The Fremont Journal.

Tenth Thousand of Ned Nevins.—Chance for Disabled Soldiers. The tenth thousand of Mr. Morgan's book, "Ned Nevins, the Newsboy; or, Street Life in Boston," is already issued, and orders have been given for the fifteenth thousand. They are printed and sold at the rate of over a thousand a week. Rand & Avery, Printers, No. 3 Cornhill, will attest the fact. Two of their power presses are kept continually at work on the book. Agents are reaping a harvest by it, realizing 100 per cent. profit. Dudley S. Jones, of Ellsworth, Maine, writes that of the first lot he sold a copy at almost every house, and expects to sell 200 in the town. W. H. Bennett, of Fall River, Mass., sold 120 copies in that town, and expects to sell 500 in the county. Disabled soldiers, and others, find it the best book published for canvassing. Even children have been known to clear $5 a day. Canvassers are multiplying daily, at the present rate of increase, demands for the book will soon reach 2000 a week. Agents wishing to secure good territory, should apply at once to Rev. Henry Morgan, 9 Groton street, Boston, Mass.

Pastures.

A writer for the Prairie Farmer, who has been in Illinois fifteen years, protests against breaking up land intended for pasture. He would have tight floors and mangers for saving hay seed, which should be sown upon the land, or hay may be fed upon the unplowed pasture. Judiciously managed in this way, the pasture will soon be found to be mostly in tame grass.

TO PROTECT SHEEP FROM DOGS.

If sheep are kept in the same lot with cows or fat cattle, no dog will disturb them. As soon as the dogs approach the sheep they run to the cattle who drive off the dogs. A farmer for thirty years, in Shelby county, by adopting this plan never lost a sheep by dogs, although in the same night the same dogs killed sheep in the farms north and south of him.—Rural Gentleman.

Our Drinks.

Green tea, black tea, coffee, chocolate, milk and cold water.

Green tea—yellow skins, "all gone" stomachs, shaky nerves, irritable temper. All women fifty years old, who have habitually drank strong tea, show the same skin, teeth and nerves.

Black tea is better, but chargeable with the same effects in a milder form.

Coffee produces congestion of the brain, palpitation and indigestion; but in the long run is less mischievous than either green or black tea.

Chocolate is better, but tends to sluggishness of stomach and liver.

Milk is still better but must be used in moderation, or general dulness, with liver torpidity, will ensue. Milk-drinking with our food is a mischievous practice. Biliousness and constipation are common results.

Cold water is an excellent drink. I recommend it for persons of both sexes, of all ages, for the sick and well, for the weak and strong.—Dio Lewis.

How to Keep Silk.

Silk articles should not be kept folded in white paper, as the chloride of lime used in bleaching the paper will probably impair the color of the silk. Brown or blue paper is better; the yellowish, smooth India paper is best of all. Silks intended for dress should not be kept long in the house before they are made up, as lying in the folds will have a tendency to impart its durability by causing it to crib, particularly if the silk has been thickened by gum. Thread lace vails are very easily cut. But dresses of velvet should not be laid by with any weight above them; if the nap of a thin velvet is laid down, it is not possible to raise it up again. Hard silk should never be wrinkled, because the thread is easily broken in the crease, and it can never be rectified. The way to take the wrinkles out of silk scarfs and handkerchiefs is to moisten the surface evenly with a sponge and some weak glue, and then pin the silk with some toilet pins on a matress or feather bed, taking pains to draw out the silk as tight as possible. When dry, the wrinkles will have disappeared. The reason of this is obvious to every person. Some silk articles should be moistened with weak glue or gum water, and the wrinkles ironed out by a hot flat-iron on the wrong side.—Leisure Hour.

The Currant.

Compared with its value and the number of uses to which it is applied, the currant is a neglected fruit. "The first correct record we have of the currant as a fruit under cultivation was about A. D. 1600; but once introduced it increased rapidly in favor, and growing so readily from cuttings or shoots, it was found in the garden of every stranger.

Every owner of a lot plants a few currant bushes, and as a rule every owner of a lot neglects their cultivation. Usually they are given a position as close to the side of a fence as possible, and if they grow and produce fruit in abundance, all very well; if they do not fruit abundantly, the owner remarks that currants do not seem to do in my garden.

No other fruit-bearing plant in the whole list fruits so well or endures so many years under complete neglect as the currant; and we believe no other fruit has in itself valuable qualities for so many uses as the currant. It thrives in any soil—shade or sunshine, and if planted in varied exposures may be had in eating for over two months. As a dessert fruit it is cooling and grateful to the stomach, ornamental and attractive on the table, valuable for its medicinal qualities—being used to allay thirst in febrile complaints, to lessen an increased secretion of bile, to correct a putrid and scorbutic state of the fluids, to strengthen the stomach and excite appetite. It is used for tarts and pies when green, and can be kept fresh for years in bottles. Ripe, it is not only used as dessert, but is made into jellies and wines, and can be distilled into brandy.

As a crop for market planted four by four feet, the currant yields from one hundred and fifty to two hundred bushels to the acre; if sold in market, usually brings about two dollars a bushel. Made into wine and the products sold at two dollars a gallon, it has returned over $600 to the acre.—Ohio Farmer.

☞ A young lady returning to her country home, after a sojourn of a few months in the city, was hardly recognized by her friends. In place of a coarse, ruddy flushed face, she had a soft ruby complexion of almost marble smoothness, and instead of twenty-three she really appeared but eighteen.—Upon inquiry as to the cause of so great a change, she plainly told them that she used the Circassian Balm, and considered it an invaluable acquisition to any Lady's toilet. By its use any Lady or Gentleman can improve their personal appearance an hundred fold. It is simple in its combination, as nature herself is simple, yet unsurpassed in its efficacy in drawing impurities from, also healing, cleansing and beautifying the skin and complexion. By its direct action on the cuticle it draws from it all the impurities, kindly healing the same, and leaving the surface as nature intended it should be, clear, soft, smooth and beautiful.
