NO DIVORCE FOR SPRINGER.

Evidence Against Bookmaker's Wife Not Sufficient.

The absolute divorce asked for by Philip G. Springer, from his wife, Olga M., to whom he was married on April 16, 1894, was denied to-day by Justice MacLean, in the Supreme Court, on the ground that the testimony submitted was insufficient.

It was the story of Katie Tyor, a servant in his employ, who swore that Edgar A. Mayer, of No. 4 West Twenty-seventh street, frequently visited the defendant at the Springer home, No. 317 West Fifty-eighth street, and that in the summer of last year Mrs. Springer left, saying she would not remain with her husband any longer.

At Mr. Mayer's request, the servant said, she called at his apartments, where she saw Mrs. Springer and took home some soiled clothes. She said she saw Mayer kissing Mrs. Springer before leaving home.

Mr. Springer is about thirty-five years old. He is known as a daring speculator, and inherited about $600,000, which he increased to half a million, when his luck changed. He then became a bookmaker. He was subsequently associated with "Morrie" Isaacs and "Lou" Goodwin.

Edgar A. Mayer, the co-respondent, is well known in sporting circles, and the first trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Springer originated when Springer met his wife and Mayer going to the Sheepshead Bay race track.

The meeting took place at the East Thirty-fourth street ferry. The couple had just stepped from a carriage when Springer attacked Mayer, whom he knocked down. Mrs. Springer disappeared during the scuffle.

Springer has an action pending against Mayer in which he seeks to recover $50,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections. The plaintiff testified that his wife left him on July 4, 1900.

RICH MAN HELD LIKE A PAUPER.

Because He'd Only One Arm Merchant Went to Ellis Island.

There was taken to Ellis Island to-day by the immigration authorities Albert Priestman, of Philadelphia, who arrived as a cabin passenger on the White Star steamship Germanic.

Although Mr. Priestman is a merchant of standing in the Quaker City, and has lived there with his family twelve years, he will be required to explain to the Board of Special Inquiry why he is not likely to become a public charge.

Dr. H. H. Stearns, of the United States Marine Hospital service, who went down to-day to examine cabin passengers on the Germanic, ordered Mr. Priestman held for further investigation, owing to the fact that the passenger has lost his left arm. He was held under a section of the immigration law, which authorizes the detention of passengers physically incapacitated from manual labor and likely to become public charges.

Mr. Priestman, when notified by the authorities that he would be held for examination on Ellis Island, was indignant and appealed to Purser H. B. Palmer, of the Germanic, and to Col. G. H. Storey, Deputy Customs Surveyor.

Mr. Palmer appealed to the immigration authorities, but they informed him that they could do nothing, as Mr. Priestman, though a resident of this country for twelve years, had never renounced his allegiance to Great Britain, and was an alien and subject to the immigration laws.

Col. Storey assisted Mr. Priestman in having his baggage passed and properly marked by inspectors. He said that he could do nothing in the case. Mr. Priestman was released last night and remained in charge of the steamship officials until to-day, when he will be examined by the Board on Ellis Island.

Dr. H. H. Stearns, of the Marine Hospital service, when questioned today about the hold-up of Mr. Priestman, said that the doctors of the marine service were only supposed to examine passengers as to their physical condition, and that whether a man had one million or one thousand dollars in the bank was not for them to determine.

"In examining the cabin passengers," he said, "I noticed that Mr. Priestman had lost his left arm. I simply certified to that fact and notified the officers of the steamship and the immigration officers."

GORED TO DEATH BY A BULL.

Farmer Invited His Tragic End by Wearing a Red Bandana.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 5.—Jeremiah Sommers, a well-known Middleport farmer and raiser of prize cattle, was gored to death by his pet Jersey bull Hannibal last night.

The bull was considered so gentle that his children played with it. Last night, when Sommers went to feed the animal he wore a red bandana twisted around his neck, this infuriated the beast and he commenced to bellow and paw the floor. Sommers made for the door, but the bull was quicker, and lowering his horns, tossed the farmer to the ceiling and backed against the door, fastening the spring lock. Again and again the maddened animal charged on the unconscious farmer's body and finally impaled him upon his horns, where rescuers found him, dead.

MAYOR AWAITS CHARTER BILL.

Senate Messenger to Deliver It at Democratic Club To-Night.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, April 5.—Mayor Van Wyck will have in his possession the Greater New York Charter revision bill by 8 o'clock to-night. Senate Clerk L. G. Decant left Albany on the 2.35 train this afternoon with the bulky document in his possession. It numbers 1,165 pages, an increase over the original bill of 29 pages. This increase represents the text of the amendments offered in both Houses.

J. B. Lyon, the State Printer, had a force of ninety men at work from midnight until morning getting the document out.

Had it not been for Gov. Odell's four emergency messages the reprinted bill would not have reached Mayor Van Wyck until next Wednesday, the constitution providing that it must remain on members' desks in its final form three days before passage.

Clerk Decant will meet Mayor Van Wyck at the Democratic Club a few moments before 8 o'clock. The Mayor telephoned to-day to Mr. Decant that he had arranged to give him a special audience.

It is expected that a number of the Mayor's political friends and minor city officials will be on hand when Clerk Decant arrives to witness the "ceremony" of handing to the Mayor the most bulky legislative document ever passed by a Legislature affecting New York City.

BLACK EYE IS FATAL.

Cab Driver Was Struck by a Negro and He Died in Two Days.

Anderson Baker, twenty-nine years old, a colored steward on one of the Old Dominion line steamers, was arraigned in the Tombs Police Court today, charged with the murder of William Nesbit, a cabdriver, who lived at No. 53 Bedford street.

Nesbit was with his cab last Sunday afternoon near the Old Dominion docks. The negro came off the boat and when he neared Nesbit the two quarrelled. This ended in the negro striking Nesbit under the left eye.

Baker was arrested. Nesbit had his eye dressed by a surgeon in the Hudson Street Hospital, who considered the bruise a slight one.

Monday morning the cab driver's condition was serious. He died yesterday. Baker, who was discharged when Nesbit did not appear Monday, was arrested immediately after the latter's death yesterday.
