FEW BIG COLLEGES HAVE CLEAN SLATE

LITTLE TEAMS HAS SMALL TROUBLE IN SCORING ON LARGE COLLEGES.

OLD KICKERS ARE THE BEST

Few Kickers in Modern Football Can Equal the Stars of the Olden Years.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—As the football season progresses the frames of the moderators of both the east and middle west are finding it more difficult each week to keep their wards "on the clear." Time was when the coaches finished the "big six" and "the rest" fell into their checkerboard lineup. Now if the coach of a minor institution, a good week finds their team with the coming of the so-called open game conditions changed. Starting among Yale, Harvard and Princeton in the east and Minnesota, Michigan and Chicago in the west is no longer fashionable. In more cases, however, the teams are made up the regular route and as an aid to the personal learning ability of the player than to the team as a whole.

During the early part of the present season such games were frequent and the manner in which the home rooters scoring on the big varsity elevens led to a discussion at a university club as to whether the modern kicker was more prominent in the offensive part of football play than in the past. It was the consensus of opinion among the coaches former football stars personal that, while the ability of the average college drop kicker had advanced, the famous punters and kickers of the past were in no danger of being the laurels to which their brilliant performances entitled them.

In order to prove their contention the old-timers quoted some authenticated field goals scored from drop and placement kicks that startled the commoners about the latter. It was argued that the 87-yard drop kick field goal made by Pat O'Dea of Wisconsin in 1898, formed the record for the method of scoring, while J. T. Hazell of Princeton held the record for a goal from placement with his 65-yard score against Yale in 1882. J. V. Cowling of Harvard was credited with a 55-yard field goal to the credit of Princeton in 1893, and J. E. Duffy of Michigan with a similar feat against Cornell in 1891. Getting down to modern times in football play records were produced to show that John DeWitt, the famous Princeton guard and kicker, scored two 50-yard placement field goals in 1902, one against Yale and the other against Cornell. Just to show that such feats are occasionally accomplished in the present game, the case of H. A. Pumpelly of last year's Yale team was cited. His sensational feat of tying the score for Yale in the Princeton game in 1912 with a drop-kick goal of 40 yards puts him well up in the list of successful field goal scorers at unusual distances. Goals from both placement and by drop kick of 45 yards and less are comparatively common. The records show that Alex Moffat, Princeton; G. Capron, Minnesota; James Thorpe, Carlisle Indian school; W. G. Crowell, Swarthmore; G. A. Watkinson, Yale; J. P. Dalton, Navy; B. W. Trafford, Harvard, and W. H. Eckersall, Chicago, all have scored not one, but many field goals from distances between 35 and 45 yards.

With international play for the Davis tennis cup assured for this country in 1914 there is already considerable rivalry between Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago for the matches next season, and a keen contest is expected when the matter comes before the National Lawn Tennis association in February.

The Longwood Cricket club near Boston, where the last challenge round for the cup was played in this country and which resulted in an English victory, is understood to be an active bidder for the matches of 1914. The Crescent Athletic club of Brooklyn, where Davis cup matches were played in 1907, is again in the field for the big event next year, while Philadelphia and Chicago are anxious for a chance to see the International preliminary or final matches.

Judging from present information the United States National Lawn Tennis association will have at least seven challenges to consider at the annual meeting to be held within the next three months. England, Australia, Canada, Belgium and Germany are all said to have announced, in an informal way, their determination to challenge. France, Mexico, Switzerland and South Africa are also possibilities. The attitude of English tennis officials is pessimistic, so far as a winning outlook is concerned, but they have gone on record as having that regardless of their forlorn chance, they will send a team to this country next summer.

The trouble with English tennis at this time appears to be the lack of youth and natural playing ability among the leading representatives of that country. A famous tennis authority in discussing the situation and outlook said recently: "None of the present top rankers is a natural genius like Renshaw, Doherty or Pim. Mr. Parke, like Mr. Ritchie and S. H. Smith in a previous decade, has reached his present position by exploitation of muscle and stamina, aided by dogged will. Other exponents of a similar character are doubtless in the making, and when they arrive we shall hail them, as we do Mr. Parke, and those who model their game on his lines, as international representatives. But, if we are wise, we shall continue to look for the talent which has the hall-mark of youth and natural ability to commend it."

With the passing of baseball and football the followers of sport are turning their attention to forms of indoor competition popular during the winter months. There is already much activity evident among the hockey players and the indications point to a season of unusual popularity for the Canadian game. In those cities where artificial rinks or freezing weather insures the schedule makers are busy preparing long lists of exhibition and championship playing dates.

Plans are under way for the opening of the amateur league seasons in New York, Boston, Syracuse, Cleveland, St. Paul, Montreal and Toronto, and the managers of the various college sevens have already booked a number of exhibition and inter-varsity matches.

The Intercollegiate Hockey league appears unlikely to be revived, but Yale, Harvard and Princeton will play a round-robin series of three games against each of the two other colleges and both Cornell and Columbia will have sevens on the ice. Harvard will meet some of the best of the Canadian amateur teams at the Boston rink and there will also be several international matches at New York between the leading athletic club sevens and those of the Canadian amateur organizations. Yale and Princeton players expect to make the usual Christmas holiday trips to Cleveland and other middle western cities, playing exhibition games against local teams and possibly several inter-varsity practice matches.

MARKETS

COTTON

New York Futures.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The cotton market was less active and seemed to be rather nervous and unsettled as a result of realizing or selling for a reaction after the excited advance of last week. Weather and crop reports were generally considered of a bullish average but did not seem to inspire much fresh aggressiveness for long account and the talk around the ring reflected a more reactionary sentiment. Closing prices, however, were very steady and while prices were 11 to 14 points net lower on October and November, later deliveries showed losses of only 1 to 3 points for the day. December contracts made new high records for the season at the opening, selling at 14.12c or $6.20 per bale above the low level of October 15.
