PLATT SNORED WHILE TOASTED

Heeded Not the Wine Nor Eloquence at Hanna's Banquet.

GOV. ROOSEVELT SNUBBED.

Invitation Sent After All Trains Had Left Oyster Bay.

Senator Thomas C. Platt snored complacently at the Hanna dinner last night.

The Union League Club gave the banquet at which the "Easy Boss" utilized the time between courses in regaining sleep lost in the campaign. It was intended primarily as a feast to Senator Marcus A. Hanna, Governor-elect B. B. Odell and the members of the Advisory Committee of the Republican National Committee.

Among the distinguished guests to whom an opportunity was given to listen to the triumphant nasal cadence of the senior Senator from New York were Ex-Secretary of War Russell A. Alger, of Michigan; Senator John C. Spooner, of Wisconsin; Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Mr. Plunkitt, of Massachusetts; Senator Hanna, Senator N. B. Scott, Frederick S. Gibbs and Frederick D. Tappan, President of the club.

Afraid of Waking Platt.

All the guests were men who had reason to be jubilant over the result of Tuesday's election, and there would have been a marked air of hilarity about the banquet table from first to last—but all the guests were afraid to wake Senator Platt.

So the meal was a silent one, and through it all the great Republican "boss" of the Empire State, who intends to give Greater New York a bucolic police force, slept soundly.

Recently Senator Platt has acquired the habit of utilizing in sleep time wasted at public banquets under ordinary conditions.

Senator Platt went to sleep at the dinner at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on the night of the Roosevelt demonstration two weeks ago. He was asleep in his chair when Senator Scott gave his enthusiastic indorsement of the Standard Oil Trust, and he was asleep last night all the time that Senator Hanna was explaining the policies he will have President McKinley carry out in the next four years.

Say He Is Still Lively.

Friends of Senator Platt indignantly deny that the physical condition of the "boss" need alarm solicitous inquirers. They say that Senator Platt is merely training for the proper discharge of his duties as a Senator of the United States when Congress convenes in December. Somnolency is regarded as an attribute of statesmanship in Washington.

Hanna Snubs Roosevelt.

Gov. Roosevelt was telegraphed for at such a late hour that his acceptance was impossible.

The tardiness of the Roosevelt invitation is attributed to the fact that the Governor is not agreeable to Senator Hanna. It is said that the strenuous Vice-President-Elect grates on the Ohio Senator's nerves so badly that Mr. Hanna has frequently declared that he cannot enjoy himself in Gov. Roosevelt's society.

It is a matter of record that Senator Hanna took great delight in giving Gov. Roosevelt a campaign itinerary that would have killed an ordinary person. The latest manifestation of his hostility is the eloquent silence which he has maintained in the face of the Governor's elaborate telegram of congratulation the day after election.

Though too ill in the morning to see reporters regarding The World's Ice Trust revelations, Mr. Odell hurried to the city on a receipt of a telegram from Hanna.

GUESTS AT BIG BAZAAR.

Woman Suffragists to Honor Pioneers in Their Ranks.

On the opening night of the bazaar of the National American Woman Suffrage Association at Madison Square Garden a reception will be tendered Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, Mary A. Livermore and Julia Ward Howe.

These women, whose names are synonomous with the progress of woman suffrage for fifty years, although octogenarians, are still intensely interested in all that applies to the advancement of women, and their presence at the fair will mean much that is apropo to the event and afford the public a chance to meet them.

MRS. ALVORD SEEKS RELIEF.

Defaulting Bank Teller's Wife Is Tired of Deputy Sheriff.

Mrs. Jennie Alvord, wife of Cornelius L. Alvord, jr., the man who stole $600,000 from the First National Bank, is tired of having deputy sheriffs overrun her home in Mount Vernon and will apply to the Supreme Court for relief.

When Alvord, the defaulting note teller, was caught the bank's officers got an attachment against the furnishings of his home at 227 Summit avenue.

A sheriff's jury decided that this property, valued at $5,000, was Mrs. Alvord's, but as yet deputies are on guard over it.

Mrs. Alvord has seen her husband but once since his arrest. She appears to have plenty of money.

Edward Rose and Willis Steell in Literary Partnership.

Edward E. Rose and Willis Steell, who made a play for Marie Burroughs from the novel "The Battle of the Strong," have worked together so successfully in this piece that they have formed a literary partnership and will soon produce other plays.

Mr. Rose is the dramatizer of "Richard Carvel," "David Harum" and "Janice Meredith." Mr. Steell is the author of "A Jiklet of the People," "The Kindergarten" and "The Debutante," all of which have had New York productions.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisement which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Adv.

LORD BOWYER DIVORCED FROM AMERICAN WIFE.

LADY BOWYER, FORMERLY ETHEL HAWKINS.

As Ethel Acklow She Was a Reigning Beauty Here and in London.

New York's theatrical colony read with interest to-day the announcement of the divorce granted in London to Sir George Henry Bowyer, baronet, from his beautiful American wife. In New York she was known as Ethel Hawkins. Her sister, Evelyn Hawkins, a chorus girl, and her brother, Dal Hawkins, the pugilist, are widely known here. Evelyn and her sister went by the name of Acklow after they left the Arizona mining camp where they were born.

Ethel Acklow, aware of her beauty and the sway she might have, came to New York and joined her sister. Her popularity here among the young millionaires was instantaneous. Later her father came here and subsequently went to London with Ethel. There the people knew them as the American mining king and his beautiful daughter, the heiress.

Ethel Acklow was at once recognized as a reigning beauty. She rode a thoroughbred and was a figure in the parks and Rotten Row. Papa Hawkins remained in the background except on special occasions.

But with all of their trotting in her train none of the gallants caught up with her. She dismissed their suits, accepted their handsome presents and made "brothers" and "dear friends" of them all. "She's such a jolly good fellow," they said.

Then Sir George Bowyer saw the haughty beauty. He was a sporting baronet. He was told that his suit would fail; that his divinity was cold as marble, but with speculative instinct he took a chance, and won. At twenty-three Ethel Acklow was Lady Bowyer, and Papa Hawkins left London to go back home.

As Lady Bowyer she was courted by the men and avoided by the women who had not beauty such as hers. She was the worshipped divinity of her husband's particular set. Brother Dal visited London on "professional business" at the National Sporting Club, but he was not entertained at the Bowyer mansion.

Lady Bowyer's reign was brief. She chose to flee with Carey Johnstone, cousin and private secretary to the Duke of Manchester, who came here early in the year as a prospective Klondiker.

In San Francisco Johnstone was served with papers naming him as co-respondent in Sir George's divorce suit.

NEW FASHIONS SET BY WALES

Wears Eyeglasses and Doesn't Dock His Horses' Tails.

YOU'D HARDLY KNOW HIM.

Great Change in Royal Countenance Made by His Eye Helpers.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Two matters are agitating social circles just now. One is the fact that the Prince of Wales has taken to wearing eyeglasses, and the other that he has ceased to dock his horses' tails.

The eyeglasses make a startling change in the appearance of the Prince. He has long enjoyed good eyesight, but now, on the advice of an eminent oculist, he has had recourse to this fashionable form of spectacles. They are selected from the best obtainable lenses, are framed in tortoise shell and form an altogether elaborate addition to the royal countenance.

Those who have long agitated against the docking of horses' tails have won a great victory. The Queen, in sending out an order that none of her horses be treated in that way, also announced that she had persuaded the Prince of Wales to follow her example.

With royalty taking up such a vigorous stand it is likely that the docked horse will soon be as rare in London as full-tailed horses are at present. There is no doubt that the fashion so set will soon spread to New York.

Holy Trinity Church (situated close to the Tower of London), in which is the tomb of one of Washington's ancestors, bearing a coat-of-arms which is supposed to be the origin of the Stars and Stripes, is threatened with destruction unless £200 is subscribed for its repair.

What makes the church of interest to Americans is the tablet erected to the memory of Col. Legge, who married Eliza Washington, who died in 1670, surmounted by the Washington arms, consisting of five alternating bars of red and white, above which are five-pointed red stars. These, it is said, suggested to George Washington the American national flag.

The latest discovery of successful American enterprise in England is in the boot and shoe trade. Daily the American article is gaining headway. One agent, after three years' work, got 1,200 large customers, his turn-over this year amounting to many thousands of pounds.

The widow of Capt. Mine Ree, U. S. A., author of the "Rifle Rangers," "Scalp Hunters," &c., has been discovered in a poverty-stricken condition in spite of the popularity his novels once achieved. The widow is a daughter of Mr. George Hyde, who claimed to be related to the first Earl of Clarendon.

Masquerade Ball To-Night.

The annual masquerade bayy of the Tutti Frutti Club, of Harlem, will be held to-night at Sulzer's Music Hall, One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street and Second avenue.

HEALTH MAKES HAPPY HOMES

Make Yourself and Your Children Well

GOOD for yourself—good for your wife—good for your babies. Dr. Greene gives it to his children. It is the best remedy without question to tone up and invigorate the whole system; strengthening the stomach in its action; soothing and becalming the nerves, making them act as they ought. It is perfectly safe to give to the family: made of nothing but the best herbs that grow, without a trace of mineral or injurious ingredient.

Dr. Greene's Nervura FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

Don't be afraid of it. If you want a good family medicine that will make them all feel well and robust—eat hearty and sleep well—give them Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Mrs. CORA BIGELOW, East Northfield, Mass., says:

"A year ago last summer I was sick with inflammation of the bladder. I had been troubled in this way for three years. I suffered untold agonies a great deal of the time and was obliged to lie in bed most of the time I doctored for the disease. At length an old friend of mine advised me to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which I did. I had got so that I could not sleep at night, nor be still days, I suffered so. I got a bottle of the Nervura and took a dose before retiring and I felt the good results from it, sleeping as sweetly and soundly as I ever did. From that day I continued its use until I had used two bottles, and it entirely cured me. I have given it to my child who was sick and nervous from teething and it cured her. I think the child was in a fair way to have St. Vitus' Dance. I have often recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura, and should be glad to answer any further inquiries about it. I think that if I had not taken it I should have gone crazy, and might, in time, have caused my death. I cannot speak in too high praise of the Nervura and I wish this published for the good of others."

Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He has remedies for all forms of disease, and offers to give free consultation and advice, personally or by letter. You can tell or write your troubles to Dr. Greene, for all communications are confidential, and letters are answered in plain, sealed envelopes.

EDNA MAY CRIED FOR A BUTCHER

Hears of Walter Jigge'ns Suicide as She Sails for America.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Overcome with grief at news of the suicide of Walter Jiggens, one of her latest and most ardent admirers, Edna May, the actress, sailed yesterday for this country on the New York, to fulfill a contract with the Frohmans. She was accompanied by Mabel Powers.

Every precaution had been taken to keep the news from her, but in bidding her farewell at the London station one of her friends blurted out the truth. Miss May nearly swooned and was led to the train in a state of collapse.

Jiggens was a young man in the meat commission business in Central Market. He had an income of $10,000 a year and was received into the most exclusive society by virtue of his honest ways and queer name.

Last Sunday his body was found at Margate by a fisherman and was claimed just in time to prevent its burial in Potter's Field.

There are several reasons advanced for Jiggens's suicide among his friends. One is that he was heartbroken at Miss May's departure. Miss May herself regarded him, it is said, in the light of a devoted friend. He was a frequent visitor at her house in St. John's Wood.

The Duke of Manchester said that he couldn't imagine why Jiggens had killed himself and sincerely regretted the deed.

MRS. RUSSELL DIVORCED.

She Called Marriage a "Yoke," and Is Now Free.

George Ellsworth Russell, son of Rev. William H. Russell, of the M. E. Church of Garnersville, N. J., has been granted a decree of separation from Jennie Marguerite Russel on the ground of desertion.

The papers will be signed to-day by Master in Chancery Crouse, of Jersey City. Both young people are well known. Mrs. Russell belongs to a prominent Brooklyn family.

The case attracted attention because of the novel defense presented by Mrs. Russel. She made no effort to defend the suit, but sent to the Master in Chancery this statement:

"After I had left my husband I found what freedom from marriage is. It was a desirable change for me. I would not get back into the yoke again after learning what real freedom is."

The Justice said in his ruling: "It is evident from the evidence that the defendant had a violent temper. She was unhappy and disappointed in her married life. After deserting her husband she exhibited evidences of the enjoyment of the freedom from what she considered married life, living under her maiden name."

Mrs. Russell will not be allowed to marry again during the life of her husband. She will not get alimony. The Russells were married in 1899 and lived until their separation in 1899 at Union, N. J.

HEIRESS TO A MILLION WRITES OPERA MUSIC.

Miss Mai Bonfils, Youngest Composer of Scores for the Stage.

The youngest operatic composer in the world is a girl, little Mai Bonfils, just past her seventeenth birthday.

Since Miss Bonfils was six years old she has evinced a remarkable musical talent, which her parents have endeavored to encourage. When she was eleven years old her first composition was sung in public. The words "Tell Me Why" were composed by a newspaper man in Kansas City, Mo., and sung by one of Frohman's companies while playing in that city.

Miss Bonfils is now in New York completing her musical studies. Her home is in Denver, Col., where her father, Fred G. Bonfils, owns and conducts a large daily paper.

Although her parents, who are among the wealthiest people in Colorado, are very proud of their young daughter, they have never had published for her any of her compositions. She has sold them herself on their own merit—and spent the money. Her first operetta, soon to be produced, she has disposed of at a royalty.

Not only is little Mai Bonfils a genius, but a beauty as well. She is of medium height, full figure and of the blond type. Her blue eyes are large, innocent and childish in their expression. Her mouth as yet is a little unformed. The full red lips usually wear a pouting semblance, which does not reveal her true disposition. Her fluffy golden hair is nearly always in careless disorder. She has something of a stage appearance, and has said on several occasions that some day she would like to sing in one of her own operas.

Although heiress to a fortune amounting to something over a million dollars, she is frugal in her tastes and devotes most of her time to study.

FEARS SON IS MURDERED.

Rabinowitz Sent Missing Boy to Bank to Deposit $365.

Solomon Rabinowitz, a liquor dealer, of No. 120 Delancey street, is mourning the loss of his fourteen-year-old son Michael and $365. Both disappeared about 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Rabinowitz sent the lad to the Citizens' Bank, Bowery and Canal street, with the money. He kept Michael from school for the purpose, not caring to trust the amount with the "chore boy" in the saloon.

"I'm not worrying over the money," the father told Sergt. Tappan, at Police Headquarters. "It's my boy. Something has happened to him. He has either lost the money and is afraid to come home, or some one has enticed him away and robbed and perhaps murdered him."

The missing boy is of medium height, slim, has dark hair and black eyes, and wore a dark overcoat and new blue cap.
