of news we will print anyway, as we always have, without charge.

Short Course in Sioux City

The Iowa State College of Agriculture will give a short course of instruction in farming and domestic science in Sioux City from January 17 to 22, inclusive. The course will be open not only to the men and women and boys and girls of northeastern Iowa, but to residents of northeastern Nebraska and southeastern South Dakota. The indications point to almost as many students from Nebraska and South Dakota as from Iowa.

The teachers in charge of this short course of instruction are specialists of national reputation and every farmer in this territory owes it to himself and to his wife and children to take advantage of the opportunity which will be afforded by their lectures and demonstrations. Prof. P. G. Holden, the greatest corn expert the United States has produced, will be on hand with his assistants to teach about corn and other grains. Prof. R. K. Bliss and Prof. George Godfrey will teach animal husbandry. Household Economics will be demonstrated by women teachers.

The latest devices in farm machinery will be on exhibition and the particular efficiency of every one of these will be demonstrated by experts.

Samples of the leading varieties of corn grown in this territory will be on display, and the methods of testing and storing seed corn will be explained.

The information thus taught is especially valuable to every farmer.

The scholarship fee for the Agricultural department of the course is $3, and for the Domestic Science course, $2.

SEIZURE OF LIQUOR MADE PEOPLE ANGRY

Officers Making Arrests Followed by Menacing Crowd.

GLANCE AT MAINE CONDITIONS

Rev. Mr. Pringle in Letter to the Sheriff Describes the Situation in Portland, One of the Large Cities.

The Portland Daily Argus, in its issue of Sept. 22 (1909), contained a news dispatch dated at Bangor, which is reproduced, heading and all, as follows:

RUM RIOT AT BANGOR WHEN STURGIS DEPUTIES MADE SEIZURE. WERE IN DANGER FROM ANGRY CROWD.

Bangor, Me., Sept. 21.—Five Sturgis deputies raided a saloon in Pickering square tonight, kept by Arthur M. and Frank S. Cox, and during the excitement Deputy Benjamin Towns of Waterville was assaulted by one of the proprietors.

After a brief fight both Coxes were handcuffed together and led through the streets to the police station followed by a crowd of 300, who hooted the deputies and hissed and started to throw missiles.

Sergeant Smith at the head of a squad of patrolmen, charged the crowd and the hostile demonstration stopped, but the mob stood in front of the city hall for fully half an hour, and only lacked a leader to work it into a wild riot against the enforcement commissioners who are here.

The Coxes were admitted to hall after being arraigned before a bail commissioner charged with assault.

Rev. Pringle's Letter.

Commenting upon other seizures of liquor, the Daily Argus says: "If these wholesale liquor seizures do not indicate that the liquor business flourishes in this town, we should like to know what they do indicate. Not only have we the facts themselves, but we have testimony which we suppose the Express will hardly care to question. This Rev. Mr. Pringle, who has just given a demonstration of the sort of 'enforcement' the local authorities have been putting up, will not be classed as a 'defender of the liquor traffic' even by the Express. What does Mr. Pringle say of the liquor business conditions as he found them in Portland? Why, in his letter to the sheriff a week ago he wrote: 'Last week, in your county and city I bought intoxicants by the case, jug, bottle and glass at hotel and express offices, on the premises, or delivered promptly on telephone request, or as it was peddled by the wagon load from house to house. The only place where I looked for liquor and failed to find it was where we went with a search warrant.' Here is evidence of a liquor business sufficiently wide open for practical purposes, that shows what prohibition in the chief city of the state amounts to. And this condition is not the result of any sudden change, as in Worcester, or the southern cities just placed under prohibition, but it follows upon half a century of prohibitory law and experience in the home state and home city of prohibition! These wholesale seizures are but an incident demonstrating conditions, the normal conditions in Portland. They do not indicate the ultimate triumph of law enforcement. They were made at the instance of an outsider, and the local authorities were simply compelled to act upon his information. The exposure made by him furnished another illustration of the force of prohibition in Cumberland county, as elsewhere in Maine. It has also brought about a spasm of enforcement, willy-nilly, by we may be sure that it is only a spasm. The influences that have been potent in the past for lax enforcement will be equally potent in the future. They are in temporary abeyance only. After the present hurry shall be over they will again be in evidence in undiminished force. So it always has been under prohibition, and so it always will be. Meantime, it is not strange that Bangor protests against the leniency extended toward Portland in spite of its liquor selling exhibit, when that city is singled out for concentrated Sturgis enforcement. No wonder the Bangor Commercial, after setting forth that exhibit, exclaims: 'And yet in spite of such facts as these the Sturgis commission sees fit to confine its efforts to Bangor, Lewiston and one or two other places and let Portland severely alone. When liquor can be so easily obtained it is hardly sufficient for the reply to be made that the local authorities are handling the situation.'"

Ed Simonson went to his home in Lake View, Iowa, last Wednesday, after helping his brother Paul, haul corn for some time.

Born, to Mr and Mrs Jens Jensen last Friday, Jan 7, a girl.
