Happy little children whose summer means unlimited digging in clean sand by the sea hardly seem to belong in the same world with the tenement babies.

The work of The Evening World's free physicians has done much to lighten the children's lot. This work has largely been made possible by the contributions of the public, but there must be more of these contributions before the relief can reach all. There are at present hundreds of sick babies whom no one has visited, and who, since the hot weather began, have known more misery than one who has not seen similar cases believes possible.

The relief consists in daily visits to the homes of the very poor, investigating the condition of the children. All contributions to The Evening World's summer charity should be sent to "Sick Babies' Fund, Cashier of World, Pulitzer Building, New York City."

The Bath Beach Benefit.

The benefit for The Evening World's Sick Babies' Fund, to be held at the Manhattan Music Hall, Bath Beach, Thursday evening, July 18, is a much-talked-of affair at that lively seashore resort. The society element has interested itself greatly in the benefit, which is an assured success.

"With Best Wishes."

To the Editor of The Evening World:

Inclosed herewith we beg to hand you the sum of $5.68, the proceeds of a fair held on Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, for the benefit of the Sick Babies' Fund. Kindly accept same with our best wishes for the poor sick babies.

Mabel Muller, Warren Glacell,
Mamie Mangler, Mary Von Thun,
Lillie Evertz, Lulu Soelke,
Willie Ohle.

Proceeds of a Fair.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

A fair was held at No. 331 Gates avenue, Brooklyn, by Miss Irene Terry, aged ten, and Florence Cox, aged fourteen, on Friday, July 5, 1901, at which $2 was raised for the benefit of the Sick Babies' Fund.

Irene Terry, 10. Florence Cox, 14.

A $1.10 Stand.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

Rose Seiden, Henrietta Greenberg, Dora Greenberg, Lena Seiden, Samuel Rothschild had a Sick Babies' Fund stand on the corner of Eighty-eighth street, and you will find $1.10 inclosed.

MRS. BROWN IS DEAD.

Was Wife of United States Supreme Court Justice.

DETROIT, Mich., July 11.—Gen. H. M. Duffield received a cablegram from Justice H. B. Brown of the Federal Supreme Court, announcing the death of Mrs. Brown in Italy. The cablegram was dated Riva, in that country.

Mrs. Brown had been an invalid for some years, and the Justice sailed for Europe very soon after the decision in insular cases was handed down. Caroline Pitts was Mrs. Brown's maiden name, and she was a daughter of Samuel Pitts, well known in Detroit.

SPENT TOO MUCH OF WIFE'S MONEY.

Sister of Mayor Harrison Will Seek Dakota Divorce from Her Husband, Barrett Eastman.

MRS. BARRETT EASTMAN.

The sister of Mayor Carter H. Harrison, of Chicago, Mrs. Barrett Eastman, is in South Dakota, where her friends say she will make application for a divorce.

A younger brother, William Preston Harrison, who attained fame by living with a tribe of wild savages in Africa a few years ago, is there with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Eastman were well known in New York, where they became prominent figures in the younger married society set, renting the house at No. 83 East Fifty-sixth street.

Mrs. Eastman was Miss Sophonisba Harrison, daughter of Carter H. Harrison, the elder, who was assassinated by an insane man in his home, on Ashland avenue, Chicago.

Eastman is a newspaper man. He has been employed on the San Francisco, Chicago and New York papers. His father was a former postmaster of Chicago. Mr. Eastman was engaged to Miss Havemeyer, of Riverside, daughter of the sugar magnate. He was placed in charge of Mr. Havemeyer's St. Paul office, but owing to his dislike to commercial work the engagement was broken.

He was married to Miss Harrison in St. James's Church, Chicago, Dec. 5, 1896. The wedding was one of the fashionable events of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Eastman went abroad, remaining some time in Paris, where Mrs. Eastman's beauty attracted much attention.

It is said that the trouble leading up to the divorce proceedings is one of money only. The friends of Mrs. Eastman say that her husband has made such serious inroads on her fortune that she fears if allowed to continue he will exhaust it. It was therefore deemed advisable that a permanent legal separation would be better for both.

SPATE SAYS HE'LL FIGHT TO THE END

Pay-Chair Man Defiant and Praises the Offer of "Big-Hearted" Mr. Clausen.

Oscar F. Spate, the projector of the pay-chair system in public parks, is only 5 feet 2 inches tall, but he is big with indignation to-day and full of fight. He does not intend to sacrifice what he considers his just rights and has given exclusively to The Evening World the following statement regarding his position:

BY OSCAR F. SPATE.

Though I have been the object of unwarranted abuse and my business project is jeopardized I intend to fight in the courts until every legal means is exhausted. Matters have gone to such an extent that I am forced to protect myself.

The plan is a legitimate business one and I worked for a year to perfect it. It has cost me $5,000 thus far, but the prospect of losing this money does not alone influence me to make a determined fight. I am a citizen and I am going to obey the demands made upon me by the public.

I have received hundreds of letters from all manner of people who insist that the plan is a good one and that such chairs are needed. I am fighting for these people as well as myself. Any one who gives the question fair and temperate consideration will reach the conclusion that they have arrived at.

Mr. Clausen's idea of purchasing these chairs that have already been in use is all very good and shows him to be the big-hearted man that he is, but that would not reimburse me.

My contract was drawn by the Park Commissioner and my lawyer feels that it cannot be revoked in the manner proposed by Mr. Clausen. I am fighting for a principle, and until the courts decide that my contract can be revoked I am still in this business.

The people want the chairs. Public parks are for the rich as well as the poor, and the rental of chairs is entirely optional.

I have about 500 chairs now that are in use, but my contract calls for 3,000, and these have been completed. The chairs cost $5 each. They are coming in every day and going into storage pending a settlement of the matter.

The people will have the Spate chairs unless the courts decide against me. I cannot tell what my position will be until the injunction proceedings are aired in court next Monday.

I have been accused of many things, but my position in the matter is right, and I intend to hold by it until I have no other recourse in law.

At the meeting of the Park Board the injunction obtained last night from Judge McAdam was served on the three Commissioners. Commissioners Clausen and Moebus received their papers without comment. Commissioner Brower said:

"This is a piece of stupidity to serve me with these papers. I have nothing to do with any borough but Brooklyn and Queens and we have no Spate chairs over there."

TROUBLE OVER YANKEE BULLET.

Germans Want Damages for the Shooting of a Soldier.

PEKIN, July 11.—Correspondence still continues between the American and German military authorities regarding the soldier who was shot at the German Legation over a month ago.

Major E. B. Robertson, who is in charge of the Legation Guards, refuses to admit that the shot which hit the soldier was the same as the one fired by the American sentry.

He asked permission to send his own doctor to examine the man. Gen. Von Trotha refuses to allow this until the claim for damages is admitted.

Sale Begins To-morrow Morning at 8 o'Clock

At Our Broadway Store Only, 279, 281, 283 BROADWAY, Near Chambers St.

NOTE.—About a month ago we bought this entire stock and placed it on sale at the Thompson stores in Philadelphia at half the Thompson prices. For almost half a century no clothing name in America has stood for better cloth, for better workmanship, for fuller, fairer value than the name of E. O. Thompson's Sons, Philadelphia. Half price for such a stock meant the biggest opportunity Philadelphia had ever known. As a result their stores were packed as no Philadelphia store was ever packed before. Vast multitudes surged and pushed and thronged through every corner of that big building, and hundreds could not get in.

But marvellously successful as the sale was—even beyond our greatest hopes—we were unable to remain until the stock was all sold. A local firm secured the lease of the store. We had to vacate to give them possession. We decided to move everything to our Broadway Store at once. The stock is arranged on the second floor. The sale of it starts to-morrow at 8 A. M. Of course the cream of the stock has been skimmed—not in quality, but in quantity, for all the offerings are good, substantial values. Although many lots and sizes are broken, yet assortments are still great enough for every man to be fitted and pleased.

NEW TURKISH MINISTER'S TRIALS IN NEW YORK HOTEL.

Difficulties He Encounters in Making Himself Understood.

When the bellboys pass room 169 at the Fifth Avenue Hotel most of them run. This is because a stately woman with a green gauze veil about her head is likely to come to the door and speak wonderful words. She is Mme. Bey, mother of Chekib Bey, the new Turkish Minister, and she cannot believe that American bellboys do not understand her when she issues Ottoman commands.

Chekib Bey, the Minister who is to succeed Ali Ferrough Bey, the retiring Minister, arrived in New York on Monday with his mother, two little sons and a servant. Not one of them speaks a word of English. Chekib Bey, however, speaks French, and they sent for the head waiter, and the head waiter nearly got an under secretaryship there in the dining room because he speaks French, too.

Of this Mme. Bey knew nothing because she did not leave her room. The two days of the Minister's stay he was buffeted between the Turkish desires of his mother and a world that would not understand him.

Yesterday he went to Washington, and all the trouble began. Before he left he hung long in consultation with all the French-speaking people about the hotel. This thing troubled him: His mother and his little sons—how were they going to eat while he was away? They might order all day at random from an alien English menu and hit upon nothing but soup and preserved ginger. It was a problem the Minister had never encountered, and he wrung his diplomatic hands. The hotel people helped.

"Write," the cautious clerk suggested in French, "on a piece of paper these words in Turkish: 'Breakfast, luncheon, dinner, supper.' These are our four meals, American plan. Write 'waiter' at the top. Now, tell your mother to ring her bell, and when the bellboy comes she must point to 'waiter,' and the waiter will come. Then she can point to whatever meal she wants, and it will come, too."

The radiant Minister did as he was told and went to Washington. But they all forgot that "breakfast" in Turkish, which is "rinshabi," or something like it, might just as well be dinner to Turkish people so far as distinction in dishes is concerned.

The second day Mme. Bey tired of arbitrary names of things, and when the waiter came at 8 A. M. she paralyzed him by pointing to "Dinner." He gasped. She did not understand. He pointed to "Breakfast" in the Minister's careful hand. But Mme. Bey shook her head. "Dinner," the finger with the wonderful carved rings indicated, and dinner it had to be; got up, nobody knows how, and served in Room No. 169 at 9.30 o'clock in the morning.

Her revolt was so successful that Mme. Bey has tried again. To every bellboy she sees she gives a new command. She goes freely about the hotel corridors, and yesterday afternoon she went out for a drive. She was dressed rather like an American woman, in a black skirt and bonnet, with a heavy black lace shawl and an ordinary veil of black lace.

She came to the door of her room this morning to "speak" to an Evening World reporter. What she said, with hands outstretched, was simply "Turk, Turk," in a puckered little accent. Then she said an earnest flight of words and waited expectantly for a reply. She was wearing a short skirt of gray and a straight dressing sacque of beautiful coarse old lace. About her head was twisted a bright green veil, not even covering her forehead. Her hair is not black, but brown with sudden light. She is a young-looking woman and might be taken for an American.

BARKER STILL IN THE LODGE

Members of Royal Arcanum Divided as to Convict Rule.

America Council No. 1,364, Royal Arcanum, of Arlington, N. J., has failed to drop Thomas G. Barker from membership in that organization, although the rules strictly state that members convicted of a crime shall be expelled as soon as proof of the conviction is secured.

This is especially significant in view of the fact that both Barker and Rev. John Keller, whom Barker shot Feb. 3, are members of the Arlington council.

The members are about equally divided on the all-absorbing question as to whether Barker had sufficient provocation for the shooting, and Barker's friends are paying his dues.

Rev. Dr. Mann, of East Orange, Archdeacon of the Newark Convocation, says that Mr. Keller will ultimately take steps that will bring the truth to light; that not only is he anxious to do so, but that the Church will insist on the action.

Friends of Mrs. Barker say that while she is barred by the statute of limitations from instituting criminal action against Mr. Keller she could institute a civil action for damages.
