FATAL HALF-HOUR

UNACCOUNTED FOR IN THE ALIBI OF MURDERED KATIE SCHARN'S BROTHER

MAY SOLVE MYSTERY

The Scharn Murder Case Taxing the Skill and Ingenuity of the Entire Detective Force to the Utmost--Many Suspicious Facts Unexplained by the Girl's Brother--Strange Interest in Julia Lang by the Police, Who Have Secreted Her--Price, the Lover, Thinks a Jealous Woman the Murderer.

The police believe that the half hour unaccounted for in the alibi of Fred Scharn, brother of Katie Scharn, the murdered factory girl, holds the solution of the great mystery.

Chief of Police Devery has taken personal charge of the investigation. All the detectives and policemen at work on the case are receiving instructions direct from him. He has visited the scene of the crime and personally talked with all connected with it.

"It is the most baffling murder mystery the police have had to do with in recent years," the Chief said to an Evening World reporter this afternoon. "But we are pursuing every possible clue and I feel sure that it will not be many hours before the mystery is cleared away and the brutal murderer of this young factory girl is in custody—IF HE IS NOT IN CUSTODY ALREADY," was the significant ending of the Chief's statement.

"Do you think it possible, then, that her young brother hammered out her brains and strangled her to death?" asked the reporter. The Chief refused to discuss the murder further.

Money found on the boy when he was first locked up, it is now thought by the police, may have been stolen from the murdered girl.

An important development to-day was the discovery that the watch pawned by young Scharn was stolen by him from Mrs. Kehoe, who occupies the adjoining apartments.

The police are convinced that many of the statements made by the brother since the murder were lies. Police Inspector Harley says he is satisfied that "if young Scharn did not himself murder his sister the lad iknows who did kill her."

The man in blue, who has been searched for for two days, turns out to be a myth. No man accompanied Katie Scharn on her shopping tour Saturday afternoon. Fannie Burke, a shopmate, was with her at Bloomingdale's and other stores, and when they parted in the afternoon Katie Scharn said she was going home.

So far as the police are able to discover, there was no man with the girl that afternoon or evening and there is absolutely no evidence that she was not alive and alone in her flat when her brother Frederick returned there from visiting his sweetheart shortly after midnight.

Julia Lang, another of Katie Scharn's factory girl chums, is one of the many mysteries connected with the crime. The police are evidently convinced that she knows something about it. Detectives took her from her home yesterday afternoon and her family says that she has not returned.

The police will not talk about her. It was learned from her mother to-day that Miss Lang intended visiting Katie Scharn on the night of the murder. She left her home in the evening and did not return until late. Her mother thinks she went to Coney Island.

The police declare to-day that there is an unaccounted for half hour in the alibi which Frederick Scharn is trying to establish to clear himself of the suspicion that he murdered his sister Kate in their apartments, 674 Second avenue, on Saturday night.

This half hour takes in the time when he should have reached home from the Kubin home, where his sweetheart lives, in the Bronx, and the time when he told druggist Tyler of the tragedy.

They profess to think little of the surgeon's statement that the girl had been dead two hours : 1.30 o'clock. The nature of her injuries would cause the stiffening of the body quicker than any other cause.

MONEY SCHARN HAD.

Police Inspector Harley to-day ascertained that when young Scharn was taken into custody soon after the murder was discovered, the police, in searching him, found several dollars in his pocket. He told them it was part of the wages paid him the day before at Kranich & Bach's piano factory.

Now that it is known that the boy was discharged nearly two months ago, and that he has not only earned [illegible] since, but has been living off the charity of his sister, the police are wondering where the money came from.

"Katie Scharn drew her week's wages a few hours before she was murdered," Inspector Harley said this afternoon. "She spent part of this while shopping Saturday afternoon, and must have had nearly $5 when she got home. Not a cent was found on her murdered body. Her money had been stolen, presumably by the murderer.

HARLEY'S DEDUCTION.

"Now her young brother was in such a plight that he could not even get a suit of clothes on which he had made part payment. He had stolen a watch and pawned it and spent the money. If it should develop that he killed his sister, I am certain that he also robbed her, and that it was part of her wages, stolen from her just before or immediately after the murder, that was found on her young brother."

Emanuel ... Friend, counsel for Scharn, obtained a writ of habeas corpus this morning from Justice Fitzgerald for the production of Scharn in the Supreme Court to-morrow morning at 10.30 o'clock, with a view to obtaining the boy's release. Justice Fitzgerald also granted a writ of certiorari directing Coroner E. T. Fitzpatrick to produce all the documents connected with the commitment of Scharn to the Tombs.

SCHARN STOLE THE WATCH.

Another important development was the discovery by the police that young Frederick Scharn, whom they suspect of murdering his sister, is a burglar.

It came out in investigating the pawning of a watch with Bruckmeyer, a Third avenue pawnbroker, on Aug. 1.

In searching the Scharn flat immediately after the murder the police found in the private box belonging to young Scharn a pawn ticket for a watch. The box was on the mantle in the boy's bedroom.

They got the watch from Bruck-

FACTS AGAINST YOUNG SCHARN.

He knew the location of the hammer.

He discovered the body.

He ran three blocks past policemen to inform Druggist Tyler.

He has been vague and deceiving in information about his life.

He has been out of work for two months and lived on his sister's charity.

He ordered a suit of clothes, for which he could not pay. His sister refused to give him the money to get them.

He stole Mrs. Kehoe's watch. He was positively identified by the pawnbrokers to whom he gave the watch as security.

AMERICAN WOMEN SNUBBED IN FRANCE.

French Government Refused the Legion of Honor Cross to Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Daniel Manning.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—The Paris edition of the New York Times says that over ninety applications for the decoration of the Legion of Honor have been made by the American Commission, which is twice as many as handed in by any other foreign Commission.

A list was furnished to the French authorities on their invitation that each foreign Commissioner recommend such members of his staff as he deemed worthy of the Cross.

Mr. Peck's list included Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Daniel Manning and Michael H. De Young, from the National Commissioners; the directors of the various United States Sections and their assistants and most of the important American exhibitors. The applications for Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Manning were refused.

In this conection the Paris edition of the Times says:

"Either it is a measure of precaution, in view of the jealous uproar it would make among French women of note who have been denied the honor, or perhaps it is owing to certain social rivalries."

HE TRIED TO JUMP BRIDGE.

Young Man's Desperate Struggle to Make the Plunge—Arrested.

William Van Lynts, twenty-eight years old, who lives at Mills Hotel No. 1, was arrested this afternoon for attempting to jump from the Brooklyn Bridge.

Van Lynts, who was well dressed, secured a ride from a truckman going to Brooklyn.

He sat quietly on the tail piece until the middle of the bridge was reached, when suddenly he sprang to the roadway and began clambering up the railing.

The truckman, happening to glance around, saw him and shouted.

A policeman saw him at the same time, as did the drivers of several other vehicles.

With a common impulse they all shouted, and leaving the trucks, ran for him.

The policeman and two of the others grabbed him as he had reached the top of the railing and was about to leap into the river.

He struggled desperately in the grasp of his captors and his clothing was torn, but he was finally overpowered and placed under arrest.
