SCHOOL DISCIPLINE.

BY C. T. WRIGHT.

Written for the Democratic Advocate.

In venturing another article upon this subject I shall take it for granted that teachers and others interested have perused my former one, and remember the points which were presented. The first thought that occurs now is to make a few inquiries of those who are preparing to enter the list of teachers.

Have you, before deciding to teach, given serious thought to the nature of the labor upon which you purpose to enter? Do you fully realize the magnitude of the responsibility you are about to assume? Are you seeking for an opportunity to do what you think to be a useful and noble work, or are you simply desirous of a place where you can dispose of your surplus time, and legally make a little extra pocket money?

A proper sense of justice recognizes the right of the teacher to make his living and a little over by his profession, but I have never known a man or woman, whose highest motive was pastime or money alone, to be a good teacher. Such have no soul in their work, and soul, after all, is the best, highest, grandest motive power in life.

Some people think that teachers and preachers ought to "work for nothing and board nowhere." I think the teacher should work for duty, for humanity, for God, and take his wages because he has earned them fully and faithfully, and because he, with all others, has an equal right to comfort and a competency.

Are you prepared to endure undismayed and unmoved the uncharitable and detrimental criticisms of those who condemn you and your methods without investigation, without discrimination, without justice?

Do you understand the philosophy of what Franklin calls "stooping?" Not in a cringing, obsequious, cowardly spirit, but manfully and gracefully bending to meet the just demands of your profession and the exigencies of the hour, remembering that "a wise man adapts his measures to his exigencies," and thus becomes the master of circumstances, which would otherwise render him subservient to their requirements.

The teacher who cannot, when occasion demands, step out of the cloak of unbending dignity with which he too often envelops himself, is neither graceful nor wise, and before he attempts the difficult task of governing, he should apply himself very diligently to the study of human nature. A teacher's progress and usefulness ends just where self-satisfaction and self-conceit begin. Inordinate self-conceit is disagreeable in any one, but in a teacher it is simply pitiable, if not despicable. What do we know if we spend a lifetime in the severest study and the most searching investigation? Only the extremely ignorant think they are wise, for they have never formed a conception of anything beyond the narrowed circle of their own vision. I remember a few years ago of traveling by rail across a range of mountains. As the train moved on I glanced ahead from the window, and right in front of the laboring engine there seemed to rise an unpierceable wall of rock; nothing could be seen beyond it; the track was to all appearance closed by this impregnable barrier; but suddenly the train shot onward, the frowning gateway was opened, and far ahead the winding and graceful curves beckoned us forward to interminable scenes of beauty and grandeur. "How true," I thought, "of life. we must pierce the dense wall of ignorance before us before we can see the splendor of the great unexplored world beyond." A certificate or diploma, strange to say, frequently becomes this barrier to the progress of the young man or woman who contemplates teaching. Having barely "squeezed" through the examination, the worthless piece of paper or parchment is flaunted in the face of all concerned, or unconcerned, as an evidence of superior culture, or even of perfection, after which the blissful and accomplished (?) recipient settles down in happy unconsciousness of anything more to learn. From this slight diversion I will return to the subject of my article. I was once asked by a gentleman to take charge of his school for a few days in his absence. Upon arriving at the school I found a young lady assistant in charge, who proved to be an element of positive weakness in the discipline of the pupils, because she possessed not the slightest particle of self-command, nor did she appear to have the faintest conception of womanly dignity. I have often wondered since, when I so frequently hear of the failure of young ladies to succeed in school government, whether their failures are attributable to the lack of those qualities that constitute firm, dignified, self-reliant womanhood. Young ladies will never be competent to secure and maintain the decorum of the schoolroom until they give more attention to the cultivation of those quiet, modest and intellectual graces so beautiful in every woman's life, and so potent to win and retain respect, and depend less upon the display of those forward, superficial accomplishments that become useless, and positively injurious, in the hour of trial and responsibility. The pupil who cannot pierce at a glance the flimsy texture of such shallow-brained womanhood, and see that the would-be teacher sadly needs teaching in the first rudiments of substantial character, must possess an obtuse intellect indeed. I do not desire to discriminate here in favor of young men, for they, as well as young women, too frequently form but a shallow conception of the grave nature of the teacher's profession. They often look upon their work as ordinary, irksome; become careless, teach stupidly, lose the respect and control of their pupils, and receive from their trustees or directors at the end of the term the complimentary and inspiring notice that they are not wanted any longer. This should not be. This cannot be, and the teaching profession escape the stigma of incompetency and inutility.

In my next I desire to dwell upon the importance of a correct interpretation of laws and rules in the discipline of truth.

Advice to a Boy.

If you take up a trade push it to perfection. As an apprentice be prepared for many unpleasant things. To begin at the foot means more or less drudgery. Your inexperience will provoke ridicule, contempt and sometimes abuse. Because you are a boy any man in the shop may feel free to order you about. Be obstinate, sulky and dilatory and none of them will care how long it takes you to reach a higher round in the ladder. Be cheerful, obliging and civil and you will find every man ready and willing to speak a good word for you and help along your skill.

When you have become a finished workman bear in mind the well-worn but truthful maxim that a rolling stone gathers no moss. Steady work at fair wages is what piles up the dollars. A large share of our workingmen are ever ready to listen to the glowing accounts of the high wages paid somewhere else, and they spend a good portion of the year looking for the place. Next to being settled in your mind be economical. One of the chief causes for dissatisfaction among mechanics and laborers springs from the lack of good management and the fact that so many of them are spendthrifts. In every city in the land a large proportion of workingmen chew or smoke or drink. Their tobacco injures the system and robs the wallet. Drinks could better be replaced by cold water. Two dollars per week are taken to maintain injurious and selfish habits, and yet those who squander the most are loudest in their complaints about hard times.

SCHROEDER'S IRON TONIC and BLOOD PURIFIER,

The only Iron medicine in which the virtue of the iron is not destroyed by being oxydized (rusted). Try this great Iron cure; 50 cts. Read what physicians of large experience, and graduates of the Maryland University, say of it:—

Dr. J. W. Steele, of Freedom, Carroll co., Md., has been in active practice 28 years, says, that in the past four years he has prescribed Schroeder's Iron Tonic and Blood Purifier freely in his practice, and found it unsurpassed in anemia, general debility, indigestion, want of appetite, lack of energy, retention and non-retention of urine.

Female weakness of all kinds, impure blood, malaria, chills and fevers, and, in fact, all cases requiring an Iron Tonic, unhesitatingly recommend it as the best.

Dr. Wm. M. Hines, of Freedom, Carroll county, Md., has been practicing medicine for 38 years, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending to the profession and intelligent public Schroeder's Iron Tonic."

Dr. E. F. Shorb, of Littlestown, Adams county, Pa., has practiced medicine for 38 years, and says: "I have been selling a considerable quantity of your Iron Tonic and Blood Purifier at my drug store, and it has gained a good reputation as a tonic, and its sales are increasing daily. I have also used it in my practice in nervous debility, weakness, etc., with marked success, and have no hesitancy in recommending it to the profession and public."

One bottle will convince you of its great merit. At druggists and country stores. Wholesale Depot—
