STAGE DOOR CHAPPIES
AS I HAVE KNOWN THEM
IN AMERICA AND ENGLAND.

By LADY FRANCIS HOPE, Known to the Stage as MAY YOHE.

(Written Exclusively for the Evening World.)

Certain Type of Chappie Is "Worse Than a Sick Headache," Says the Titled Soubrette.

Stage chappies are part of the theatrical profession. You find them in all parts of the world. Sometimes they are curious creatures. But so long as you have pretty women on the stage, so long will you have the chappies in front.

A pretty face behind the footlights always brings a train of admirers to its owner's feet.

The woman does not live who scoffs at admiration. But stage women must needs care upon whom they bestow their smiles.

ALL OVER THE WORLD.

As perhaps you know, I was once a member of the profession. In my time I met many men whom you would call "chappies." I met them not alone in New York, but in London, in Paris, in Melbourne; in fact, in all parts of the globe.

Naturally you inquire what has been my experience with so varied a class of men. I suppose I could tell you if I thought long enough, but it is so long ago that my brain refuses to go back. Even if I did I wouldn't tell you. It wouldn't be fair.

There is one class of chappies, however, that I want to tell you about. You meet him in every city large enough to support a theatre.

He is the "Johnny" or the "chap" that hangs around the stage door.

He is worse than a sick headache.

He is the worst ever.

He needs a guardian.

More, he needs a good spanking. Often I have wished I could give it to him.

No woman of the stage, no matter how humble her position, who has the slightest regard for her character will tolerate a stage door hanger-on.

MISGUIDED MISSES.

They have been the ruination of so many misguided misses who have forced themselves or been forced into the theatrical business.

Women of the stage necessarily meet an assortment of men. It requires a slight exercise of their brains to pick the decent from the bad, and I am sorry to say that so many err in their judgment.

The stage-door acquaintance has a baneful influence with women of the profession.

It leads to so many evils. It is the acknowledgment of admiration in the most polluted form. Through it many women of the stage have fallen.

No man, honorably inclined, hangs around a stage door to intercept actresses. It has been my experience, covering many years, that the gentlemen whose acquaintanceships are worthy of cultivation will not seek the stage door as a means of introduction. And once introduced they will shun meeting you there—for which I don't blame them.

POLITE DISCRETION.

The dicreet actress who wishes to dine with friends after a performance will drive with her maid in a carriage to the appointed place, thus avoiding the stage-door embarrassment. In this both man and woman show their regard for self-decency.

There is little difference between the stage chappies of England and those of America. It all depends, of course, on the men you meet.

In both countries you meet fine fellows, and also boresome cads. A trifle more generous some of them may be, here in New York, but again it is a question of man against man.

When I was but a mere girl I used to hate Englishmen.

And now look at what I have done!

Gone and married a Britisher, a sweet, lovely fellow. But I have still some of the dearest, loveliest friends among the chappies whom I met while I was on the stage.

They are my husband's friends now. They all know the Hope House in London and all are welcome whenever they are there. That proves, doesn't it, that you do meet truly good fellows sometimes through the stage?

But, as I said before, it requires the exercise of a little brain quality to pick out the right ones.

PLEASANT CHAPPIES.

I have nothing but pleasant memories of my American chappie friends. My only hope is that they will think as well of me, if I return to the stage, as they did before I left it.

Bless my soul, when I look back I shudder at the thought of time.

Here I find I have been married seven years and it won't be long before your little May Yohe will be an old woman.

That thought may not please that pest—the stage-door chappie. But then he has new ideas, one every time he sees a pretty face.

Poor fellow! Woman never was made to break his heart, so I don't expect to.

Well, here's to them all.

I drink their health.

I am off for my English home, with expectations of again greeting them from behind the footlights.

LADY FRANCIS HOPE.

James J. Corbett and "Spider" Kelly, his sparring partner, will appear in ring costume in a limited-round bout Saturday evening at B. O. Smith's Avoca Villa, Bath Beach, for the benefit of the Sick Babies' Fund. This will be a great feature of the show, but it will not be the only one, as there is a long list of volunteers, headed by Peter F. Dailey, Bonnie Thornton, Joe Welch, Kitty Mitchell, Dave Lewis, Carrie Graham, James Thornton, Hastings and Wright and Frank Manning.

The regular Avoca Villa vaudeville bill will also be included, with the following features: Julia Althea, songs; Wm. C. Held, comic songs; Lizzie Leonard, soubrette; Billy Distin, cornet solos; Rose Althea, dances; James Tenbrooke, comedian; Irma Le Promme, popular vocalist.

Thirty prominent ladies of Bath Beach have the event in hand. There will be a flower booth, and the magnificent grounds of Avoca Villa will be brilliantly illuminated and flags and bunting will be used profusely. Remember this big entertainment comes off Saturday night.

Iron Pier Benefit, Rockaway Beach.

The benefit given last Friday evening at L. A. Phillips's Iron Pier, Seaside Station, Rockaway Beach, netted $32.70 for The Evening World Sick Babies' Fund. The performance included little Katie Striffler, song, accompanied on the piano by little Lulu Phillips; Charles Howe, black-face comedian; little Sophie Garfunkel, violin solos; little Flossie Allen, pocket edition of Vesta Tilley; little Annabelle Marx, the wonderful child who dances on her toes; Marx and Weil, the clever children sketch artists; Kalmo, the character change artist; Gertie Gilson, sister of the only Lottie; Ruhe Hilton, king of the wheel; Marguerite Mayfield, the Girl with the Auburn Curl; Charles McAvoy, the old-time minstrel; Bobby Bryant, the funny tramp; Fred Wolcott, Brooklyn's favorite baritone; Howard and Emerson, in a comedy sketch, and John Walsh, the silver-tongued tenor of the Bostonians.

BLIND
2 YEARS—CURED.

I had cataracts on both eyes for nearly two years to that extent that I was practically blind. The best eye specialists considered my case incurable unless I submitted to a surgical operation, and even then it was doubtful. Dr. Wilson's treatment without the knife practically cured me in a few weeks. I can now read very fine print even without my glasses. I most heartily recommend Dr. Wilson's treatment to all who are afflicted with deafness or blindness. Given under my hand at 10 Fourth Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., this 14th day of July, 1900.—MRS. KATE MARA. We have the exclusive right to use Dr. Wilson's treatment, which gives hearing and speech to deaf mutes and positively cures every variety of deafness. Also prevents and cures blindness by mild measures and without the use of the knife. Particulars with regard to either difficulty sent free on application. Consultation and examination free. Office hours, week days, 10 to 4. Sundays and holidays, 10 to 12. Wednesday and Friday evenings, 7 to 8. Greatly reduced rates.
