S. A. Stinson
 Dakota City, Nebraska

SUNDAY MORNING BLAZE
 Dr. Stinson's Store and Old Liv-erty Barn Consumed.
 Another disastrous fire occurred in this place Saturday night, destroying the Dr. D. C. Stinson, store and the old J. E. Easton livery barn. The fire was discovered shortly after midnight by Del Sanford, who immediately alarmed the Bell telephone operator when an alarm was turned in and nearly all who had phones responded to the call. When the fire was first discovered it was located in the rear of the livery barn, but in a very few moments it had spread over the entire building, in a short time it was seen that the Dr. D. C. Stinson store was doomed, and an effort was made to remove the goods but before anything much could be removed that building, too was a mass of seething flames. Everything was so dry that it burned like tinder and in a few hours both buildings were a mere pile of ashes.
 The cause of the fire has not been determined. Some express the opinion that it was of incendiary origin, which seems hardly possible, as it would be hard to find anyone depraved enough to willfully start a fire that would endanger the whole town. Others think that it may have been started by careless boys or men who have been frequenting the place to sleep off a jug or to play cards and smoke cigarettes.
 The loss will amount to several thousand dollars, which is mostly on the Stinson store and stock which was only partly covered by insurance, a policy of $1,200 on the building and stock being carried by Mr. Stinson.
 The new chemical engine purchased by the village board was given a trial and was doing good work, until the fire got too hot for those who were handling it and in attempting to run it backwards one wheel came off and before it could be dragged out of reach of the fire the intense heat burned the paint off and destroyed fifty feet of hose which was attached to the engine.
 It was a lucky thing for the town that there was no wind to speak of at the time of the fire, or other buildings would have gone up in smoke. As it was it kept the fire fighters busy on the roofs across the street and on the Altman house directly west wetting the roofs and protecting them from the burning embers that fell from the cloud of smoke that rose from the burning buildings and floated off to the northwest.
 The store building was erected in 1871, by Geo. T. Westcott, who operated a general merchandise store there for several years. The barn was erected before that time, and being built of extra heavy lumber was still in a fairly good condition.

When is a Lake Not a Lake
 Special dispatch in World-Herald: Lincoln, Neb., April 27—Dan Geilus, game warden, has been a hunter and fisherman long enough so that he thinks he knows a lake when he sees one and that he can also identify a river.
 He returned from Dakota county today rather in doubt.
 Bud O'Del and Henry Kautson were arrested for using a rein in Jackson lake. While they denied the charge it appears that they were ready to plead guilty. However, County Judge Heffernan held that Jackson lake was a part of the Missouri river when the river was overflowing and that the setting had been done where the Nebraska lake did not apply. Jackson lake, it appears, is Jackson lake only when the river is low and there is a clear division of land between the two.
 Deputy Game Warden D. J. Connelly resigned his job after hearing this decision and Geilus came home disgusted.
