PRODUCTION of PACKARD TWIN-SIX to be Doubled NEXT YEAR

The PACKARD TWIN-SIX ENGINE

ON September 2nd, 1919, the twenty-four thousandth Packard Twin-Six Motor Car was delivered to its owner.

It is worth noting that the engine in this twenty-four thousandth Twin-Six was practically identical with the original Twin-Six Engine introduced to the motoring world in June, 1915.

No experienced motorist will miss the importance of this fact—especially when he knows that in doubling our production for 1920 we shall still make no major change in the engine.

A basic engineering principle such as the Twin-Six embodies is not come at by chance—nor easily "improved."

The war aviation emergency, the greatest stimulus to motor engineering the world has ever known, confirmed definitely the 12-cylinder "V" type (Twin-Six) motor as a success because never before had flexibility, power and lack of vibration been combined to such a high degree in a single unit.

Most people are used to seeing cars change year after year—reflecting the faults found by owners on the road—or for the sake of "talking" points—or indicating a desire to make the owner buy a new car every season.

Established standards like the Twin-Six motor are certainly necessary—but none too plenty in the automobile business today.

* * *

To the man with a motor problem we have this to say—especially if he has been looking for a motor car which cannot be wished out-of-date overnight.

The Packard Twin-Six principle is Established—a permanent contribution to the Passenger Transportation service of the world.

* * *

With your experience with the best of other cars fresh in mind—a single drive in the Packard Twin-Six will show you by direct comparison a new standard for acceleration, smoothness, speed, comfort, safety.
