"PLAYING THE GAME."

Truly, President Taft Does Not Follow System Politically.

That is a criticism often heard of President Taft. It is the professional politician usually who voices it, but often it is repeated by those who are accustomed to take their estimates of Playing the game has been the occupation of time seaving politicians from time immemorial. Men who regard politics as a game like to see it played deftly. Other men without fixed ideas on the subject parrot the criticism passed by the experts. Playing the game in politics neces sarily has deceit as its fundamental The public man who sees developing an issue might prove embarrassing to him personally, and who manages, by guile, to divert public attention to another, a lesser, but a perfectly safe, issue, plays the game. The public man who makes public protestations of his enmity toward swollen wealth and then holds secret conferences with the representatives of that wealth, plays the game. The public man who preaches one code of political morality and practices another plays the game.

The public man who utters sounding but empty phrases, no matter how delightful his diction, or how supert his eloquence, plays the game. The public man who makes prom-ises impossible of fulfillment plays the

The public man who puts the ac quirement of public favor above ideals of public service plays the game. Truly, President Taft does not know how to play the game.

It has been impossible for him to look upon public service as a game. The public's business, as he regards it, is serious business.

There is reason for the belief that the American people as a whole share with him this view. The growing intelligence of the nation is rejecting the idea that the selection of their home. public servants is merely a sporting proposition.

"SPEAK OUT! SPEAK OUT!" Try Solace At Our Ex onse

Democratie Stomacha Revolt Against Wilcon-Marshall Mush.

"Speak out! Speak out!" is the almost desperate cry of the New York World, the newspaper chiefly responsible for the nomination of Woodrow Wilson in 1912, as it was for the nomination of Alton B. Parker in 1904. Day after day, it seems, the World has been waiting with ears to the windward for some point, some virile, vital expression from its latest presidential jack out of the box on questions of the hour, some soud, positive utterance by the candidate, which it could grab and lay about with as a campaign shillelah. It has waited in vain. Rounded periods of dreary drivel, pedagogical commonplaces that might have come out of a third reader and which had about as much relation to issues of the campaign as "It is a sin to steal a pin" has to Metropolitan opera, have been fed to curious crowds and to editors waiting with whetted pens for red hot meteors of Disappointment and disgust are not confined to the World office. "We asked you for bread and you gave us a stone" is paraphrased in Democritic sentiment by "We asked you for meat and you gave us mush." Nauseated with Wilson they turned to Marshall

how to play the game.

He has been reared in at atmosphere of service rather than politics, as we have come to know politics. The thing that has always congerned him is the doing of an act, not the spectacular staging of it, nor the exploitation of it, nor, on the contrary, the concealment of it.

To serve has always been his ideal, not merely to acquire the appearance of serving.

It has been impossible for him to a stone" is paraphrased in Democritic sentiment by "We asked you for meat and you gave us mush." Nauscated with Wilson they turned to Marshall only to find him as aperient of vacuous platitudes as his coadjutor.

It's a hopeless appeal. As well try to seize the elusive tail of a greased pig at a county fair as expect to get anything definite out of Wilson. He was definite enough when he said in his "History of the American People" that "the Chinese are more to be desired as workmen, if not as citizens," than "the coarse crew crowding in at eastern ports"—that is, miningrants from Europe. He was definite enough in saying in the same book that congress had "dealt very harshly" in passing the law excluding Chinese from the United States. He was definite enough in denouncing immigrants from Poland, Hungary and Italy.

Evidently Wilson can speak out if he wants to, and the inference is that he is afraid to. On the issue of a navy powerful enough to defend the interests and uphold the honor of the thinteests and uphold the honor of the United States he is silent for fear of offending the Democratic majority in congress opposed to strengthening the navy. On the tairli he is, to quote an old comparison, "neither a man, nor a mouse, nor a long tailed rat, but more like one of those ancient Egyptian monstrosities carved on the minimum cances, with heads looking contrariwise. On one point he is definite—he wants to be president, and he doesn't care much how he get the counts upon the world and the minimum cases, with heads looking as sea of bosh to the White House, and now that he has the nomination he counts upon the world and the meased portion of the ear. There is only one way to president.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the densed portion of the ear.
