Miscellaneous.

The Destiny of Man.

If we look around us, we perceive one vast union, in which no one can work for himself without working for others; or for others without working for himself; since the progress of one member is the happy progress of all, a glimpse of truth that, by the harmony which we see in the midst of variety, elevates the soul, and becomes to it a power and a blessing. Still more so when a man comes to regard himself as a necessary member of this great union. The feeling of our dignity and power grow strong when we say to ourselves:

"My existence is not aimless and in vain. I am a necessary link in the great chain, which, from the full development of consciousness in the first man, stretches forward into eternity. All the great, good and wise among mankind, all the benefactors of the human race, whose names I find noted in the history of the world and the much greater number whose good deeds have outlived their names all these have labored for me: I have entered into their fair harvest on this fair earth, which they inhabited. I follow in their footsteps, spreading blessings. I can undertake the solemn task they undertook, that of making our common brotherhood wiser and happier. I can build on where they were forced to cease. I can bring nearer to perfection that magnificent temple which they left unfinished. But even as they, I, too, must leave it and go hence—oh, this is the sublimest thought of all! I can never finish the sublime task I have undertaken therefore, so sure as this task is my destiny, I can never cease to work, and consequently never cease to be. That which men call death cannot break up this work which is never ending, consequently no limit is set to my existence. I am eternal. I lift my head boldly to the threatening mountain-peaks, to the sounding cataracts, and to the driving storm-clouds swimming in a sea of fire, and say, 'I am eternal—I defy your power! Break, break over me! And Earth and Heaven, mingle yourselves in the tumult! My will alone, with its firm purpose, shall float bold and triumphant over the ruins of the universe, for I have comprehended my destiny, and it is more durable than ye. It is eternal, and I also am eternal!'

Don't Stay Long.

"Don't stay long, husband!" said a young bride tenderly in my presence one evening, as her husband was preparing to go out. The words themselves were insignificant, but the look of melting fondness with which they were accompanied spoke volumes. It told the whole vast depth of woman's love—of her grief when the light of his smile, the source of all her joy, beamed not brightly upon her.

"Don't stay long, husband!' and I fancied I saw the loving, gentle wife sitting alone, anxiously counting the moments of her husband's absence, every few minutes running to the door to see if he was not in sight, and finding that he was not, I thought I could hear her exclaiming, in disappointed tones, 'not yet.'

"Dont stay long husband?' and I again thought I could see the young wife rocking nervously in her great armchair, and weeping as though her heart would break, as her thoughtless 'lord and master' prolonged his stay to a wearisome length of time.

Oh you that have wives to say 'Don't stay long,' when you go forth think of them kindly when you are mingling in the busy hive of life, and try just a little to make their homes and hearts happy, for they are gems too seldom replaced. You cannot find amid the pleasures of the world the peace and joy that a quiet home, blessed with such a woman's presence, will afford.

"Don't stay long, husband!" and the young wife's look seemed to say for here in your own sweet home is a loving heart whose music is hushed when you are absent—here is a soft breast to lay your weary head upon, and here pure lips, unsoiled by sin, that will pay you kisses for coming back so soon.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

TESTIMONIALS:

The Waters Pianos are known as among the very best.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters Pianos from personal knowledge as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

We have one of Mr. Waters' Pianos now in our residence, (where it has stood for years,) of which any manufacturer in the world might well be proud. We have always been delighted with it as a sweet toned and powerful instrument, and there is no doubt of its durability; more than this, some of the best amateur players in the city, as well as several celebrated pianists, have performed on the said piano, and all pronounce it a superior and first class instrument.—Stronger indorsement we could not give.—Home Journal.
